A MAYOR TELLS CHICAGO HOW TO CLEAN UP A CITY

Hoan Says Citizens Must Organize.

No city that is corrupt can be cleaned up without the people that want it cleaned up being specifically and politically organized. Without the help of such an organized force I would have been in my grave long ago.

Organized crime of a repeated nature can't exist in any city unless there is a partnership, political or financial, between the criminals and the local government.

I don't suppose there is a wetter man on the face of the globe than I am. But no mayor can afford to laugh and sneer at the prohibition law, for if the mayor begins to smile the policeman will put his hands behind his back. Nevertheless it would take the United States army to dry up Milwaukee or any other large city, for the sale of liquor is usually resumed about three minutes after an arrest is made. Personally the prohibition law is no hardship to me. I don't drink for two reasons: I am too busy and my stomach won't stand it.

The community that neglects to organize and provide clean recreation has got to pay the price in ruined girls and tough boys—crime fodder.

The $ sign has been taken out of our civic affairs and the banner of service placed in its stead.

DANIEL WEBSTER HOAN.

[For fourteen years mayor of Milwaukee, and five times elected.]

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

Milwaukee, Wis., July 26.—[Special.]—The first objects I encountered upon entering the office of the Irish mayor of Milwaukee were the current issue of the German daily, Milwaukee Herold, and a portrait in life size of the Frenchman who founded the city and was its first mayor.

Thus does the melting pot cheerily bubble from age unto age, and the product is certain heavy problems and certain large and assuaging reconcilements that rapidly are getting themselves organized.

Little more than a century ago Milwaukee started French, and half a century ago was more than half German; add now one hundred and twenty-five thousand Poles—a city in itself, a good bit larger than Posen and about two-thirds as large as Cracow—and you have the latest infusion in Milwaukee's melting pot. It does not seem to have spoiled the broth.

His Honor the Mayor.

The mayor of Milwaukee leaves his home in Cedar street every week day morning between 8 and 9 o'clock in an automobile that is neither paid for nor maintained by the city. He is usually in his office as early as 8:30 and seldom leaves it before 5.

You will recall the remark of the mid-Victorian matron at the play, who, after one of the more impassioned episodes of "Antony and Cleopatra," whispered, "How different to the home life of our own dear queen!"

There are other contrasts.

The mayor of Milwaukee has no gang, no ballad mongers, no slogan makers, no back stairs bosses, and upon occasion he fights aldermen instead of dickering with them.

As to slogans, he rolls his own, and one of them is—

"The trouble with these huge private ownerships of public utilities is that their pockets are at war with their patriotism."

Daniel Webster Hoan is a Socialist, a Methodist, an Elk, an Eagle, and a Knight of Pythias—if you can beat that for a human interest combination. His socialism seems not to be of the lunatic kind and is founded more on university acquired sociology than on personal rancors, as is the socialism of many of his brethren who love mankind but make themselves extremely odious to their fellow men—and women.

Lawyer and a Cook.

Besides being mayor of Milwaukee for fourteen years—with two more to go—Comrade Hoan has been a lawyer and was a cook. If he boasts of anything, it is of the fact that during part of his residence in Chicago he was a cook at Rector's and was accounted a good one in an establishment where all the other cooks were Frenchmen—with the rank of cordon bleu. Between the ages of 14 and 25 he paid for his keep and education by doing odd jobs in hotel kitchens and by cooking. His father was a proficient bus driver for Waukesha hotels, but not notable for thrift.

In relation to his five mayoralties.

JUST ANOTHER SCORCHER FOR CHICAGO TODAY

Breeze Gives City Brief Relief.

What the Heat Does

Some peculiar effects from the hot wave were noted in dispatches yesterday:

Down in Egypt, the Illinois Egypt, farmers who went out to dig potatoes said they found them baked, actually baked, by the heat of the sun.

In Valparaiso, Ind., the sweltering city council adopted an ordinance compelling all citizens to remove the snow from their sidewalks.

After a day of heat, intensified by unusually high humidity, Chicago last night enjoyed a welcome respite when Lake Michigan intervened with cooling breezes. They were intermittent, but sufficient to send the temperature down below the eighties.

However, unless the lake delivers again today, no hope of relief is held out by Assistant Forecaster W. P. Day of the weather bureau. He predicts "mostly fair and continued warm, with probably no change to cooler weather before Monday night."

The maximum for Chicago yesterday was 93 at 4 and 5 o'clock. The first shift in wind occurred a little after 5 o'clock, and by 6 o'clock the temperature had receded to 82, and at 10 p. m. the reading was 77.

Col. Roth Drops Dead.

Five deaths were reported. One heat victim was Lieut. Col. Charles Roth, 51 years old, 211 South Maple avenue, Oak Park, who fell dead while in the office of the Conklin Fountain Pen company at 36 South State street.

The other deaths:

PETER HOBBS, 39 years old, 24 North Sheldon street, a laborer; found dead in bed of heart disease superinduced by the heat.

MATTHEW HOFF, a tool and die inspector, 24 years old, 1539 George street; dived into four feet of water at Diversey beach, fracturing his skull and breaking his neck. He died en route to a hospital.

HARVEY W. ROBINSON, superintendent of the paraffin department of the Standard Oil refinery at Whiting; stricken with a heart attack while swimming at North Twin Lakes, Ind., and was drowned before help could reach him.

Some Heat Records.

In Illinois, season heat records were reported at Carbondale, where the temperature reached 105, and at Peoria, where the top mark was 104. Milwaukee had a maximum of 86.

Crop damage, due to the continued drought, was general throughout the middle west. T. H. Brock, Christian county farm advisor at Taylorville, Ill., announced that the weather of the last week has reduced the corn crop on an average of five bushels an acre, which would mean that the total yield for the 150,000 acres in that county had been decreased by 750,000 bushels. From Quincy, likewise, came news of "corn shriveling up and withering in the fields."

"A Million Dollar Rain."

The bright spot was Berrien county, Michigan, where what was described as "a million dollar rain" fell. Farmers of the state's parched fruit belt were jubilant. The drought had assumed serious proportions. Yesterday's was the first rain in three weeks.

"It was a godsend to the fruit belt," said County Agricultural Agent H. J. Lurkins. "Orchardists had been waiting for it to sow cover crops. In addition Berrien's huge tomato crop was in a critical condition, and the rainfall spelled the difference between success and failure."

One hundred degree weather was common in the vast area between the Kansas plains and the great lakes. At Kansas City the temperature was 102.

Showers In and Around City.

Brief showers yesterday morning cooled Chicago and its subrubs temporarily, and caused the temperature to remain in the 70's until noon, when it started climbing for the 90's. On the northwest edge of town the rain was considerable.

Lieut. Col. Roth, who was a heat victim, was widely known. He was a major in the 33d division during the world war and former chef de gare of the Forty and Eight. At the close of the war he was promoted by Gen. Pershing to lieutenant colonel. He was founder as well as commander of the Oak Park post of the American Legion. He was graduated as an engineer from Purdue university in 1901. He is survived by Mrs. Roth, and two sons, Charles Jr., 26 years old, and Raymond, 23 years old.

MELROSE PARK CONTRACTOR IS SHOT TO DEATH

Joseph Guittillo, 55 years old, a plastering contractor of 1215 North 23rd avenue, Melrose Park, was shot to death last night by his former employé, William Vanderleest, 37 years old, in the garage at Lake street and 36th avenue, Melrose Park, where Vanderleest was a hired watchman. Vanderleest's wife, who witnessed the killing, told police Guittillo had attacked her husband in a dispute over his union membership. Vanderleest and his wife were taken to Oak Park police station. The Melrose Park police said they feared Guittillo's relatives might storm their station if they held the slayer there.

BRAZILIAN STATE PRESIDENT SLAIN BY POLITICAL FOE

RIO DE JANEIRO, July 26.—(AP)—Joao Pessoa, president of the state of Parahyba and unsuccessful candidate for the vice presidency of Brazil in the last March 1 elections, was assassinated tonight in the city of Recife. He was slain by an alleged political enemy.

Joao Pessoa for months had been involved in a kind of guerilla warfare in the state of Parahyba. In a struggle between his partisans and those of the national government or of opposition deputies, many persons have been killed.

Two bandits, who walked into the Elite Inn, located a half mile west of Torrence avenue on Ridge road, near Homewood, were shot to death late last night by the bartender, according to a report received by the coroner. The report gave no further details. The place is said to be owned by one Tony Soda.

How Mary Jane Johnston, 5 months old, suffered the injuries which caused her to die Friday night in her father's arms was explained yesterday by the father, Edward M. Johnston, 36 years old, wartime aviator and employé of Paul H. Davis & Co., brokers, at 37 South La Salle street. The tragedy occurred in the Johnston apartment at 7757 Essex avenue.

"It was terribly hot Friday afternoon and I was drinking beer to keep cool," Johnston began. "When the beer supply ran out I had some wine. It got around to 7 p. m. and Margaret, my wife, said she was going out to pay her brother a call.

He Mixes Two Drinks.

"My mind was pretty foggy by that time but I remember she told me to soothe Mary Jane if she woke up. When Margaret left the house I was still hot, so I mixed two drinks of alcohol and ice water. Crazy stuff to take on a sultry night, wasn't it?

"I must have lain down, I'm not sure. Anyway there was a buzzing in my brain and finally I realized it was the baby crying. I had just enough wits left to remember my wife's last instruction. I would have had a break if the booze had killed me right there.

Takes Baby from Crib.

"Muddled as I was, I took the small bundle out of the crib and was bouncing the baby in my arms. It must have been then that I knocked over the floor lamp and broke the baby's arm. I remember she cried louder, but I swear I didn't know she was hurt.

"I stumbled towards the bedroom and tripped on the threshold. It was dark in there. It seemed queer to me, as I picked myself up and dimly realized that Mary Jane had fallen under me."

"That fall broke all her ribs," interjected Capt. Patrick McCauley, commander of the Grand Crossing police district. "Did you drop her after that? You know her skull was fractured, also."

Child Becomes Quiet.

"Yes, I suppose I did," Johnston answered. "I remember she became quiet and I felt a sort of satisfaction that I had soothed her to sleep. When my wife came home at 10 p. m. I told her Mary Jane was fine."

Johnston confessed after Capt. McCauley had vainly questioned him five times yesterday. He had previously insisted that Mary Jane, an only child, had fallen out of her crib. An inquest, at the opening of which the baby's injuries were disclosed yesterday, will be resumed tomorrow. Johnston is being held without charge and his wife is with relatives, prostrated and under a physician's care.

HOLD DRY AGENT FOR SLAYING OF 19 YEAR OLD BOY

Columbus, Ga., July 26.—(AP)—W. K. Johnson Jr., federal prohibition agent, was held here tonight following on the fatal shooting of a 19 year old boy last night. Federal and state authorities are investigating the agent's story, that the shooting was accidental.

The boy—Ray Rodgers—was killed after Johnson surprised him in the act of making delivery of a gallon of liquor. Eunice Johnson, 19, was with Rodgers when he was slain. Rodgers' wife was at home.

Johnson said the boy was shot accidentally as he and the girl struggled with him for possession of a pistol. The agent said that when he saw Rodgers drive his automobile into the back yard of the home of George Moseley, he jumped on the running board and flashed a light in the boy's face.

He said Rodgers and the girl tried to take his gun from its holster and in the scuffle the boy was wounded. The girl, however, told the police the agent fired without notice. Moseley's story was similar to Johnson's.

Father Freed; Son Hunted.

Pearson, Ga., July 26.—(AP)—Sheriff Louis White of Atkinson county was freed of a charge of slaying Palmer Corbett, 21, at a preliminary hearing here today. The sheriff's son, Deputy Ed White, against whom a warrant charging murder still is outstanding, had not been located. Corbett said Deputy Ed White shot him in the back with a load of buckshot as Corbett fled when he encountered a raiding party of officers.

Party's Chief Stands Pat on Rum and Farm

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 26.—[Special.]—Senator Simeon D. Fess [Rep., O.] as the prospective chairman of the Republican national committee will oppose any compromise in party politics on prohibition or farm relief.

With an increasing tendency on the part of the Republicans in some states to get away from a bone dry prohibition policy, Senator Fess is prepared to do everything possible to hold the party to the line followed in the 1928 campaign.

In spite of dissatisfaction over inability of the farm board to boost wheat prices, Senator Fess will resist attempts to swing the party over to a more radical solution of the problem.

Fought Equalization Fee.

Senator Fess is known as an Anti-Saloon league follower. He also has been consistently regular, voting with the conservatives on economy questions. He was the administration leader both under President Coolidge and President Hoover in the fight against the equalization fee of the old McNary-Haugen bill and the export debenture plan. He is a high protectionist and is ready to defend the new Hawley-Smoot law against all criticisms.

Inasmuch as Senator Fess has been selected for national committee chairman by President Hoover, the choice is interpreted as meaning that the President intends to rest his political fortunes on continued support of prohibition and of a more conservative farm relief policy than favored by the radicals and by some of the farm organizations.

Stands by Dry Views.

Senator Fess stands by his declarations on prohibition and farm relief as made in his address as keynote orator of the Kansas City convention which nominated President Hoover two years ago.

Senator Fess rebuked the wets in dealing with "enforcement of laws" in the Kansas City speech.

"After the expenditure of billions of money in the improvement of the conditions of existence, in the rearing of childhood, the education of youth for effective and noble living, and in lengthening the span of human life, no backward step can be tolerated upon whatever pretext which would permit a noisy minority to exploit the great mass of our population," said Senator Fess. "All over the earth, led by our own example, there has been burnt into the national consciousness the conviction that this policy and program of human conservation must not be scuttled.

Question of Life, He Says.

"It is not a question of tolerance or of liberty, but of life, both individual and national. The Republican party is ready to call the roll on this false doctrine masquerading under the mask of liberty. It is ready to sound the moral tocsin against the present campaign of a noise making minority, whether in the interest of business profit or mere human indulgence."

Says Hoover Will Run Again.

Springfield, Mass., July 26.—(AP)—Senator Simeon D. Fess of Ohio, in an interview here today, said Herbert Hoover again would be the presidential choice of the Republican party in 1932, but he declined to comment on his own rumored probable selection as chairman of the Republican national committee to succeed Claudius H. Huston. He said he was "not at liberty to talk on that subject at this time."

He said he looked for the nomination of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York by the Democrats to oppose Mr. Hoover.

The senator predicted Hoover would overwhelm all opposition as he did in the 1928 election.

26 MILLIONS LEFT TO FUND FOR OLD PEOPLE

New York, July 26.—[Special.]—James Newbegin Jarvie, financier and former member of the coffee firm of Arbuckle Brothers, who translated his ideas on philanthropy into the Jarvie commonwealth fund three years before his death on June 21, 1929, bequeathed to the fund about $26,000,000 to carry on its work of aiding worthy aged persons, it was disclosed today.

The bequest comprises the residue of an estate of between $37,000,000 and $38,000,000. Disclosure of the size of the estate and of the huge bequest to the commonwealth fund was made with the signing of a decree in settlement of the estate yesterday by Vice-ordinary Berry in Prorogatice court, Newark, N. J.

Boy, 3, Playing at Water Trough, Falls In, Drowns

James Cariro, 3 years old, 5714 South Massasoit avenue, was drowned yesterday when he fell into a trough filled with water at the rear of his home. The boy was leaning over the trough dabbling his hands in the water when he lost his balance.

ITALY LAUNCHES REBUILDING OF RUINED CITIES

Victims Are Put On Food Rations.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, July 26.—Minister Crollalanza, directing relief work in the earthquake area, this morning reported to Premier Mussolini that the official list of dead had reached 2,142, with 4,551 injured. Sig. Crollalanza warned that these figures would be augmented, as not all the ruins have been excavated or even explored yet. Identification of the dead is difficult.

The construction of the first new houses in the area will commence next week. An effort is to be made to have enough shelter to house all the 60,000 homeless before winter. The minister reported that his investigation had confirmed all the first impressions of the gravity of the disaster.

Aquilonia, a town of 3,000 people, is completely destroyed, he said, and Lacedonia, with 6,000 people, is equally as bad. Only a small section of Bisaccia remains standing.

King Praises Rescue Work.

King Victor Emmanuel, who accompanied Sig. Crollalanza yesterday and today and saw women and babies dragged away from ruins after being buried three days, expressed satisfaction with the salvage and rescue work. The king ended his tour today.

Sig. Crollalanza reports that relief work generally is proceeding efficiently, considering the vastness of the stricken area. Today he moved his relief headquarters from Rochetta to San Angelo di Lombardia, which affords better communications. Supplies are arriving in sufficient quantities now from Naples, Bari and Taranto, and the sufferers have been issued ration cards.

Evacuate 14,000 Survivors.

The authorities today decided to evacuate 14,000 men, women and children from the ruined area to relatives in towns outside the quake zone who are able to care for the refugees until the crisis has passed. Also, families with sufficient means to allow them to live elsewhere for a time will be sent out of the area.

This measure will relieve congestion in the emergency camp and lessen the drain on the emergency food rations.

Nearly all the injured have now been evacuated to hospitals in neighboring cities. Only 100 injured still remain in the improvised Red Cross field infirmary at San Angelo.

An effort was made today to reply to hundreds of thousands of inquiries from persons with relatives and friends in the quake zone. At the Foggia postoffice alone today 200,000 telegrams were received and delivered.

Cyclone Deaths Put at 27.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TREVISO, Italy, July 26.—The death toll in the cyclone disaster which swept the Piave valley around Montebelluna, in northern Italy, on the heels of the earthquake disaster in the south, was today officially fixed at 27 killed and 120 injured.

At Montebelluna scores of houses were wrecked and the church was blown down. Three are dead and 15 wounded there. Volpago, Giaveno, Bavaria, Sovilla, Nervessa, Susegana and Odereza are other towns where damage was extensive, and there are dead and injured in these places also.

Hydro-electric plants, wires and installations, which are heavy in this district, were destroyed. Militiamen and soldiers are rendering first aid, and subscriptions for the victims have been started.

CITY A MASS OF RUINS

BY NELSON PAGE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NAPLES, July 26.—Villanova is a city of dead and tragedy. Its death toll reaches 1,000 and it now tops the list of the devastated places in the Italian earthquake zone.

A mass of ruins, baked in a scorching atmosphere, and surrounded by lines of soldiers, militiamen, and civil authorities, is what remains of the picturesque city, the costumes of whose people are the most gaudy and handsome in the whole district. The podesta (mayor) was killed with his family.

This morning a child was dug from the ruins after being buried for 50 hours. It gave signs of recovery. Its father, mother, brother and three sisters were killed.

Honeymooners Lose Lives.

"Here are two young people, married only a couple of weeks, whom we have been unable to liberate," said Lieut. Grossi, military commander, pointing to a massive heap of plaster and timber which is all that is left of a three story building.

A young soldier from Villanova named Marra, who lost his father, mother and brother, dug in the ruins until he found their bodies. Then he made three coffins with his own hands, helped dig graves in the cemetery, and when the coffins were lowered he addressed his friends, telling them to be strong. Now he is helping others.

Bread lines have been formed at Villanova. There was some rioting over the distribution of supplies. There was also rioting yesterday at Ariano.

It is almost incredible how philosophically these people take their trouble. Deprived of their dear ones, whom they see crushed among the ruins, thrown in common heaps and buried in plain holes in the ground, these southern Italian peasants go their way, looking wistful and sad, but seldom complaining. They have lost their homes. Yet, all they ask for is enough bread so as not to starve, and enough cover at night against the humid atmosphere and rain. Often when severely reprimanded by the soldiers for trying to steal off with extra bread rations, they humbly beg pardon.

Inhabitants to Be Vaccinated.

The authorities at Villanova have announced that all the inhabitants will be injected with anti-typhoid and anti-tetanus vaccines. More urgent measures have been announced to guard against infections and disease.

A few miles away from the afflicted region no one would suspect the extent of the disaster. Outdoor camps have been set up, carts, barrels and old wheels serving the purpose of buildings at night. Aside from that there is no disorder, and in a few days probably those arrangements will disappear.

At Pointe Calore, near Ariano, an old man was seen fondling a lonely baby. At Grottaminarda one gets the first real scene of the mutilated regions. The people are camped in the streets.

On the wall of an old hut "U. S. A." is smeared in big white capitals. It is the residence of a man who formerly lived in the United States.

At Monteleone there was no damage or loss of lives. There is only fear for the future, which those people pass off with a characteristic shoulder shrug, accompanied by the southern exclamation "mah"—meaning, "who knows and who cares."

Rescued from Sure Death.

[Copyright: 1930: By the New York Times.]

BENEVENTO, July 26.—Desperate digging by rescue parties throughout the damaged quake region is still bearing fruit, and a few persons have been saved from beneath wreckage after having remained buried for more than three days.

In Melfi a four year old child was saved by soldiers after she had been lying for three days under wreckage. Her legs were badly crushed but she is expected to live. She wept weakly when King Victor Emmanuel laid a hand on her head and spoke to her in baby talk today. In the same hospital the king visited ten men who also were rescued from the ruins today. They are all in a serious condition but are expected to live.

Vincenzina Scarano, another 4 year old girl, was rescued in Lacedonia. Her faint cries for help were heard and soldiers immediately started digging. They found her pinned under a wooden beam, which had prevented the full weight of the ceiling from falling upon her. She is in a very grave condition. Her three sisters are still under the wreckage and are believed dead.

ITALIAN QUAKE BRINGS EPIDEMIC OF "SEASICKNESS"

ROME, July 26.—(AP)—Since Wednesday's earthquake many people in the affected zone of southern Italy have been suffering from an acute ailment closely resembling seasickness. The convulsions of the earth's surface seem to have put the digestive systems of many peasants out of order. A good deal of the nausea also is due to nervousness. The slight shocks Thursday and Friday have contributed to this.

MOVIE HOUSES DEMAND CUT IN OPERATORS

Say Many Theaters Face Closing.

Motion picture interests throughout the United States have started a campaign to reduce the number of union operators of picture machines and sound devices used in the talkies.

The Chicago announcement was made last night by Jack Miller, business representative of the Exhibitors' Association of Chicago, who notified officers of the Moving Picture Operators' union that the local theater owners desire a readjustment of the present wage agreement. Thomas Reynolds, head of the operators' union, pointed out that the wage contract negotiated last January, will not expire until January, 1932.

See Inter-union Conflict.

Miller informed the union head that unless there was some adjustment 85 per cent of the motion picture theaters in the Chicago district would have to close down. He stated this applies especially to the smaller theaters. Miller was told that Thomas E. Maloy, business manager of the operators' union, was in Europe as an American Federation of Labor delegate to the British trades union conference. Maloy is not expected back in Chicago until early in October. His arrival will mark, it was said, an inter-union conflict between the picture operators, the musicians, and the electrical workers of local No. 134, over supervision of the talkies.

Several complications have developed in Chicago over the proposed readjustment, which exhibitors declare will embody a demand for a reduction from two operators to one in the smaller theaters. At present one operator handles the projection machine, while the second man regulates the sound devices.

Early yesterday an anonymous appeal was made to Chicago newspapers to warn Ralph O'Hara, one of Maloy's assistants, not to accept invitations he had received to play golf over the week-end. The unsigned letters charged a conspiracy to kill O'Hara at one of the golf clubs.

Leaders Hold Conference.

When he first received the warnings O'Hara was inclined to believe they were the work of some crank. He consulted with union associates in the headquarters of the Moving Picture Operators' union in the Congress Trust and Savings Bank building at Congress street and Wabash avenue, and then announced he had received four invitations to play golf over the week-end.

Mr. Miller of the Exhibitors' association, after learning of the warnings, went into conference with O'Hara and Thomas Reynolds, union president, and Thomas Burke, business manager of the Theatrical Janitors' union. Miller placed the exhibitors' organization at the disposal of the union leaders in an effort to uncover the identity of the writer of the anonymous letters.

LABOR MEN IN COMMONS APPEAR DRUNK, HE CLAIMS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 25.—A charge of drunkenness in the house of commons has been placed against Labor members of parliament by Elijah Sandham, Labor member for Kirkdale, in an attack on the suspension of John Beckett, Labor member for Peckham, for seizing the mace, the symbol of the speaker's authority, during a recent debate.

"It is known that Labor members of parliament accept money from private interests and that they get drunk in the house," he said. "The leaders see nothing wrong in that or least nothing bad enough to demand their expulsion, but immediately Mr. Beckett touched the sacred symbol—the gilded toy—all the pack is in full cry and as righteously indignant as would be a pack of savages had somebody desecrated the temple of their favorite medicine man."

BODY TAKEN FROM RIVER.

The body of an unidentified man about 45 years old was taken from the north branch of the Chicago river at Grand avenue yesterday by the Chicago avenue police.

TWO CAPITAL GIRLS REGRET PRANK AS 2 MIDDIES ARE OUSTED

Washington, D. C., July 26.—[Special.]—Probably the two unhappiest girls in Washington today were Lorette Taylor and Mary Eleanor Hayden who participated in the prank which has resulted in dismissal of two midshipmen from the naval academy at Annapolis.

President Hoover yesterday signed an order expelling the youths, Lawrence L. Myatt of Quincy, Mass., and Miller S. Burgin of San Antonio, Tex., as punishment for smuggling the girls, disguised in uniform, into the mess hall. The boys were dropped from the academy today.

While it was known that the girls were daughters in socially prominent capital families, their names did not become public until today. Miss Taylor is the daughter of Mrs. R. L. Taylor and Miss Hayden of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Hayden.

The mother of Lorette, speaking for the girls, said that "both my daughter and Miss Hayden naturally are very much broken up about the turn the prank has taken."

Mrs. Taylor said the girls entered no other building than the mess hall. The clothes furnished by their escorts, disguised their feminine wearers for only a few minutes before they were detected by an officer and sent out of the hall.

The fate of several other midshipmen who sat at the table with the girls and who are confined to their rooms under technical arrest has not been made known. They are charged with a class A offense in not reporting the incident to their superiors.

DOCTOR, 54, AND HIS FATHER, 82, COMMIT SUICIDE

Indianapolis, Ind., July 26.—(AP)—Dr. John Q. Davis, 54, Indianapolis physician, and his father, S. W. Davis, 82, ended their lives this afternoon in the physician's office in a downtown building. After investigating, the coroner said it was a double suicide.

No explanation of the tragedy was offered. The father had shot himself in the heart with an automatic pistol and the son had fired a revolver bullet into his temple.

The elder man lived in rooms adjoining the physician's office. Dr. Davis lived with his wife in a north side residence.

"I did mine," read two notes, one beside each body and in the handwriting of the respective men. Added to Dr. Davis' note was, "Forgive me, Dode," believed to have been addressed to Mrs. Davis.

The bodies were discovered by the building custodian after patients who said they had appointments with Dr. Davis found his office locked. Persons in the building said they had heard no shots fired.

Warn Outboard Motorboat Owners of New Noise Law

Outboard motorboat owners were warned yesterday for the first time of the new city ordinance which imposes a $100 fine for operating with an open muffler. Under the direction of Harbor Master Agnew police in motor boats went up and down the lake shore posting placards bearing the warnings. The ordinance was passed on July 7.

PARSON DERIDES FETE TO G. B. S. BY ENGLISH CITY

Believes Councilmen Ignorant of His Work.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 26.—Clerical derision was heaped on the heads of the Malvern city council by the Rev. G. H. Tremenheere, because of the official honors planned for George Bernard Shaw. Mr. Shaw was feted for an entire week there last year as a guest of the municipality.

The minister not only considers the playwright unfit for public recognition but accused the Malvern councilmen of making a mistake through utter ignorance of Mr. Shaw's writings.

Offered Burial Spot.

"Evidently the man our city fathers delight to honor is Shaw," the minister said. "Last year he was invited to open the season of a new theater and if I remember rightly he was entertained at a public banquet. It was even said that the honor of a grave in Malvern cemetery was offered him when his path of earthly glory should be ended, but he did not altogether relish the suggestion that he too is mortal."

Making the "charitable assumption" that what the councilmen really want to do is to capitalize on the publicity of Mr. Shaw's visit, the minister pointed out for their benefit some of the most revolutionary points of the playwright's creed.

Tells Shaw's Sex Views.

He recalled Mr. Shaw's assertions that his writings are an inspired revelation and far superior to the Bible, that polygamy and polyandry should be allowed in the cases of inequalities of sex proportions and that morals should be junked because of the nature of the will to come out right in the end.

"I do not think these are the ethics the Malvern councilors want to inculcate," the preacher ended dryly.

Reminisces at 74.

LONDON, July 26.—(AP)—George Bernard Shaw, celebrating his 74th birthday today in excellent health and spirits, recalled some of the pen names he used in the 'nineties, in the days before he was famous.

One of these pseudonyms, Redsarn Wash, is merely Bernard Shaw all jumbled up. Another, G. B. S. Larking, indicated the facetiousness of the author. Amelia Mackintosh, which sounds like some mild mannered Victorian lady, was in reality the vitriolic Irish critic. The pen name L. O. Streeter was taken from the locality in which Mr. Shaw had lodgings.

As he became reminiscent of his earlier days as an author, Mr. Shaw reiterated that his best critic had always been his wife.

Sitting alongside Mrs. Shaw, a picture of perfect domestic bliss, before the fireplace of their Whitehall court apartment, he launched into a tirade against domesticity and the horrors of marriage.

DIPLOMAT WHO STOLE A MILLION FOUND IN AFRICA

Broke, He Begs Release from Foreign Legion.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, July 26.—Enlisted in the Spanish foreign legion as a private soldier under a false name, Laureano Carlos Villanueva, the Venezuelan social figure, diplomat and trusted employé of the National City Bank's Paris branch, who is charged with having embezzled $1,000,000 from South American friends, has been discovered in a tiny Riff village near Ceuta, Morocco.

Clad in a ragged uniform with torn sneakers instead of shoes, filthy and unshaven, the former Montmartre playboy was found munching his ration of frijoles from a battered tin messkit, by his Paris friend, Henri Couturier, who went to Spain and then to Africa seeking him.

Villanueva asked Couturier to try to obtain his release from the Spanish army, promising to return to Paris and stand trial and make whatever restitution possible.

"He told me he lost his head when he realized that the misappropriation of funds was detected, and boarded a train for Spain," Couturier said. "He had only a few francs left after buying his ticket and he dared not go home or ask friends for a loan. Broke in Madrid, Villanueva enlisted in the Spanish foreign legion and was immediately shipped to Morocco, where the troops are still carrying on a guerilla warfare against marauding bands of Riff rebels, all of whom were not stamped out during the campaign of 1926.

France to Ask Release.

"The terrible life in the legion, the insufficient nourishment and the long marches under the blazing sun in Africa are shattering Villanueva, who had led a life of ease and luxury. He broke down and wept, asking me to urge the French authorities to demand his release on extradition, saying that he prefers a jail sentence to the filth, degradations, hardships and danger in the legion."

Couturier laid the story before the examining magistrate here, who announced that he will ask the ministry of foreign affairs to request the Spanish ministry of war to hand over Villanueva for extradition.

M. Munoz, proprietor of a garage, has filed another complaint against Villanueva for $128,000 which he says he entrusted to him and which the Venezuelan spent.

THEATER LEAGUE, FOE OF TICKET SCALPERS, CALLED A MONOPOLY

New York, July 26.—[Special.]—State Attorney General Hamilton Ward was asked today to bring proceedings in the Supreme court here to dissolve the League of New York Theaters, Inc., recently organized to curb speculation in theater tickets. The league is charged with being a monopoly operating in restraint of trade and with violating the general provisions of the state general business and corporation law.

Complaint was made by Bernard H. Sandler and William R. Willcox, attorneys for twenty-three brokers who assert they are not on the league's accredited list and are unable to obtain tickets for attractions in the league theaters.

1,100 'GINGER JAKE' VICTIMS IN BONE DRY KANSAS

And They Blame It All on Wicked East.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Wichita, Kas., July 26.—[Special.]—Prohibition is jake in Kansas. State medical authorities report 1,100 ginger jake paralytics in the state, 500 of them in Wichita alone, and as yet no cure is known to medical science. The doctors and the chemists are still searching for the causes and the remedy of the malady, which, according to the prohibition department, has left about 15,000 cases in the country without use of their legs, arms, and feet.

In Topeka a few days ago the federal grand jury indicted 197 persons in 8 true bills. The jury is to return next week for further investigation of the Jamaica ginger traffic. Some eastern manufacturers and distributors have already been indicted. The laboratory experts are still working with their test tubes on a theory that the alcohol in the Jamaica ginger which produced the ginger "jake legs" was recooked industrial alcohol.

Look for U. S. Poisons.

They have a theory that in the redistilling some of the poisons prescribed in the federal denaturent formulas were still left in the alky. The investigation is reported not finished as yet, and it throws open a question whether the jake paralytics are victims of "Uncle Sam, poisoner."

The Wichita health authorities take the laboratory view that the crippling poison was in the ginger root and not the alcohol. Dr. R. E. Hobbs, head of the city health department, after many tests, holds the theory that the demand in recent years for Jamaica ginger under Volsteadism had led to the use of a root from Santo Domingo similar to the real ginger root, but which has paralyzing effects.

Meanwhile, with 500 Wichita victims in their homes and in the institutions, flopping on canes down the street in a pitiful dance, being carried into automobiles, some of them bedridden, others just able to navigate, the drys in Kansas are still making an art of hypocrisy.

Drys Blame Horrid East.

For fifty years Kansas has been the great rallying ground of the trumpet blowers of the millennium. One strange phase of the ginger jake epidemic is that the state seems less concerned over the pitiable state of the victims and their fate than it is in trying to demonstrate that Kansas has been led astray by the forces of evil from outside. The professional Kansas theory is that "eastern manufacturers were responsible for all of the jake paralysis in Kansas." The saintly member of the family has been led astray, and the old garden of Eden line is pulled—"the woman gave me the apple."

What turned the drinkers most largely to jake, it seems, was the federal raids that dried up speakeasies and put the liquor traffic for a time on the gallon or case basis. The man with half a buck to spend for a drink was out of luck, while the citizen with ten dollars had no trouble in getting a gallon of moonshine or mountain dew made by the experts in the southeastern part of the state.

Result Was "Jake."

So the 50c trade went to Jamaica ginger, the old stomachache remedy, available in bottles with labels saying "88 per cent alcohol." Tremendous quantities were consumed in drug stores. Soda fountain parties became a fad—three-quarters of a glass of soft drink with a floater of jake on top.

One authority here maintains that the do gooders, addicted to the idea of regulating customs by law, made conditions worse by requiring prescriptions for jake. This meant a suppositious $2 fee for a prescription, and as usual it meant bootlegging and surreptitious sales, and threw the door wider open for inferior goods, the alky cookers "in the east" diverting some of their energy from the production of bona fide aged Scotch to jake.

The victims lost use of their hands. Their fingers bent like claws, the muscles atrophied. Their feet was affected, their toes dangled down as they walked, and to keep from falling they lifted their feet high and slapped them down, like a slow motion buck dancer. In some cases, one jake party was sufficient to produce a victim.

One Woman's Hard Luck.

They tell here of one woman of high social standing who has not been seen in public since a bridge party at which jake was served. A high school boy is bedridden—one party at a soda fountain. In all, 500 victims in a city of 100,000 population—and the medical profession is faced with the question—"Can any of them recover?"

Hopes of "Jakeitis" victims that they might collect damages from druggists who sold the paralyzing jake were dashed today by Judge Thornton W. Sargent, president jurist of the District court, who sustained a demurrer in a test case for $37,500 against a local druggist. On the strength of the ruling throwing the case out of court, suits on file involving $200,000 probably will never come to trial. It is figured that had the demurrer been overruled, Jake suits involving a million dollars would have been filed.

In the test case, counsel for A. K. Killgrove set out that he became paralyzed from drinking three or four bottles of jake and that the druggist who sold it had violated a city ordinance by selling more than two ounces, and for beverage instead of medicinal purposes. Lawyers for the druggist held that although the druggist had violated the ordinance, it was with collusion of the buyer, and that in a case where there is mutual violation of law by both seller and buyer, the seller cannot be held liable for damages.

Oklahoma Is Jealous.

Another illuminating note on thought processes in the dry-wet prairie belt: Oklahoma City, center of the Democratic anti-Smith movement in Oklahoma two years ago which gave the state to Hoover by 175,000 is setting up a howl of professional jealousy. The cry is that their village is entitled to publicity on jake even more than Wichita. That Oklahoma City has had a bigger ginger jake epidemic and is said to have about 600 victims, yet hasn't got into the headlines.

The effect of the raids which helped precipitate the jake trouble here is blowing over. Speakeasies are reopening in Wichita. Although the town is not as merry and wide open as a year and a half ago when money was more abundant, likker is not so difficult to obtain, gambling is returning, hijacking is back in vogue in the countryside, and some "Canadian" stuff is being run in, while as for the mountain dew $10 gets a gallon of smooth stuff from the region of Pittsburg, which tipplers here say has "not a headache in a gallon." The town is getting back toward its old liveliness and heartiness as one of the last of the "frontier towns," 1930 model.

SHUFFLED BABES TOSSED ON LAP OF MOTHERS' JURY

Massmeeting Proposed to Arouse Interest.

The furor over the Watkins-Bamberger baby mixup yesterday assumed certain aspects of comedy. "Mother instinct" was invoked by Barratt O'Hara. Attorney for William Watkins, father of one of the disputed babies, to settle the puzzle. A "jury" of mothers was called into the case where science and law had failed.

After an afternoon's conference in the attorney's office at 100 North La Salle street, at which mothers who had answered Mr. O'Hara's invitation to be present differed somewhat as to just what the meeting was about, Mr. O'Hara repaired to a quiet spot with his client. There they met Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bamberger, and the baby now in the possession of the Bambergers. O'Hara's effort is said to be to get the parents to trade infants. Whether he'll succeed was in doubt at midnight.

Plan Huge Mass Meeting.

While the worn and puzzled parents went over the familiar ground as to which of the children born in Englewood hospital on June 30 belongs to the Watkinses and which belongs to the Bambergers, the attorney tried to solve any difficulties which stand in the way of a damage suit the parents have said they will bring against the hospital.

Earlier in the day the little group of "mother jurors" who wish to help straighten out the baby tangle laid plans, at Mr. O'Hara's suggestion, for a "big mass meeting of mothers," to number 2,000, they said, to be held soon. There was some haziness as to the precise purpose of the mass meeting, but it was considered a good idea.

"Mother Instinct" Discussed.

"This can be solved by mother instinct, where science has failed," said the chairwoman, Mrs. Grace E. Dibrell, 6219 South Park avenue, appointed by Mr. O'Hara. "And we not only want to settle the question of the babies for these poor parents, but we want to make it safe for our future children, the future children of all Chicago. We want to pass a state law protecting mothers against another thing of this kind."

Spoke up Mrs. Chester Mitchel, 7410 Merrill avenue, mother of eight children: "Well, after my first, you couldn't have fooled me. There's always such a strong resemblance."

"Mercy, yes," said another mother. "Now, with one of my babies I couldn't see where he looked like his daddy at all. But finally I noticed his thumb. It was the image of his daddy's thumb."

Plan to Debate Scientists.

One mother, Mrs. Isabel Bousquet, 7645 Sheridan road, who apologized for having only one child, then made a daring suggestion.

"We ought to weigh all the evidence of the scientists appointed by Health Commissioner Kegel," she said. "We're primarily interested in getting these poor babies where they belong."

There was an ominous silence.

"But I am sure that, as mothers, our instinct is better than anything any scientists can tell us. We're going to make up our minds, then talk to the scientists and debate it with them," the chairwoman said.

"How can you say mother instinct is enough?" Mrs. Bousquet wanted to know. "It is, in 99 cases out of 100. This is the hundredth, though. It's instinctive for every mother who nurses a baby to think it is her own. These mothers thought, of course, they had their own babies, but we can't go by that."

But the instinct of the two mothers involved, who have remained silent throughout the eight days of investigations, conferences, and posing for cameras, apparently did not matter.

"You know what I think of this meeting so far? I think it's a farce," Mrs. Bousquet said later. "Here they plan to bring these two four week old babies to a massmeeting of 2,000 women. Why, it'll be just like a circus. I thought we were going to get something done."

Ask Each for Advice.

Each woman at the meeting was asked to contribute some tit-bit of information which would help solve the mystery of identities.

"We know we will have divine help, at least," said Mrs. Dibrell.

"Well, I haven't much to say, folks, because all my children were born at home," said Mrs. Mitchel.

Mr. O'Hara then entered the room, and with a sweep of the arm indicated a man who hovered shyly in the doorway.

"Ladies, may I present to you Mr. Watkins, father of one of the babies?" he asked. "Mr. Watkins wants to tell you how he appreciates your wonderful help."

Mr. Watkins strode into the group of women amid a ripple of whispers.

"I surely do," he said.

"Now Mr. Watkins, I just want to tell you we're not going to interview the scientists, we're just going to use our mother instinct," said the chairwoman. "Won't it make you happy to have us help you, won't it make you happy to know that after a year, when you're so sure it's yours—"

"If I knew which was mine, I'd be happy," he said. "But I've lost faith in all the scientists and doctors."

"Well, if we women look at the dear babies and see which looks like you fathers—" one woman began.

"Yes, I'd have more faith in that," he said.

After the meeting adjourned and Mrs. Dibrell said she'd plan her committees,

U. S. WILL HEAR KING HAAKON ON AIR WEDNESDAY

New York, July 26.—(AP)—Radio will bring the voice of King Haakon VII. of Norway to listeners in the United States next Wednesday.

The broadcast on this side of the Atlantic, to be made by the National Broadcasting company network, will originate at Nidaros, Norway, and go by land wire to Oslo and thence to Stockholm, Sweden. Wire and cable will carry it to Berlin for transmission by short wave to the American chain.

The king's five minute talk will be the feature of a program commemorating the 900th anniversary of the founding of the Cathedral of Nidaros, and of the establishment of Christianity in Norway. The broadcast will begin at 4:45 p. m., eastern standard time, and continue for an hour. WJZ, New York, will be the key station for the network.

YOUTH SHOT BY POLICEMAN.

Leroy Durnham, 19 years old, 5000 South Dearborn street, caught tampering with an automobile by Policeman George R. Higgins of the Maxwell street station, was wounded in the leg and arm when he tried to run away.

JOHN R. VOORHIS, TAMMANY HALL CHIEF, 101 TODAY

New York, July 26.—[Special.]—John R. Voorhis, a little weary of the public birthday rejoicings he has had the last quarter of a century, celebrates his 101st birthday privately tomorrow at Pompton Plains, N. J., where he was born. It is Sunday anyway, and no time for parties and speeches and interviews, whether a man is twenty-five or 101, Mr. Voorhis told reporters.

He is 101, but still the active president of the board of elections and grand sachem of Tammany Hall, on the eve of his birthday Mr. Voorhis, who has never gotten out of step with time, went to his office swinging his cane. His friends said this was his first use of a stick.

Remembering his birthday celebrations, cameras and young women reading poems on longevity, Mr. Voorhis said to reporters:

"I repeat, it is time the Voorhis birthday celebration ceased. I'm not giving any interviews and I don't want to do so tomorrow."

PHYSICIAN BELIEVES "JAKE PARALYSIS" IS MALNUTRITION FORM

Springfield, Ill., July 26.—(AP)—"Jake paralysis," which lately has claimed the lives of many victims and has baffled medical science, may be only another form of malnutrition or avitaminosis, State Director of Health Dr. Andy Hall suggested here today.

"Most of the jake paralysis occurs among chronic alcoholics," Dr. Hall said. "This suggests that a long standing habit of drinking has left the body cells in a condition that allows them to become poisoned by substances that would not otherwise be poisonous in the doses taken."

Woman, Shot 3 Times in Quarrel Over Money, Dies

Mrs. Marie Brede, 38 years old, 2649 North Kedzie avenue, a telephone operator in the Hotel Sherman, died last night in St. Luke's hospital from three bullet wounds inflicted Friday by Sam Freeman, custodian for the Chicago Printers and Pressmen's union, local No. 3, following a quarrel in the union's office at 543 South Dearborn street. She went to the office to get money from Freeman, with whom she had been living. He is being held at the South State street station.

Honey Bee's Sting Kills Man of 49 in 20 Minutes

Sioux City, Ia., July 26.—[Special.]—Stung on the wrist by a bee late Friday, H. J. Dagle, 49 years old, died within 20 minutes, before a physician could be called.

HISTORIC MONROE ESTATE BOUGHT BY A. W. MELLON

Buys Famous Old House for His Daughter.

Washington, D. C., July 26.—[Special.]—Purchase of Oak Hill, the historic estate of President James Monroe, by Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon for his daughter, Mrs. David K. Estes Bruce, today recalled memories of the place which rivals in interest any of the Virginia country homes except Mount Vernon, the home of Washington.

Mrs. Bruce, whose husband is the son of former Senator William Cabell Bruce of Maryland, is understood not to have been in good health for some time and to be desirous of a quiet life such as Oak Hill will afford.

Paid $700,000 for Home.

The price paid for the stately Georgian mansion of brick and its surrounding 2,000 acres is said to have been $700,000. It was bought from Frank C. Littleton, a retired business man of Loudoun county, Virginia, who had it remodeled according to the original plan of President Monroe. The estate is located near the Bull Run battlefield. It is 35 miles from the capital.

Thomas Jefferson assisted in designing the mansion and a significant Jeffersonian touch is seen in its seven Doric columns, each 30 feet high. Still standing are the 200 year old cottage which Monroe occupied while the building was being erected and the brick smokehouse which still is used.

Visited by Jefferson, Adams.

Jefferson, Madison, La Fayette, John Quincy Adams, and other men whose names loom large in early American history were entertained at the estate. At a later date Stonewall Jackson stationed his wagon trains there, where he planned to make a stand should he be forced back from the second battle of Bull Run. In 1926 President and Mrs. Coolidge were guests of Mr. Littleton in the house.

The estate passed from the Monroe family to Col. John Fairfax, and in the late '70s was sold to a Dr. Quimby, who in turn disposed of it to Henry Fairfax, son of Col. John Fairfax. Mr. Littleton bought the estate from Mr. Fairfax in 1919.

Oak Hill is only one of the two famous Virginia estates owned by Monroe. The other, Ash Lawn, is near Fredericksburg. It was dedicated as a national shrine last April.

FILLING STATION OWNER IS SHOT BY BANDITS; MAY DIE

William Levy, 37 years old, 4434 Grenshaw street, owner of the Roosevelt gasoline filling station at 4254 Roosevelt road, was shot twice in the abdomen yesterday by two bandits who robbed him of $59. He is in a critical condition at Mount Sinai hospital.

No one witnessed the shooting. Levy's assistant, Arthur Rudolph, was outside the station, working in a grease pit. One of the bandits called down to him, "Come up or I'll blow your head off." He obeyed. As they were walking toward the station, Rudolph heard two shots and saw the other bandit emerge running.

"Beat it," he was crying. Rudolph found Levy stretched on the floor, unconscious. The bandits escaped.

Spies Man In His Yard; Shoots Him with Pistol

Believing the figure he saw in his backyard was that of a burglar, Earl Dodson, 21 years old, 3622 Ellis avenue, last night fired a pistol shot through the window. The bullet struck Martin Binnes, 35 years old, 626 East 35th street, a freight handler for the Illinois Central railroad. Wounded in the abdomen, Binnes was in a condition too critical to permit him to tell what he was doing in Dodson's yard. Stanton avenue police are holding Dodson.

Orchard, Slayer of Idaho Governor, Asks a Parole

Boise, Idaho, July 26.—(AP)—Harry Orchard, serving a life prison sentence for the assassination of Gov. Frank Steunenberg in 1905, during labor troubles in the Coeur d'Alene mining district, today made application for parole.

Orchard turned state's evidence against three officers of the then powerful Western Federation of Miners, accused of conspiracy in the assassination, but the other defendants were acquitted.

The Housewife's Hand
Directs A&P's buying

If you hired a personal agent to buy food in the markets of the world for your own table, you would give him, first, money for the purchase and shipping costs; second, money to cover his expenses; and, third, a salary for his services . . . You, yourself, would choose the kind of food he would buy.

That's just what you do when you trade with A & P.

Of every dollar which you pay over A & P counters, 83⅓ cents go to food producing communities* in exchange for the food you ask for.

A & P's part is to find out what you want—by what you order in its stores—and to spend your 83⅓ cents as you direct. Of the rest of your dollar, 14 cents stay in your neighborhood to run A & P stores.

All you pay A & P for its services is the remaining 2⅔ cents.

*Another article will tell you how your massed buying helps American food producers as much as it helps you—fair tit for tat.

ETTELSON TO BE HEARD BY GRAND JURY TOMORROW

His Version of Russell's Appointment Sought.

$55,825 IN REWARDS.

Rewards totaling $55,825 are offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the slayer of Alfred Lingle, Tribune reporter. Of the $25,000 reward offered by The Tribune, $10,000 will be paid to any person who will give confidential information identifying the slayer of Lingle. All information should be sent to the headquarters established by State's Attorney Swanson in room 503 Temple building, 77 West Washington street. Telephone State 3729.

Samuel Ettelson, corporation counsel, and William H. Stuart, political editor of the Chicago Evening American, are scheduled to appear tomorrow before the Cook county grand jury when the jury resumes its investigation into phases of the murder of Alfred [Jake] Lingle, reporter on THE TRIBUNE, and into charges of racketeering among several Chicago newspaper men.

Mr. Ettelson, it is reported, will be asked to state what part he took in obtaining the appointment as police commissioner of Capt. William F. Russell.

Russell's Version Told.

At the time of Russell's appointment Mayor Thompson was on a vacation in Wisconsin, and Ettelson was acting mayor of Chicago. Russell has already given the grand jury his version of how and why he was appointed, stating that when Ettelson and Ald. Bert Cronson, a nephew of the corporation counsel, urged him to take the post, he at first demurred, but finally said he would accept upon two conditions.

These were first that he be given a free hand in running the police department, and second that he be permitted to have Capt. Stege restored to duty and made chief of detectives. Ettelson and Russell then visited Mayor Thompson and the mayor acceded to both of Russell's conditions, according to Capt. Russell's testimony.

Story of Ettelson Sought.

Ettelson, it is believed, will be asked whether any other considerations were involved in the appointment of Russell, especially as to whether Lingle had any part in the negotiations.

The jurors have not disclosed what their purpose is in inviting Mr. Stuart to testify.

It is expected that the grand jury will also request the presence of other witnesses, and that following the completion of its investigations it will present a formal report to Chief Justice Denis J. Normoyle of the Criminal court.

Dispatches from St. Louis yesterday carried the news that the office of Harry T. Brundidge, reporter on the St. Louis Star, who made the charges of racketeering against Chicago newspaper men, was broken into during Friday night and papers and records ransacked.

Tom Mix Pays $173,000 and Escapes Income Tax Trial

Los Angeles, Cal., July 26.—[Special.]—The trial of Tom Mix on charges of underpaying federal income taxes and making erroneous returns, scheduled for Monday in United States Circuit court, has been taken off the calendar. Explanation was made today that the cowboy actor has paid $170,000 in back taxes and paid fines of $1,000 each on three misdemeanor charges of turning in false reports. Three felony complaints on which Mix was co-accused with Miss Marjorie Berger, income tax expert now serving a sentence, have been dismissed.

200 POLICE ARE SHIFTED BY NEW ALCOCK ORDER

Acting Police Commissioner Alcock late yesterday issued a mass transfer order, effective tomorrow, which involves more than 200 policemen, policewomen and matrons.

Most of those transferred go to the newly created miscellaneous division which already carries the names of four captains: John Stege, Richard Gill, Charles Larkin, and William P. Kennedy.

Lieut. Mike Mills is transferred from Albany Park to the staff of Acting First Deputy Commissioner James P. Scanlon. Lieut. James Scully goes from the First district to the miscellaneous division, to which Custodian Frank J. Beran is also shifted. Members of the bomb squad, boys' employment bureau, motorcycle division, the dog pound force, radio section, telephone operators, police operators, policewomen and police matrons go from their present places to the miscellaneous division, and Deputy Scanlon is placed in charge of the division.

TWO WHITES TO DIE FOR MURDERS OF SOUTHERN NEGROES

Atlanta, Ga., July 26.—(AP)—The Georgia Supreme court has decided that two young white men—brothers—must die because they killed two aged Negroes.

The court today upheld conviction and death sentence of Harvey Bradberry, Oconee county youth, for the murders of Doc Elder and his wife. Last Monday it affirmed the conviction and sentence of his brother, Wayman. Raymond Cooper, another white youth, who was tried jointly with the Bradberry brothers, was sentenced to life imprisonment.

Evidence was that the three men lured the aged Negro from his cabin and stabbed him to death last year. They then returned to his home and cut his wife's throat as she slept, according to Wayman's confession.

The cabin was ransacked and savings of the couple were stolen.

VON HINDENBURG DECREES HIGHER GERMAN TAXES

BERLIN, July 26.—Under the provisions of the dictatorial powers granted to the president by the republican constitution "in case of national need," President von Hindenburg today decreed the new budget and financial emergency laws, which impose heavy new taxes on the Germans.

Almost the entire nation is protesting vigorously. The decrees will be enforced immediately, since the German reichstag has been dismissed and Germany must elect a new one to defend its parliamentary rights.

The decrees, filling 37 printed pages, introduce increased income tax, a tax on bachelors and spinsters, a poll tax, and an increase in the beer tax, all of which were turned down by the reichstag. The emergency budget cuts down the expenses for the unemployment insurance. It provides financial help for the export trade of the German eastern agricultural provinces, but cuts down on the original allowances.

(A BUSINESS EDITORIAL)

A CARTOON AND THE CONSUMER

A cartoon published during the past week calls for an answer from merchants throughout the city. It is this writer's belief that such a cartoon could serve no good purpose and that, if anything, lengthens this period of readjustment.

Small boys are depicted as tree sitters and are labeled "retail prices" while a policeman taking the part of "supply and demand" is chasing them down. "Wholesale price" is sitting on the ground saying: "I'm down."

The cartoonist must know that business recovery will come about through consumer buying. Consumer buying is not going to be encouraged by that kind of publicity, unless entirely justified.

Let us inquire into its justification. Almost two months ago this store arbitrarily reduced the price on all but its nationally advertised merchandise, in spite of the fact that the wholesale, or factory cost, had not yet started to decline. Other progressive stores in all lines have since done likewise. Within the last two weeks the two great mail order houses announced a similar policy. Today the consumer can buy goods in nearly all lines at lower prices than any time since the war. If the cartoonist has some particular industry in mind, why not wage his battle with it?

SUBWAY WITHOUT RATTLE OR ROAR, IS CHICAGO PLAN

Engineers Seek Counsel of Acoustics Expert.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

In one respect at least, an effort will be made in the first Chicago subway design to surpass any passenger tunnel in the world. In no other subway, engineers believe, has any serious effort been made to reduce the rattle and roar. In the State street bore, between 18th street and Chicago avenue, it is planned to reduce the noise to a minimum.

R. F. Kelker, chief engineer of the subway, and Alfred Brahdy, representative of Robert Ridgway, chief consulting engineer, conferred at length yesterday and Friday with Prof. James M. White of the University of Illinois on the anti-noise methods. It is said they have about decided that they desire the services of Dr. F. R. Watson, professor of experimental physics of the University of Illinois, who is credited with being a leading authority on acoustics in the nation. Dr. Watson has made considerable progress in devising machines to record and measure sound.

A Matter of Materials.

Glass, plaster, brick and wood, which are usually found in structures, have small sound absorbing power. Steel, hard surface concrete and glazed tile, utilized in subways, are in the same class.

These hard surfaces permit flushing and therefore contribute liberally to desired cleanliness. Prof. Watson's latest book gives the impression that porous materials, which do not make for cleanliness and in some instances lack the strength desired in subway construction, are better adapted to curb noise.

In a recently constructed laboratory at Champaign, where quiet was an essential, porous concrete was used as a side wall. It is a patented material which engineers say is a concrete made of burned shale or clay which is crushed for the concrete mixture. The subway engineers are examining this as well as other materials, but they especially want the views of Prof. Watson who is now in Colorado for his health.

Tests Chairs for Opera House.

Prof. Watson some months ago made tests of six designs of theater chairs for one manufacturer. The chair he selected as having the greatest acoustic merit was adopted for the Civic opera house in Chicago. The management has further increased the acoustic advantages by the size and texture of the draperies used in the auditorium.

This is only illustrative of the tasks undertaken by the professor, and it is hoped that he can be of material assistance in curbing the noise of the subways.

He has developed and enlarged the system of noise measurement, originated by Wallace C. Sabine in 1895. Roughly, an open window one foot square has a coefficient of one, using a sound having 512 vibrations per second, one octave above middle C. By that standard the sound absorbing qualities of other materials and devices are measured.

As compared with an open window with a coefficient of one, curtains in heavy folds as in the civic opera house have a rating of .40; marble has a rating of .01; plaster of .034; plain wood of .06; varnished wood of .03; a brick wall of .032 and glass of .027.

Other Noise Reducing Materials.

In contrast the experiments of Prof. Watson show other materials which break up the sound vibrations and thereby reduce the noise. He credits acoustax, one inch thick, with a rating of .37, and an artificial stone called akonstolith with .36. Balsam wool, bare, one inch thick and twenty-six pounds to the square foot, is rated at .44; Cabot's quilt, two layers three ply, at .51; and carpet lined, .20.

Celotex of different constituencies ranges from .20 to .70, one kind of corkoustic is rated at .35; fibrolock, implanted, at .42; flaxlinum, bare, one inch thick, .61; and hairfelt, one inch thick and 75 pounds to the square foot, .58.

There are still other materials which curb the reverberations.

HADLEY PLEDGES I. C. C. ACTION ON ELECTRIFY PLEA

Ready to Accept Petition on Terminals.

The Illinois commerce commission is in a receptive mood for consideration of the immediate electrification of Chicago railroad terminals, Chairman Charles W. Hadley announced yesterday.

Taking cognizance of a TRIBUNE editorial printed yesterday pointing out that money is now available for borrowing at lower rates than in many years and that the railroads might well take advantage of the opportunity to finance improvements, Mr. Hadley stated that Chicago officials or any organization representing the public might initiate proceedings before the commission calling for electrification of the terminals.

Sees Benefits to All.

"The matter has been of great public interest for a long time," declared Mr. Hadley. "The commerce commission is not unmindful of the benefits flowing to both community and railroads by reason of electrification of the lines entering the city. While no investigation has been instituted by the commission itself, the matter has been informally discussed by members of the commission many times, without, however, any official opinion being expressed concerning what should be done or how.

"If any public official speaking for the city or any organization really representing the taxpayers of Chicago will submit the matter to us, the commission will address itself to the problem seriously and energetically."

Outlines Proper Procedure.

Mr. Hadley said that the proper procedure would be for the officials or organization to file a certificate of public convenience and necessity, pointing out the need for electrification of railroad lines within the city limits or within such limits as might be designated.

"The commission would then set the question down for investigation, determining first whether the electrification was needed; second, the character of the improvement, and third, the manner in which the improvement should be paid."

GERMANS DISCOVER METAL EATING BUGS; CAUSE PIPE LEAKS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, July 26.—A new kind of metal eating bug believed to be to a large degree responsible for leaking metal pipes and tanks was found by the metal research department of the Kaiser Wilhelm institute in Berlin. Investigations started when there were found in the insulating felt around a leaden water pipe several black bugs, one quarter of an inch long. Microscopic observation revealed that these insects were equipped with sawlike teeth.

The bugs were put in a glass tube, both ends tightly closed with leaden lids 1-10 of an inch thick. The insects immediately started worming their way through the lead and after 4 hours work escaped.

The experiment was repeated with pewter, which the bugs did not like half as much as lead. It took them 36 hours to break through their prison walls. Other experiments revealed that the bugs preferred to die in the glass tube rather than feed on zinc, aluminum, or brass.

Arrested as Bootlegger, Butcher Ends His Life

New London, Conn., July 26.—John Kaneen, 65, a butcher, committed suicide today rather than go to trial on a charge of violating the dry laws. Since his arrest July 17 when federal agents, assisted by the local police, raided his meat market, Kaneen has repeatedly told friends that they would never see him before a court of law.

FORD MANAGER SAYS RUSSIANS STUDY IN PLANT

Congressional Committee Coming to Chicago.

Detroit, Mich., July 26.—[Special.]—The congressional committee investigating activities of communists in the United States ended the hearing here today, and will go to Chicago tomorrow.

Charles E. Sorenson, general manager of the Ford Motor company, was a witness today.

"We have in our plant," he declared, "many Russians who are studying our production methods. Our relations with the soviet government have been satisfactory, and we are not ashamed of our association."

Check Kept on Workers.

The Ford Motor company, Sorenson declared, has a private police force which checks up on the activities of the workers, but the company never has had trouble with the communists. He expressed the wish, however, that a way could be found to prevent the distribution of communistic propaganda literature, declaring that he favored a secret police force to check communistic activities in the United States.

In response to questions, Sorenson said he was aware of the fact that the "Ford Worker," characterized as a communistic paper, was circulated at the Ford plant, that he considered it "harmful and dangerous," and would stop its circulation immediately if that were possible.

Sorenson reiterated, however, that the Ford company had had no trouble with communists and that no employé ever had been dismissed for radical activities.

Says Ford Aids Reds.

The Ford company had figured in yesterday's hearing when the Rev. Father Charles E. Coughlin had accused Henry Ford of unwittingly aiding in the spread of communism.

Although Sorenson expressed himself as willing to tell about his company's business dealings in Russia the committee decided such information would not be pertinent.

Jacob Spolansky, representing the metals trades association, offered documentary evidence which Representative Fish Jr., chairman of the committee, characterized as of great value in that it disclosed the direct supervision exercised by Moscow over the activities of American communists.

Spolansky said that the soviet engineers and workers, now in Detroit to gain technical information to be applied to the new industrial plants under construction in Russia, lived under the threat of summary action by secret agents if their actions displease the leaders in Russia, or if they are suspected of becoming delinquent in their allegiance to the principles of communism.

Smuggling Laid to Russian.

New York, July 26.—[Special.]—Troubles continued to pile up on the Amtorg Trading corporation, the soviet commercial agency in this country, today. While the treasury department in Washington was enforcing its embargo on the importation of soviet pulpwood and threatening an embargo on other Russian products, federal authorities here unearthed evidence of smuggling by an employé of the Amtorg and of other subversive soviet activity.

Two men arrested for smuggling 15,000 watch movements into this country declared that the contraband was the property of the Amtorg.

The men arrested for smuggling are Jacob Ereitz, 42 years old, alias Fresman, alias Albert, of Woodside, Queens, and Abraham Schafren, 62 years old, of Brooklyn.

RADIO GETS ON SINGER'S NERVES

Mme. Ada Paggi, opera singer, whose objections to radio playing by Glencoe neighbor at 6 a. m. took the form of a flower pot hurled through the window after unsuccessful pleas to police.

OPERA SINGER RESENTS 6 A. M. RADIO MUSIC

Displays Her Emotions with Flower Pot.

BY KATHLEEN McLAUGHLIN.

"Music hath charms," and the last to deny it would be Mme. Ada Paggi, mezzo soprano with the Ravinia Opera company, also of the Chicago Civic opera. Mme. Paggi, however, prefers to decide for herself what she shall hear, and when she shall hear it.

Six o'clock of a summer morning, and a stentorian band selection pouring in through her bedroom window from a neighbor's radio fails to rouse her to any enthusiasm. In fact she so resented the music at that hour yesterday that she punctuated the radio program of her next door neighbor at 589 Vernon avenue, Glencoe with an accurately aimed flower pot.

Lands on Neighbor's Rug.

The missile shattered a window sash and landed smack on the center of the neighbor's living room rug. Nor was she penitent about it.

"I am so—so—exasperated," explained the artistic little Italian last night. "I have asked them and asked them to let me sleep in the mornings. So late I sing at Ravinia, it is midnight when I get home, then for two hour I cannot sleep because my mind is so active. At 8 o'clock I must get up and at 10 I must rehearse at Ravinia, and I need my sleep."

It developed from questioning that the neighbor in the case is Mrs. Walter Schultz, who has two sons, and that the sons like to make their morning toilets to the tune of the band numbers—with the loud speaker in operation.

Sought Police Aid, Claim.

The house rented by Mme. Paggi and two other Ravinia singers is just across a narrow grass plot, at 595 Vernon avenue. Mme. Paggi yesterday asserted she had remonstrated twice through the police department without getting any result.

Mrs. Schultz informed the Glencoe police she would sign a complaint against Mme. Paggi, but had not done so last night. A caller at the Schultz home failed to obtain any response, nor was the telephone answered.

Canada Votes Tomorrow; Issue Is Tariff Against U. S.

BY GEORGE SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

OTTAWA, July 26.—On the eve of the Canadian election to be held tomorrow betting favors the return to power of the Mackenzie King Liberal government which has ruled the dominion since 1921. Conceded probable gains in Saskatchewan and Ontario, the Conservative opposition group is not expected to make any impression on Liberalism's strength in Quebec or in the maritime provinces.

The Liberal slogan, "Bennett [Conservative leader] can't win," is prompted by these statistics: There are 245 seats in the Canadian commons. To rule Canada H. B. Bennett must secure a majority of them, or 123 seats. In the last house he had only 89. And political observers can concede the Conservative party most of its reasonable election claims and still fail to arrive at a Conservative parliamentary majority.

Conservatives Make Big Claims.

The Conservative party official forecast which has just been made public, claims for the Conservative party 134 seats, or a working majority in the ocmmons.

All told, the Conservative concede to the Liberal party under Premier King only 56 seats in the commons, where in the last house, the Liberals held 119.

Over two million ballots will be cast tomorrow for the 500-odd candidates. The campaign has been waged for nearly seven weeks now—a lengthy campaign, in which interest lagged in its initial stages, to be whipped into frenzy latterly by the increasing warmth and fervor of the election utterances by respective leaders.

When the dominion election votes commence to pile up in the ballot boxes all over Canada tomorrow they will be cast in the main on a tariff issue—the issue of whether the government was right in increasing its tariff against the United States so as to shut out an approximate $100,000,000 of American commodities, and lowering it or wiping it out against a like amount of annual purchases from Great Britain.

Except in the low tariff west, the increase in Canadian tariff against the United States seems to be accepted on all sides as the only move Canada could make in view of America's tariff increases against Canada.

Depression Is Feared.

The loyalty cry has been raised. The Liberals, who in the 1911 reciprocity campaign, were accused by the Conservatives of being "anti-British," are now in turn accusing the Conservatives of being "anti-British" because of their opposition to the tariff favors which the Liberals are extending to Britain and British empire units. Mr. Bennett, Conservative leader, has said, and he has been roundly scored for saying it, that a Canadian dollar spent in the British West Indies is no better than a Canadian dollar spent in the United States. He has said also that Canada should not have granted tariff preferences to the mother country without exacting tariff preferences in return. And this has been taken up by the Liberals as a choice bit of election fighting ground. It has been interpreted as a demand on the part of Mr. Bennett that Britons impose taxation on their foodstuffs in order to be able to turn around and give Canada a preference on the foodstuffs Canada desires to sell to Britain. The British connection issue, therefore, has come to be one of the principal controversies of the campaign.

Curtis Stops Here on Way to His Home in Kansas

Vice President Curtis passed through Chicago yesterday en route from the national capital to his home, Topeka, Kas., where he may take part in the windup of the state campaign. He was in the city only between trains and spent the interval with his son, Harry K. Curtis, Chicago attorney, who met him when he arrived.

HOOSIERS REFUSE TO STUDY BOOZE, CRIME RELATION

Prohibition a Failure, Attorney Avers.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 26.—[Special.]—By a vote of 11 to 5 and without discussion, the commission appointed by Gov. Harry G. Leslie to study crime conditions in Indiana voted down a motion made by Leo M. Rappaport, Indianapolis attorney and financier, to study the relations of prohibition to crime.

"One who wants liquor," Rappaport said in support of his motion, "can obtain it, the only difference between present day and preprohibition conditions is that the price is higher, the quality ofttimes poorer, and the consumption of strong liquors is greater. One must violate the law to obtain it."

Rappaport estimated that the output of beer now is between 425,000,000 to 630,000,000 gallons, or about one-fourth of preprohibition production, that about 147,000,000 gallons of wine, or twice the prewar volume, are produced, and that between 85,000,000 to 90,000,000 gallons of proof spirits are distilled.

"I have cited these facts and figures," he said, "for one purpose only, and that is to demonstrate that while we have prohibition laws we do not have prohibition. Prior to enactment of the constitutional amendment the leaders of the prohibition movement prophesied that prohibition would depopulate our prisons. You know as well as I do how utterly this prophecy has failed."

He said he was convinced that if all the money raised in Indiana from taxation was devoted to employment of prohibition officers, "we still would not have prohibition in fact, because the officers, in most instances, do not believe in it. People are tired of an experiment that has brought more crime, graft, and corruption than existed before."

U. S. SCRUTINIZES CHICAGO PAST OF GOLDING THE DRY

Two Shootings by His Raiders Recalled.

Two operatives from prohibition headquarters at Washington, D. C., were in Chicago yesterday investigating the past conduct of George E (Hardboiled) Golding, whose administration here as head of a band of special raiders was marked by the shooting of two citizens. After these incidents he was transferred from Chicago.

Golding is "on leave" from his post as special dry agent in charge at Albany, N. Y., while charges placed against him by a girl employé of his office are being investigated. It was reported yesterday that one of the questions asked Chicago federal officials by the investigators concerned Golding's behavior toward women.

The Washington operatives refused to discuss their investigation, but it was learned from officials consulted that Golding's history is being scrutinized in all places where he has worked as a special dry enforcer, including New York, Providence, R. I., Atlanta, Cleveland, and Milwaukee.

Golding was ousted from the special intelligence unit of the internal revenue department at Cleveland in 1927 when he tried to arrest a policeman who rebuked him for jay walking.

From the intelligence unit, which formerly assisted with dry enforcing, Golding was transferred to prohibition work and soon came to Chicago, where he acquired his hard boiled reputation. The achievements of his squad included the shooting of William Beatty, a Municipal court bailiff, in the back, and of Merle Adams, an insurance salesman.

M'DONALD POINTS WITH PRIDE TO HIS WORK OF A YEAR

Defies Foes to Question Naval Treaty.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 26.—On the eve of the rising of parliament Friday, when a sitting lasting more than a year will be interrupted for a three months' vacation, Prime Minister MacDonald, speaking at Bankhurst park today, paraded the accomplishments of the Labor government.

He pointed pridefully to the widows' pensions and challenged anybody to question that the naval pact is a tremendous step toward disarmament. He concluded with a review of the progress toward the rehabilitation of England's dying agriculture.

Baldwin Assails Government.

At the same hour, Stanley Baldwin, Conservative leader, was ripping into the Laborites in an address in Yorkshire. Mr. Baldwin forecast a general election within six months because of the increase in unemployment and the alarming decrease of exports under the MacDonald government.

"We are coming to you with our arms not so full of achievement as we would like," Mr. MacDonald said, "but you will have to exercise the same patience we are exercising. We have done a great deal and there is nothing we have done which should please you more than the matter of widows' pensions. The scheme is incomplete and there are some widows not covered by legislation. We will go on until, as far as possible, no widow or orphan will be condemned to live a life of hopelessness and sorrow because of the neglect of their country.

"The Great Question of Peace."

"Then there is the great question of peace. It is easy to pass resolutions on disarmament at the Labor party meeting, but when you meet representatives of foreign nations who are as independent as you are, nations who have inherited a tradition as a result of generations of experiences of invasions and destruction, one cannot easily wipe out these traditions.

"That is the problem we have been up against for the last twelve months. Nevertheless, I claim to challenge anybody, friend or foe, right, center or left, to deny that so far as disarmament is concerned we have made tremendous steps toward it.

Must Build New Ships.

"They tell you we have spent money building new ships. Of course we have, but the first step toward disarmament is to stop competition and if I can stop competition, even if it is necessary to build more ships for the time being, I will do so.

"We have proved that all the great means of mass destruction by guns, ships and poison gas have never given security. What we have to do is to change the nature of the weapons of security—to transfer them from material things which kill, and replace them with intellectual and moral things which secure justice."

Turning to agriculture, Mr. MacDonald declared he would be unwilling to face a general election if he had done as little to revitalize industry in five years as did the Conservatives.

Promises Farm Plan.

"Our people are going away from the soil," he continued. "The party recognizes that the maintenance of the population by direct contact with the land is essential to national life. Unfortunately, you cannot do it by simply shoving people back from the great cities. The government is working out a plan which will be produced shortly to make agriculture economically self supporting."

He concluded by blaming the cut throat refusals of the British farmers to join coöperatives.

Mr. Baldwin taxed the Laborites for their failure to settle unemployment and charged it has grown worse because of their refusal to adopt a tariff.

Baldwin Predicts Election.

"Unemployment has been a great problem since the war and it is not solved yet," Mr. Baldwin said. "When we left office the figure was about 1,100,000. After 13 months of the Labor government it is but a little under 2,000,000. The electorate will be given a chance soon to decide whether it is worth while to vote the Labor party back to power.

"The Labor party claims that unemployment is due to world conditions, but there are no more world causes today than when we were in office. By yielding to their back benches, they have struck an irreparable blow at the prosperity of industry of the country and have helped put the whole financial side of unemployment insurance into chaos."

Mr. Baldwin finished with the assertion that only protection will help industry and pleaded for an economic union of the empire, welding the dominions together as the United States is bound together.

SENATOR NORRIS OPENS HIS FIGHT FOR RE-ELECTION

Lincoln, Neb., July 26.—(AP)—Senator George W. Norris appeared before the Methodist Epworth assembly of Nebraska here tonight and made a determined appeal for support of the dry laws and denounced those who, he said, deserted the "dry camp" for the "wet camp" without giving the law a chance. The senator is a candidate for reëlection on the Republican ticket.

Prohibition in the United States, Senator Norris asserted, has been a success "when one takes into consideration all of the circumstances."

"I frankly admit, however, that there have been and still are many disappointments connected with the law. Nothing can be gained by trying to avoid the truth. We ought to face it, and if convinced that we are wrong, we should admit our error with candor and frankness."

Senator Norris did not refer to his bolting the Republican ranks in 1928 to support Gov. Al Smith for President, but privately he declared he was ready to defend that position should any one inject his attitude two years ago into the present campaign.

Hoover's Choice to Lead G. O. P.

Senator Simeon D. Fess, Ohio (left), and Robert H. Lucas, commissioner of internal revenue, who are favored by President Hoover to become chairman of Republican national committee and chairman of the executive committee, respectively, when Claudius H. Huston resigns Aug. 7. (Story on page 1.) [Associated Press Photo.]

2,000 Greeks Will Open Meeting Here Tomorrow

Nearly 2,000 Greeks, coming from every section of the country, began arriving in Chicago yesterday as delegates to the fifth annual convention of the Greek American Protective association which will open at the Medinah Athletic club tomorrow. Lee Johnson, president of the organization, arrived from Pittsburgh.

STERLING LEADS, "MA" FERGUSON NEXT, IN TEXAS

Hoover Leader Receives Small Vote.

Dallas, Tex., July 26.—(AP)—Texas Hoover-Democrats, who two years ago swung the state electoral vote to a Republican for the first time in history, today apparently deserted Thomas B. Love, their old leader and a Democratic candidate for the gubernatorial nomination.

Returns in the state primary election show Ross S. Sterling, wealthy Houston, Tex., publisher and chairman of the state highway commission, has a big lead for nomination for the governorship. The returns from 39 of 253 counties, as compiled by the Texas election bureau, gave the following:

Sterling, 14,057; Mrs. Miriam A. [Ma] Ferguson, 10,515; Clint C. Small, 8,234; Jim Young, 4,478; Love, 3,616; Earle B. Mayfield, 2,697; Barry Miller, 1,948; Frank Putnam, 226; C. C. Moody, 189; Paul Loven, 86; and C. E. Walker, 86.

Fierce Wet-Dry Vote Fight Is Raging in Old Virginia

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 26.—[Special.]—Prohibition has become the leading issue in a hotly contested primary campaign in the Virginia congressional district adjacent to the national capital. Five candidates are in the field for the Democratic nomination. The primary will be held on Aug. 5.

Thomas R. Keith of Fairfax, one of the most prominent attorneys in northern Virginia, is espousing the wet cause, while the two other most active candidates. Frank Ball of Arlington, a state senator, and Howard W. Smith of Alexandria, who recently resigned from the circuit bench to make the race for congress, are aggressively dry. The other two candidates are Crandall MacKey, former commonwealth attorney, and E. H. De Jarette.

The contest is a wide open one as a result of the refusal of Representative R. Walton Moore [Dem.], who has served for nearly a dozen years, to run for reëlection. Nomination on the Democratic ticket on Aug. 5 will assure election in November.

Wet Out for Repeal.

Mr. Keith in his campaign speeches has declared for repeal of the eighteenth amendment or modification of prohibition laws and restoration of control over liquor to the states. He has expressed the opinion that a great mistake was made in placing prohibition in the constitution with a consequent abridgement of local self-government. He contends that before the eighteenth amendment was adopted Virginia handled the liquor problems satisfactorily and asserts that in those days Virginia was not, as it is today, a nesting place for moonshine stills and the haunt of bootleggers. All five of the candidates are regular Democrats, none of them having joined in the "Hoovercrat" movement led by Bishop James Cannon two years ago. There is little evidence in any of the Virginia congressional contests of the anti-Smith movement which the Cannon forces sought to keep alive in the gubernatorial election of last year.

Glass Sure of Seat.

Senator Carter Glass, whom Bishop Cannon would have liked to defeat for renomination, will be renominated in the primary without difficulty.

Present Virginia representatives are expected to be renominated in the nine districts other than the one in which the wet-dry contest is raging.

Two of the ten present representatives are Republicans. The Democrats expect to defeat at least one and possibly both of these Republicans in November.

Deserted on Wedding Day, Eloper Is Granted Divorce

Mrs. Helen Cummings Rossman, 6733 Ridgeland avenue, yesterday won a divorce from Raymond Rossman, with whom she eloped to Crown Point on Nov. 4, 1927. The decree was granted by Superior Judge Gentzel on the ground of desertion when Mrs. Rossman testified her husband left her on their wedding day and both went to live with their parents. Mrs. Rossman is the daughter of Dr. Henry T. Cummings of the staff of the Jackson Park hospital. She did not ask alimony.

Aged Princess Wins Fight to Wed Cousin of King

PARIS, France, July 26.—[U. P.]—The first tribunal today refused to issue an injunction against the marriage of the Princess Broglie to Prince Luis of Bourbon, cousin of the king of Spain. The Duke de Brissac and other relatives of the princess had attempted to prevent the marriage, maintaining the princess was not competent to manage her affairs and also objecting because of the difference in the ages of the princess and her fiance. She is past 70 and he is in his forties.

$50,000 WILL IS LEFT BY SKELTON, LOST LAKE FLYER

Fund Given to Relatives of Dead Wife.

The will of Ralph Fisher Skelton, Chicago artist and sportsman flyer, who is believed to have perished in an effort to fly across Lake Michigan last April 10, was admitted to probate yesterday before Leon Edelman, assistant to Probate Judge Horner. The will disposes of an estate valued at $50,000.

The will was filed with Probate Court Clerk Mitchell C. Robin by the law firm of Brown, Jackson, Boettcher & Dienner. Filing of the will at this early date—only three months after Skelton's disappearance—is considered unusual by court officials, inasmuch as it has never been definitely proved that the flyer is dead. No trace of his wrecked plane was found.

$50,000 for Wife's Kin.

The estate lists personal property—principally securities—valued at $50,000 which is put in a trust fund to be administered by Attorneys John A. Dienner and Arthur H. Boettcher. The beneficiaries of the fund are the relatives of Skelton's wife, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Brown of Geneva, who was scalded to death in a bathroom shortly after their arrival in England on their honeymoon several years ago.

According to Attorney Charles A. Brown, Skelton also left about $50,000 in life insurance, which is not listed in the will. This will go to the flyer's mother, Mrs. Grace Skelton of Port Byron, Ill., the attorney said.

Skelton was 30 years old. He had his studio and made his home in the Italian court, 619 North Michigan avenue. He held a private pilot's licence which he obtained last October, and had spent approximately 200 hours in the air, according to his friends.

Skelton was last heard from at Ann Arbor, Mich., where he had stopped to take on gasoline, in the early evening of April 10. He had been in Detroit. He was to have attended a dinner party that evening with Miss Betty Cook, daughter of Raymond C. Cook, of 1420 Davis street, Evanston.

When he was 40 hours overdue at Curtiss field, near Glenview, more than a dozen flyers searched vainly for Skelton over the miles of lake, sand dunes, and forest lands between Chicago and Ann Arbor.

Marks His 80th Birthday by Taking First Air Ride

Kokomo, Ind., July 26.—[Special.]—"Back in the days when we drove oxen to plows, I never dreamed that the day would come when I would be soaring around my own farm in an airplane," said Jerry Oakley, pioneer farmer of Howard county, who celebrated his eightieth birthday by taking his first airplane ride. His jaunt in the skies was a birthday gift from his granddaughter, Miss Pearl Oakley, graduate nurse.

VOTE FOR DEANS TO DIRECT CARE OF S. M'CORMICK

Kin, Wife and Physicians Reach Agreement.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Santa Barbara, Cal., July 26.—[Special.]—A suddenly convened meeting of the board of guardians of Stanley McCormick brought Mrs. Emmons Blaine and Harold F. McCormick, sister and brother of the wealthy incompetent, and Mrs. Katherine Dexter McCormick, his wife, from Chicago to conduct a further airing of their differences before Superior Judge William Dehy.

The sessions resulted in a decision in which the sister, brother, wife and two physician members of the board voted to leave the conduct of Stanley McCormick's case to Drs. William Ophuls and Langley Porter, deans of the medical schools at California and Stanford universities, for one year beginning Aug. 1.

Sister Favors Dr. Kempf.

Family differences came to the surface when Mrs. Blaine sought to reintroduce the subject of reëmploying Dr. Edward J. Kempf, New York psychoanalyst. Dr. Kempf was dismissed by Judge Dehy's order, after six weeks of litigation, last December. The judge refused reinstatement after the board of guardians united in a resolution asking him for action, as Mr. McCormick is a ward of the court.

Dr. Ophuls, as chairman of the guardians, stated that it was "immaterial" to the physicians in charge whether or not Kempf was reemployed. He added that "what we want to do, primarily, is to benefit the sick man and we are unable to see at the present time that this step would be of benefit."

Judge Is Opposed.

Judge Dehy then returned his finding. He advised the guardians to agree on some one other than Kempf, and said that it would require new and additional evidence to make him agree that Kempf should be brought back on the case which he handled at a $120,000 a year salary for more than two years.

Drs. Ophuls and Porter brought in a report that Stanley McCormick now seems to be improving, and is making forward steps that in the past month have caused his condition to appear to be "better than noted before" during the 24 year illness. He is attended by Dr. Nathaniel Brush, formerly Kempf's assistant.

ASYLUM PATIENT KILLS ANOTHER.

Lewis Zigora, 54 years old, of Chicago, was beaten to death yesterday with a 35 pound floor polisher, wielded by Reuben Smith, 39 years old, of Streator, in the Peoria state hospital for the insane, where both are inmates.

SERIOUSLY HURT AS TRUCK AND AUTO COLLIDE

Samuel Cole, 30 years old, 5607 South May street, was seriously injured yesterday when the truck he was driving crashed into an automobile at Lincoln and West 14th streets. He was taken to the county hospital with fractures of the skull and pelvis. Ross McDowell, 24 years old, 7844 Kenwood avenue, riding with Cole, received a broken leg. With no deaths reported yesterday Cook county's motor toll for the year remained at 546.

Two Bandits Seize $500 in Butcher Shop Holdup

Two men entered the butcher shop of Edward Holmquist at 2441 North Clark street last night and ordered six pork chops. When Holmquist placed the chops on a scale to weigh them, one of the men drew a gun. They then rifled the cash register of $500 and fled.

LIST PROGRAMS FOR ICE FUND BENEFIT SHOWS

Warner Theaters to Help Charity Friday.

BY KATHERINE KELLEY

Five Chicago neighborhoods will have the opportunity on Friday afternoon to help THE TRIBUNE free ice fund by attending their moving picture theater. The occasion is the silver anniversary celebration of Warner Brothers theaters.

The theaters where charity benefits will be given were announced Thursday after Warner Brothers had selected THE TRIBUNE charity as the recipients of the afternoon's anniversary proceeds. Yesterday the titles of the pictures to be shown in those theaters were announced.

Doors Open at 1 P. M.

Perhaps best known of the pictures is "All Quiet on the Western Front," at the Stratford theater. This is the war picture which has caused much discussion. Others will be "Wild Company," with H. B. Warner, and a new Fanchon and Marco stage show at the Capitol; "Midnight Mystery," with Betty Compson, at the Highland; while the Grove and West Englewood theaters will offer Ramon Novarro in "Gay Madrid." All Warner theaters mentioned will open their doors at 1 p. m. Friday, continuing the charity performances until 6:30 p. m.

The local theaters, it was stated at the Chicago headquarters, will compete against theaters in nine other cities—Newark, N. J.; Washington, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, New Haven, Conn.; Albany, N. Y.; St. Louis, Milwaukee and Atlantic City—to raise the largest fund for charity. The charity benefits will be officially started Friday when Vice President Curtis presses a button at 1 p. m.

"Juvenile Follies" Aids Fund.

Another benefit for the ice fund is the "Juvenile Follies" to be given on Thursday night at 8 o'clock at Almira Simons hall, 1640 Hancock street, by 75 boys and girls. These youngsters have been practicing for weeks directed by Mrs. Edward G. Shore, 2842 North Francisco avenue. The cast will also include juvenile radio stars, dancers and singers. The entire proceeds will be turned over to the ice fund.

While benefits will go a long way toward the ice fund goal, their proceeds will not be sufficient to care for the 900 families all summer long to whom the fund hopes to give ice. Every penny from every possible source will help. Your gifts will be appreciated, no matter how small.

Accompanying $1 came this note yesterday from Ruth and Lois Treulich, 7 and 5 years old: "We saved this out of our allowance. We want this money to buy a poor family some ice."

And from Jack and Grace Boyce, Grand Beach, Mich, "We are here where it is nice and cool, and we feel sorry for the poor babies in the city. My sister Grace and myself held a sale of our used toys and we made three dollars, and we are sending it to the ice fund. We hope it will help a little." A list of ice fund contributions follows:

A check for $10 from Richard Schuyler Joslin and $5 from G. E. W. brought the Camp Algonquin fund for summer vacations for tenement mothers and children to $2,326.12. All gifts should be made payable to the cashier of THE TRIBUNE.

LUXURY BUYING RAISES HOPES FOR TRADE GAIN

Many objects usually considered as "luxuries" were on display yesterday in the manufacturers' exhibit at the Palmer House. The exhibits, valued at more than $500,000, were representative of what manufacturers hope to sell the public next season.

As buyers for jobbers and retailers placed orders an optimistic spirit was noted. A return to more prosperous times was predicted by many, who declared the sale of these luxuries was an indication of future prosperity.

"Conditions are beter than I anticipated," said George F. Little, managing director of the Eastern Manufacturers and Importers' association, which supervised the exhibits of 250 manufacturers. "A healthy sign is that buying has a trend towards the better grades of merchandise."

Included in the exhibits were photograph frames, bridge and poker sets, cigar and cigaret cases of gold and silver, porcelains, bronzes, embroideries, lamps, costume jewelry, purses, scarfs, linens, candlesticks, pottery, etchings and prints, musical novelties, and articles of glass, marble, ivory, alabaster, leather, and wood.

FEWER DEATHS AND MORE BIRTHS SHOWN IN 1930

A decrease of 1,413 in the number of deaths and an increase of 305 births is shown for the period from Jan. 1, 1930, to yesterday, as compared with the corresponding period in 1929, in a report released yesterday by Health Commissioner Kegel. For the same time there has been a decrease of 338 in the number of deaths of infants under 1 year old.

GERTRUDE LUCEY BECOMES BRIDE OF J. A. NEWTON

Nancy Langworthy Wed in Evanston.

Two weddings of interest to society were solemnized yesterday. Miss Gertrude Lucey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick J. Lucey of 442 Wellington avenue, and J. Allen Newton, son of Robert Crittenden Newton of 64 Cedar street, were married at 4:30 o'clock at the Holy Name cathedral in the presence of a small group of relatives and friends.

The bride wore a pink chiffon gown with long sleeves cuffed in beige fox and a wide brimmed hat of pink horsehair. Orchids, gardenias, pink roses, and blue larkspur were mingled in her bouquet.

Her only attendant, Mrs. Thomas G. Wheelock, wore a green chiffon frock with a matching velvet hat and carried yellow roses. William Rend Newton was best man for the groom. The ceremony was followed by a reception at the residence of the bride's parents.

Nancy Langworthy Bride.

The marriage of Miss Nancy Langworthy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred G. Langworthy of Evanston, to Adon N. Smith of Cleveland, son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip T. Smith of Hamilton, N. Y., took place at the same hour at the First Presbyterian church of Evanston. The ceremony was followed by a reception at the Langworthy residence.

The bride wore an eggshell satin gown with a three point train and a tulle veil falling from a coronet of pearls. She carried a shower bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Charles Baker Jr., wore a powder blue velvet dress with a large ping velvet rosette at the waist and a blue maline hat. The bridesmaids, Miss Frances Murray of Evanston, Miss Harriett Mann of Kenilworth, and Mrs. Morgan Manchester of Madison, Wis., were gowned in pink taffeta with blue trimming and wore pink maline hats. All of the attendants held bouquets of Talisman roses, blue larkspur, and Johanna roses.

Brownell Bradstreet of Winnetka was best man for Mr. Smith, and the ushers were Robert Shepard of Cleveland, Charles Dodd and Carleton Johnson of Evanston, and Burr D. Brower of New York.

BOTTLES FILLED IN PENNY WEEK FOR MILK FUND

Announcement will be made early this week of the receipts from Penny week for the benefit of the Chicago Babies Free Milk fund. The week ended yesterday. Most of the 3,000 milk bottles placed in public places to receive contributions were filled, according to Mrs. E. R. Graham, president, who personally financed the expenses of the drive.

Mrs. Graham said yesterday that the plan for distributing the milk to undernourished children at booths in congested districts was found not practical, and that beginning tomorrow, distribution will be made through organized charity channels recommended by Wilfred S. Reynolds, director of the Chicago Council of Social Agencies.

C. S. Tuttle, vice president of the Central Trust company, is serving as treasurer of the fund.

FIRE DESTROYS INN; INCENDIARY TORCH BLAMED

The Wildwood Inn, a roadhouse one mile east of Wheaton on the St. Charles road, was burned to the ground early yesterday morning. Investigators declared there was no doubt that the fire had been set by an incendiary.

William J. "Bimbo" Fraser, former proprietor, said he recently had sold the roadhouse to B. G. Blanchard. The latter declared that no liquor had been sold in the place and that he was unable to account for the incendiarism. He said the loss was about $6,500, fully covered by insurance.

Acting on a report that one or two persons might have been sleeping in the place when it was burned, firemen prepared to search the ruins as soon as possible.

C. W. Reed, state's attorney of Du Page county, said he believed the burning down of the inn was a blessing to the district.

"The place was an eyesore and a haven for vice," he asserted. "I was preparing to ask for an injunction against the place when this happened. The only reason why I might want to find the man who burned it down would be to pin a medal on him."

Neighbors said the fire first appeared in the rear of the place and then almost immediately enveloped the whole structure. The walls were probably soaked in gasoline or some other combustible, they declared.

SEIZE NEGRO WIELDING KNIFE.

MUSIC FESTIVAL OPENED TO ALL WHO LIKE TO SING

Thousands Will Thunder Hallelujah Chorus.

ENTRY BLANK FOR GRAND CHORUS CHICAGOLAND MUSIC FESTIVAL

[To sing the Hallelujah chorus from "The Messiah."]

NAME ....

ADDRESS ....

TELEPHONE NO..............................

TYPE OF VOICE..............................

Mail filled in blank immediately to

MUSIC FESTIVAL EDITOR,
The Chicago Tribune,
Chicago, Ill.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Did you ever hear a chorus of 5,000 voices thundering out the measures of the Hallelujah chorus from Handel's great oratorio, "The Messiah"? You will hear it at Soldiers' field during the concert of the Chicagoland Music Festival on the night of Saturday, Aug. 23. It is going to be one of the climaxes in a program full of climaxes.

What is more, you may, if you desire, take part in the performance. Every singer is invited, no one is barred, and there will be no conditions except the ability and willingness to sing and to be acquainted with the Hallelujah chorus.

Fill Out the Entry Blank.

All over the United States there are choral organizations, there have been choral organizations for years and years back, and hardly a one of them that does not know "The Messiah" from first note to last. The oratorio classifies as one of the staple items in all choral singing.

These remarks therefore are addressed primarily toward choral singers or those who have been choral singers, individual choristers and not their organizations. If you would like to take part in this stirring event, all that you will need to do is to fill out the application blank regarding singing in the Hallelujah chorus—not the one relating to entry in the festival contests—which you will find printed in this issue of THE TRIBUNE, and send it in. You will at once be enrolled as a member of the big chorus.

No Tryouts or Voice Tests.

There will be no tryouts, no voice tests, no formalities of any kind. It applies to Chicagoans and Chicagolanders alike. All that will be expected of you is to know the music of the Hallelujah chorus and be willing to lift up your voice in its strains when the conductor gives the signal with his baton.

You need not even be an enrolled member of any choral organization. Past acquaintance with the number will be sufficient. It may be found desirable to be such a member, simply because such members have a more recent and consequently more vivid memory of the work, but it is not necessary.

As has been said above, past members who would like to get back and sing a few moments for old times sake will be just as welcome as those who took a formal part in "The Messiah" as late as last month. In any event, and once again, this invitation applies to singers and to singing societies, though these, too, will be welcome if they care to come. But do not wait for your choral conductor to enter your name. Do it yourself, and do it now.

Noble Cain to Be Director.

Since the success of a complex choral number depends quite as much upon the conductor as upon the singers, perhaps even more so, there is pleasure in announcing that the choral conductor for the Chicagoland Music Festival will be Noble Cain, a director who in a few years has established an enviable record for himself as a brilliant and magnetic wielder of the baton.

During his career in Chicago he has been the conductor of the Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co. chorus, the Armour Male chorus, and through many smaller units to the Senn High School a Cappella chorus, an organization that has made history in the art of choral music. It is the largest organization of its kind in the world, singing, as its name indicates, entirely without accompaniment. During the season just past Mr. Cain presented for the first time his new Chicago a Cappella choir, and its debut was likewise a sensation.

Negro Groups to Take Part.

This, by the way, will not be the only choral feature of the Chicagoland music festival. There has been a remarkable amount of musical development during the last few years among the colored population of Chicago, a development less well known than it should be since its manifestations have not always been made public, but confined to colored audiences and patrons.

On the night of Aug. 23, however, Negro organizations will take an important part. There have been entries from the Metropolitan Community church choir directed by J. Wesley Jones, the Mundy choristers directed by James A. Mundy, the Pilgrim Baptist church choir, the Olivet Baptist church choir, the Cosmopolitan church choir and others.

Maj. N. Clark Smith, former bandmaster of Tuskegee institute and now instructor at Wendell Phillips High school, has entered two bands, one the Women's World Fair band of fifty pieces, the other the Men's Community band, made up in general of former members of the Chicago Defender Newsboys' band. All these will be heard in music by and of their own race.

NEWS OF CONTESTANTS

During the last week preparations have been going forward in forty cities of Chicagoland for the parts their musicians will play in the music festival on Soldiers' field. Newspapers of these cities are sponsoring local festivals during which will be chosen the best bands, drum corps, choruses, octets, sextets, quartets, and instrumental and vocal soloists for appearance at the Chicagoland festival on the night of Aug. 23.

The Hammond [Ind.] Times, the nearest newspaper to Chicago entering the Chicago music festival, reports that the Hammond High School band is rounding into shape for the local event. Director Adam P. Lesinsky said that 68 members of the organization appeared for the first rehearsal.

East Chicago Enters Soloists.

East Chicago has entered the Hammond festival with several soloists. Robert J. White, director of music in the Washington High school there, is assisting the Times in bringing in the musicians.

Other Hammond Times entries are the Whiting American Legion Drum corps and the Orpheus and the Saengerbund Fidelia choruses, the No-Top male quartet, and many individual soloists and instrumentalists.

Michigan City, Ind., not to be outdone by the three ring circus which will be put on by the Decatur, Ill., Review during its $1,000 concert to raise sufficient funds to send the Decatur High school band to Chicago, announces that following the Michigan City music festival which will be held in the Oasis ballroom on Monday night, Aug. 4, all the guests will be asked to join in a dance and frolic, the music to be furnished by Amos Otstott's orchestra.

ENDS OWN LIFE

JOHN G. SLACK.

John G. Slack, 52 years old, 1035 North Lorel avenue, for twenty years superintendent of the Chicago Polyclinic, 954 North Clark street, was found dead in his berth aboard the steamer Greater Detroit yesterday when the vessel docked at Buffalo, N. Y. Beside the body lay a small bottle which had contained poison. Medical Examiner Rocco N. De Dominicis said he believed Mr. Slack had ended his own life.

Mr. Slack severed his connection with the clinic a week ago as a result of "various adjustments" at the institutions, it was said yesterday. He had spent the last week putting his books in order until Thursday night. It was learned that he boarded the boat at Detroit, Mich., on Friday evening.

Mr. Slack is survived by his widow and a daughter, Catherine, 16 years old. The body will be brought to Chicago for burial.

BORAH ORDERED TO TAKE A REST FOR TWO MONTHS

Washington, D. C., July 26.—[U. P.]—Senator William E. Borah [Rep., Idaho] was ordered today by Johns Hopkins hospital physicians to take a complete rest for two months. The physicians declared that although there was nothing "organically wrong" he was a "very, very tired man."

Senator Borah said he would leave Washington Monday for a month's rest in the north, probably Maine, and then attempt to be relieved of the additional month's prescribed idleness.

EXTORTIONER IS SEIZED; TRAPPED BY MILLIONAIRE

Lansing, Mich., July 26.—[Special.]—An extortion plot against Richard H. Scott, multimillionaire president of the Reo Motor Car company, and members of his family was frustrated here this afternoon by state police detectives when they took into custody Samuel Meyers, laborer, after he had picked up a package of money secreted by Scott in compliance with directions received in a series of letters.

Scott had been directed to place $15,000 in four different hiding places in the extortion letters, the first of which was received July 16. In each case Scott did as directed, but arranged with police to shadow his movements. Each of the letters threatened to kidnap and murder Scott's grandson, Richard, his son, Maurice, his wife and himself, in the order named.

The first two traps set by the police were futile, as no one appeared at the appointed hiding places. In the third instance, the suspect visited the spot, but after looking over the territory hurriedly left. A letter received by special delivery this morning accused Scott of planting officers at the scene, warned him that "no more tricks" would be tolerated, and fixed a new spot at which the $15,000 package was to be cached. "We are loaded and coming after you," the letter stated.

Scott again made arrangements with the police detectives to set a trap for the extortioner. Shortly after noon, Meyers appeared at the scene where the supposed money package had been hidden at the rear of a coal yard.

WILL ASK BOOST IN FIRST CLASS POSTAGE RATES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 26.—[Special.]—Postmaster General Walter F. Brown is preparing to recommend an increase in first class postage rates in his annual report to be submitted to congress in December.

Mr. Brown tentatively suggested an increase in the rate from 2 to 2½ cents per ounce several months ago and the public reaction to the proposal has convinced him that this is the most feasible method of overcoming the annual postal deficit.

Will Boost Revenue 60 Millions.

It is estimated that the extra half cent will increase postal revenues by from $55,000,000 to $60,000,000 annually. The postal deficit in the last fiscal year amounted to $91,714,450 while in the previous year it totaled $94,699,744.

Mr. Brown advances his proposal as one means of reducing governmental expenditures. He hopes that congress will enact legislation in next winter's session to make the higher rates effective at once.

"It is entirely proper that the public should be prepared to pay an additional half cent on letter mail if existing rates are to remain effective in other classes," said Mr. Brown.

Will Eliminate Deficit.

"By this means we can make sure that we will not have to draw on the treasury for money for the postal deficit when there are many other demands for public funds."

The decision to raise letter postage was reached after a survey of the rates on all postal matter studies of other classifications of mail matter led to the conclusion that rate increases applying to them would lead to a decrease in business. It was the opinion that an increase in the letter mail rate would cause no diminution in the volume of first class mail.

THE INSECT INTELLECTUALS.

Fourteen years ago a bomb was exploded in San Francisco and ten persons were killed and many injured. The city was having a patriotic demonstration for national defense in common with many other cities in 1916. The murders were committed against these citizens simply because they were engaged in such a demonstration. Whoever planned it and whoever carried out the plans would justify it philosophically with the doctrine that patriotism is an offense against humanity and nationalism a crime. The victims had a different opinion and were killed because of it.

It is not astonishing that San Francisco was shocked and enraged by the killing of these citizens. It is not yet regarded generally in the United States that a modest expression of patriotism or a belief in nationalism should naturally expose the person to a hazard or to the loss of his life. A community so shocked may not produce justice, although American law is seldom impetuous or even expeditious, and it frequently seems much more concerned that the accused should find an open door than that reasonable evidence should be used against him. This is notorious in the American administration of justice. British justice promptly hangs the person against whom believable evidence of murder can be produced and consequently thereafter there is nothing much to work up into a celebrated case.

Two men were convicted for the San Francisco murders, Mooney and Billings. The bombing of the parade was not abhorrent to their creed nor out of the pattern of their activities. Nevertheless they could have been unjustly convicted, and that possibility has not been ignored. It has been pressed upon California authorities ever since the convicted men were sent to the penitentiary. Although the California Supreme court recently held after a review that the men were properly convicted, the case is still open and another hearing is pending to ascertain if vital testimony was perjured.

To the liberal mind in the United States the case has been perfectly clear from the beginning. The murdered citizens were engaged in a discreditable proceeding, unworthy of adults and reprehensible even in juveniles. They were attracted by a demonstration of patriotic sponsorship and thus were animated by the cruder folk stupidities. In their normal lives they expose themselves only to intelligent derision or pity, but when they gather in large numbers under the stimulus of one of their mischievous emotions they will irritate the intellectuals unbearably and a group of radical intellectuals may blow them up.

This will be of small consequence. It is a means of correction and it is a relief to which the radical is entitled. Whoever may be accused of the crime will be innocent because of the fact that he has been accused. The judge in the trial will be timid or stupid. The prosecuting officers will be scoundrels. The jury will be empty headed. Evidence against the defendants will be perjured. Appeal will be taken [1] to a governor who will be a political scalawag yielding to the viciousness of the long-eared populace; [2] to a commission of citizens of high position and reputation who will prove to be incredibly prejudiced, obtuse, unintelligent and ungenerous; [3] to any judicial appellate body which will then become unjudicial, unfair, unperceptive and cruel.

This is the pattern of the liberal mind. Its conclusions are documented in sequence. Given the charging of Sacco and Vanzetti or any such with the crime of murder, these various phenomena of liberal conduct emerge inevitably. There is no intellectual doubt. It will be so in every case. The liberal mind is stamped wall paper. For each complexity of society there is a roll with an unvarying design.

It assumes that the people are contemptible in their instinctive herd conduct whether they manifest themselves in the American Legion, Rotary, gang singing, jury trials, choir practice or on the baseball bleachers, but when they get their electric light bills they are given evidence of their own natural ability to form a government capable of extinguishing the power trust by better methods of production and distribution. The governments which they do form are rated incapable of sincerity in policy or effectiveness in operation, but should be extended into fields of private enterprise. The liberal mind regards the electorate as a jackass and the public executive as an incompetent demagogue, but wishes to approach perfection by increasing the responsibilities of the one and the power of the other.

These are the patterns of the intellectual wall paper in the liberal mind. If the government trains a young man in a severe course of discipline and study, with constant admonition as to ideals, and he becomes an American military officer he will be a primitive savage if he is set down in Haiti with a duty to perform and the Haitian who comes in contact with him after a career of extortion and assassination will become an oppressed man of culture and intellect.

As between any post of the American Legion and any section of the I. W. W. the ex-service men will be wrong and the wobblies will be right. The suppression of rights and enterprise by Stalin will be an experiment in human progress to be watched unemotionally and with a proper disregard for incidental human unhappiness, but the suppression of the same rights and enterprises by Mussolini will be an outrage upon the finer aspirations of humanity.

An East Indian even with a tradition of infant marriage, the suttee and caste abominations will be accepted as of the highest intellectual order, but a perplexed British subaltern will be a willing instrument of a detestable imperial barbarism.

The intellectual system of the liberal minded is almost too simple and unfailing to be wholly credible. Furthermore, it is setting back the clock of intelligent liberalism to midnight.

AMERICAN MOVIES IN EUROPE.

It is now reported that the conference of American and foreign moving picture interests will soon result in a treaty of peace and coöperation, and all who enjoy the resources of that great art and industry will welcome the event. Until the advent of the talking movie the American film had it pretty much its own way and had spread around the world. The language of the silent film is universal, but the talkie brought new problems which are not easy to solve. This may have been as important a consideration as the various legal means adopted to bar out American films or the problems of copyright. The American movie had been able to hold its own fairly well in spite of them, and will do so until foreign movies are greatly improved.

If the problems of language are overcome and fair competitive conditions maintained under the new régime of coöperation, the American talking movie will hold its primacy, we predict, for a long time. Our confidence is not based on the assumption that the foreign industry will not improve in technical skill. We have a theory as to the popularity of American films in Europe which may not be 100 per cent sound, but has a good deal to be said for it, we think. We believe American films are especially popular abroad because of their optimism. Our highbrows scorn this quality as often shallow and illogical. It is preserved at the expense of truth to experience. The happy ending is often reached in defiance of consistency in character and the realistic operation of the law of cause and effect. The cynic and the realist protest, but the great movie public applaud. We have a notion that what commends American films especially to the European public is their cheerfulness, their assumption that happiness is normal and dependable. Pessimism floods European thought. Its most striking leaders are convinced of the irremediable pathos and tragedy of our human destiny. This may be nearer the truth than our genial assumption of the perfectability of mankind and our incorrigible faith in the ability of human beings, no matter how lowly their station or how serious their difficulties, to win through to happier things. These must certainly be more comforting and pleasanter, and especially in Europe, recovering arduously from the huge disaster of the war, still beset with dark doubts and heavy sacrifices.

The sophisticated few may refuse the relief of what they deem only an anodyne, an illusion, a weak escape from the pressure of grim reality into a fairyland where people are illogically hopeful and impossibly triumphant over circumstance. But to the European masses the cheerful American conception of the potentialities of life must bring a great if momentary relief and something of a heartening for the hard struggle of existence.

American movies are better technically than European. But we think their strongest appeal is in the spirit of hope which they bring with them from the new world.

AIR COOLING.

One need not be a prophet to foresee the coming of air cooled dwellings. We have highly perfected means of raising the temperature when it is too cool for comfort; we shall some day have means within the reach of all for lowering the temperature when it is too high. There are such means today, and they are in use. Restaurants and theaters in increasing numbers use them. But they are too expensive for the average householder or for most places of work.

But science and invention will in our time attend to that. The difficulties are great. Except in the tropics, the temperature is not above the point of comfort very many days in the year, and any means for cooling the air must be unused most of the time. It must therefore be merely an auxiliary of some plant of service in constant operation if it is not to be too costly. Air cooling must be a rather inexpensive byproduct of some other service before it will be generally available.

But that will come, and may come any day. It will be a great addition to the health and comfort of civilized life. As it is perfected it may make possible the exploitation of the tropics by white men to a degree not now very practicable. It will be a great amelioration of working conditions in factories and offices. Its possibilities are well worth intensive study by scientists and inventors.

Editorial of the Day

LURE OF THE WATER.

[New York Evening Post.]

Reference was publicly made a few days ago to the number of ships under construction in the American shipyards. These ships were for use in commerce. There is another type of vessel the construction of which is keeping some of the builders busy, and that is the yacht. According to the bulletin of the American bureau of shipping there were twenty such pleasure boats, varying from 150 to 1,400 tons in size, under construction on July 1.

The water has an irresistible fascination for most of us. Every small boy who lives near a stream builds a raft and imagines that he is Columbus on a voyage of discovery and decides that he will own a boat when he gets money enough to buy one. The surprising number of boys who have gratified this ambition by owning boats that will move under their own power can be estimated by any one who passes the anchoring ground of the yacht clubs. That there is a lively market for ready built yachts is indicated by the advertising pages of the magazines. For every man who has a yacht built to order there are probably a hundred who buy one from the builders, who can deliver it as quickly as if it were an automobile.

AMERICAN HEROES

JOHN SEVIER

A Brief Review of His Contribution to Our Country.

(The articles of which the following is the tenth are intended as five minute sketches of early Americans of particular achievement and distinction, each flashed briefly against the background of the times and conditions in which the subject made his contribution to the nation. Their names may be well or may be little known now to the generation which has inherited the benefits of wise, laborious, and, in many instances, heroic work.)

(Picture in Rotogravure Section.)

BETWEEN the Great Smoky mountains to the south and the Cumberland mountains to the north, containing the east of Tennessee and the southwest spur of Virginia, is a rugged region of many rivers running eccentrically down the Gulf of Mexico watershed. These valleys are not hard to enter from the north, east, or south. The rivers are now famous. They include the Powell, the Clinch, the Holston, Watauga, and the Nolichucky. In the middle of the eighteenth century they were in the southwestern frontier of English colonial America.

The rivers unite by confluences near Knoxville to form the Tennessee and that river thereupon seems to defy all rules of direction, revealing the freakishness of the watershed by plunging down for Mobile bay and winding up in the Ohio river. Shortly before the beginning of the revolution the valleys of the Watauga, Holston, Clinch, etc., had attracted the greatest pioneers of the westward movement in the land.

Elizabethton, Tenn., was the heart of the region thus being populated for the expansion of American boundaries. Here were the Watauga Oldfields, where the Pilgrim compact form of government was renewed, the pioneers being so isolated from organized society that they felt the necessity of returning to a primitive acceptance of community obligations and responsibilities in a free association for orderly procedure.

Elizabethton is a cradle of the American republic, quite as much so sentimentally and realistically as Plymouth in Massachusetts and Jamestown in Virginia. It was thereabouts there were gathered the most daring of pioneers, the freest and boldest of Americans. It has been their idea of government which has prevailed in the United States. They were responsible for the holding of the Chicago region, for the Louisiana purchase, for the Oregon enterprise, for Kentucky and Tennessee, the Floridas and Texas, for the continental dimensions of the United States. The nucleus of American expansive power during and after the revolution was in the river valley region between the Cumberland range and the Great Smokies. The Americans there were the most individualistic and the freest. They were the hardiest and the most inured to danger and hardship. They were true adventurers. They had the best weapons in the country—the long rifles—and they had expert use of them. These men facing west were the yeast of the second American national period. John Sevier was one of their early leaders. (Sevier was originally Xavier, a French Huguenot family. He was born in Rockingham county, Virginia, Sept. 23, 1745, and died near Fort Decatur, Ga., Sept. 24, 1815. He had entered the Watauga country in 1772. Two years later he was a captain of Virginia troops in Lord Dunmore's war against the Ohio Indians, which ended in the hard fought battle of Point Pleasant at the mouth of the Great Kanawha.)

Sevier had the qualities of a frontier leader and Indian fighter. He is described as tall, muscular, fair haired, blue eyed, daring, and resourceful. The name of Nolichucky Jack, derived from his settlement on that river, seems to contain the picture of a man who could command the obedience of men who were directable only when they respected the director and acknowledged the occasion. They would qualify subordination with familiarity.

Two directions enticed these Watauga region men, one northwest toward the Ohio river, the other west toward the Mississippi. They were about equally hazardous and about equally attractive. One settled Kentucky and the other Tennessee. Kentucky was Virginia projected west, Tennessee was North Carolina. If these territories were to be obtained and held in peace the land north of the Ohio had to be cleared of French and Indian menace. The energy for that was developed in the Watauga country.

In the war of 1812 Kentucky mounted riflemen in Canada fighting the Battle of the Thames finally closed the day of Indian power east of the Mississippi by defeating the British and their Indian allies and killing Tecumseh.

Sevier's choice went west instead of northwest and with John Robertson he became the founder of the state of Tennessee and its first governor. In a life well esteemed romantic, if frontier danger and work make romance, two exploits distinguish Sevier. One was his part in the Battle of King's Mountain and the other in the state of Franklin.

The King's Mountain fight with its consequences has a bit of parallelism with the New England battle of Bennington. In both instances a mountain people swarmed down upon a ranging flank movement of a distinguished invading British general and gave him such a setback that his future operations were embarrassed and were ended in his capture. Green Mountain did this disservice to Burgoyne. The Watauga did it to Cornwallis at King's Mountain.

The mounted riflemen came out of their coves, clearings, and valleys, and started down through the gaps, along the ridges and by the valleys, with Sevier, Shelby, Campbell of Virginia, and Cleaveland of North Carolina among their leaders, gathering strength as they rode. All told, about one thousand of the most dangerous fighters in America urged their horses into the valley of the Catawba in search of the ranging right wing of Cornwallis under Col. Ferguson. They found his army on the South Carolina line and destroyed it.

The Watauga men, using the term for the whole region, were instinctive state makers. They were competent to go beyond the domain of law and to derive their government from themselves. They formed two states which were lost, Transylvania and Franklin, and the two which succeeded, Kentucky and Tennessee. Their descendants went on southwest and formed Texas. Other expansion in the United States, excepting the Mormon adventure in Utah, was under the ægis of established government through territorial form into statehood. The Watauga pioneers by preference or of necessity rough hewed their state out of nature, a distinctive achievement.

Transylvania was the first one. Franklin was the second. North Carolina, after the revolution, abandoned claim to the western territory because it feared its possession would increase the state's ratio in the national debt. The people thus were severed from their state and were not incorporated in the working organization of the United States. Their answer was the creation of the state of Franklin with John Sevier as the first governor and with application for admission to the Union. North Carolina then reconsidered, recalled its act of cession, and endeavored to extend its government into the infant state. This was resisted and a semi-humorous condition of war resulted with aggressions and reprisals ending with the success of North Carolina in seizing Sevier and taking him away to be tried for treason. Franklin horsemen accomplished his rescue. The romantic story is that they did it in the courtroom, his favorite horse being brought up and two horsemen entering the log trialroom and stopping the hearing with the shout: "We want that man."

North Carolina, under better advice, ended the episode with an act of oblivion and Sevier soon entered upon another governorship, that of Tennessee, being elected by the new state in 1796 and serving three successive terms.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS.

THIS is the season for infantile paralysis. When the disease appears early in the summer it is apt to increase slowly through July and August and flare up violently in September. By October it can be expected to be on the decline and the rule is that Thanksgiving sees the passing of the menace for the year. A section that has had considerable infantile paralysis one year is generally nearly free from it the next year. A low period lasting several years can be expected.

There are certain forms of contagion that seed a country one year and develop epidemics the next. It seems to be necessary to plant plenty of carriers around as a foundation for an epidemic. In the case of infantile paralysis an outbreak in one summer season seems to use up all the susceptible material, changing them to immunes. The next year there is not enough material for the contagion to work on and a threatened epidemic flickers out.

This logic being right it follows that most of the people who become infected with poliomyelitis do not become paralyzed or suffer wasted muscles. The fact is that most of them are supposed to have nothing more than a passing fever of unknown origin, or a little stomach upset, or a little loose bowels. There may be no symptom which suggests infantile paralysis. Perhaps the mother notices that her child does not want to be held in her lap, that cuddling him up causes him to have pain, but if she thinks of that at all she thinks of rheumatism as a cause. Probably she thinks her child has some backache from his fever, or is peevish. About the best home sign of very mild infantile paralysis is this backache and sore back on being cuddled and the desire to be "let alone."

In the infantile paralysis season children should not congregate. Especially should well children avoid sick ones regardless of the apparent nature of the illness. It is just as well to protect children against flies and other insects.

HAVE A PHYSICIAN.

Mrs. C. M. B. writes: I have always been constipated. I always take laxatives [calcium wafers] and now they don't seem to help. If I quit taking them I would go for days without a movement. In fact, I have had only one natural movement since the first of the year. I eat lots of salads and vegetables and try to avoid meat and rich pastries. I am 25 years old; no children.

REPLY:

Your constipation seems to be too obstinate for home relief. Have a physician take you in hand—one with some experience with cases of obstipation.

DANGER OF DEAFNESS.

M. M. S. writes:

1. Can you tell from what white matter in the ear is caused?
2. Is it dangerous?

REPLY:

1. I presume you mean your ear is suppurating.
2. There is danger that suppurating ears will cause deafness.

PROBABLY VOLUNTARY SPASM.

A. E. D. writes:

1. Is tic in a boy 16½ years old serious? When should the twitchings be expected to subside?
2. Which ranks first in food value—whole wheat or write bread?

REPLY:

1. No. The probability is that this is a voluntary spasm. If so, it can be broken. True tic in a boy that age is rare. Its cure is more difficult.
2. Possibly whole wheat bread, though the commercial articles sold under those names are not far apart in value.

DEPENDS ON OPERATION.

Miss D. A. W. writes: Some time ago I had my ovary and tubes removed. As I am to be married soon, I should like to know if this will prevent me from having children?

REPLY:

If both tubes were removed you cannot bear children.

FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE

Letters to this department must be signed with names and addresses of writers.

OBJECTIONABLE NEIGHBORS.

Chicago, July 15.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—In the neighborhood in which I live there is a livery stable which the property owners object to. It has been more or less unused for a number of years, but was leased recently to a tanning company. The place throws off a strong odor and is a breeding place for flies. How can the property owners remove this nuisance?

F. H. S.

Much depends on how long it has been there and upon the provisions of the zoning ordinance. We suggest that you first take the latter point up with the building commissioner, in the city hall. If the condition has not been maintained for such a time as to give a right by lapse of time then you might secure an injunction by employing an attorney.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

SNAKES, MOSQUITOES AND GARBAGE.

Chicago, July 16.—[Friend of the People.]—An excavation was made in a lot next door to us a long time ago. It is always partly full of water. The water is stagnant and even has snakes in it. Mosquitoes as big as bees are around it and since people dump their garbage in it the flies are thick here, too. Can't the health department makes these owners remedy this?

MRS. H. S.

Due to a former complaint the following notice was served on the owner: "Drain water from lots and maintain lots in a dry condition."

Since compliance had not been obtained with the foregoing order this case was forwarded to the city prosecutor's office for suit.

ARNOLD H. KEGEL,
Commissioner of Health.

SLOT MACHINES.

Bloomington, Ill., July 17. — [Legal Friend of the People.]—Is there a law in this state prohibiting the operation of slot machines. If so, is it a state or national law.

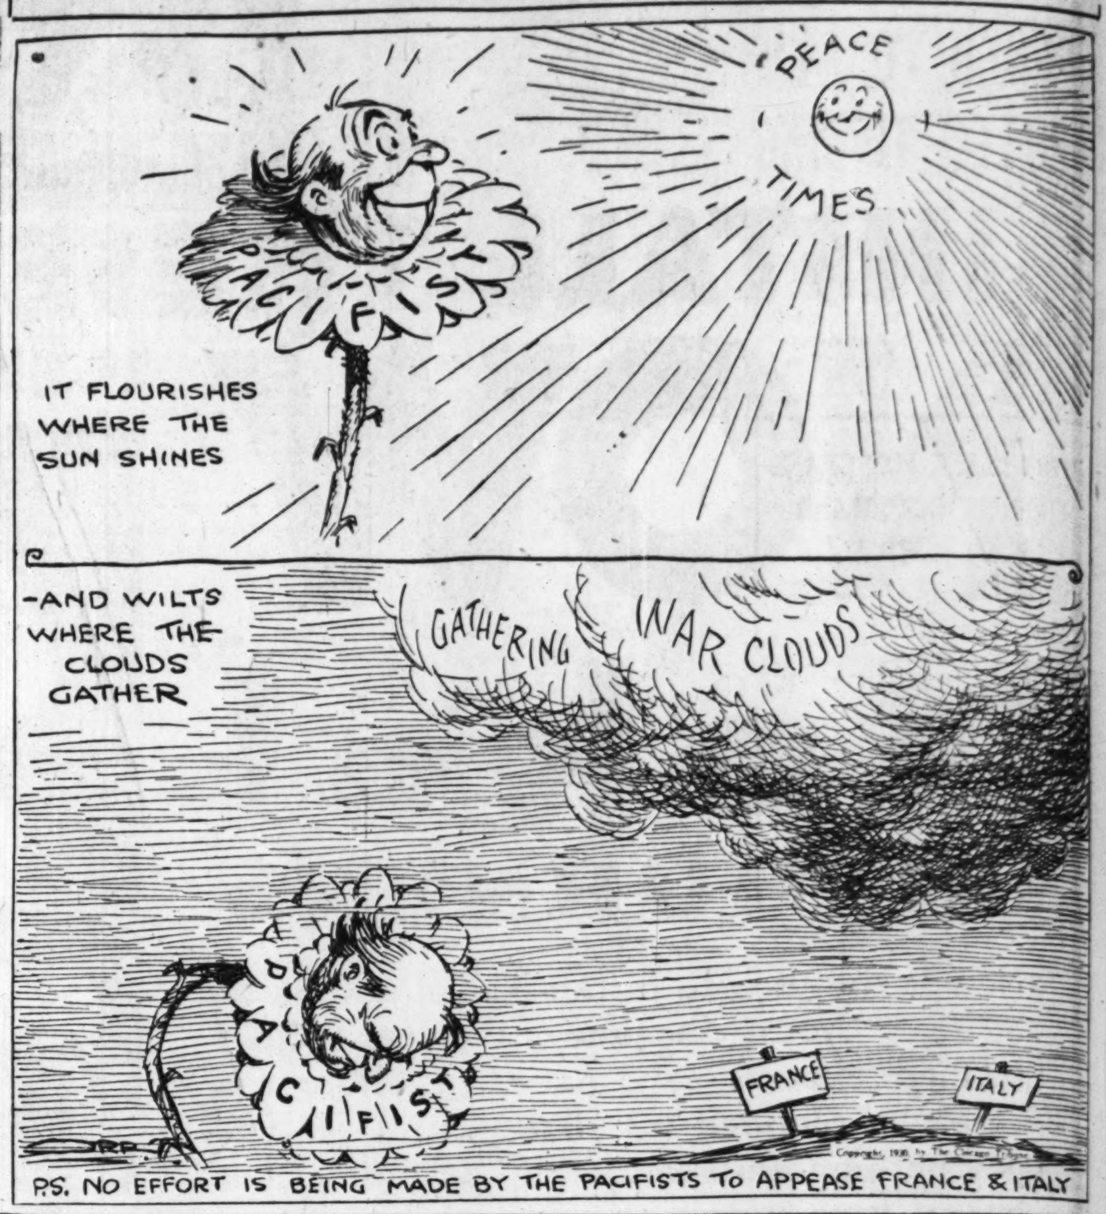
2. What is the penalty for violating this law?

C. T.

1. There is a state law.
2. Imprisonment.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

THE SUNFLOWER



FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

65 YEARS AGO TODAY

JULY 27, 1865.

WASHINGTON.—As a result of the refusal of the pro-slavery magistrates of Alexandria, Va., to receive testimony of colored persons in a case which came before them for trial, Gen. Howard has decided to establish a military court in that city, the duties of which will be to hear and decide all cases affecting the rights of the freedmen. The same policy will be pursued in every district under his jurisdiction where civil authorities make any distinction between white and colored testimony.

DETROIT.—Robert E. Lee, late major general in the rebel army, is sojourning at the Clifton house, Niagara Falls. C. L. Vallandigham crossed the river and is said to have gone to the same place, probably to have a conference with the noted chieftain.

NEW YORK.—James Gordon Bennett is about to place a large force of workmen on the burnt district recently occupied by Barnum's museum. The Herald establishment is to be located on this spot and will have the full front on Broadway.

BOSTON.—Harvard college at its recent commencement conferred the degree of LL. D. on Maj. Gen. George G. Meade of the union army.

30 YEARS AGO TODAY

JULY 27, 1900.

LONDON.—The news from China brings fresh assurances from Li Hung Chang, who now asserts that some of the foreign ministers are already en route to Tien Tsin from Pekin. That this is to be followed tomorrow by an expression of regret that the ministers were killed in a conflict with rebels while proceeding to a place of safety is now regarded as most probable. The correspondent says he has received reliable intelligence that the first serious outbreak in Mukden took place on June 15 while divine services were being held in the cathedral. The imperial troops and rebels, he says, surrounded the cathedral and killed 16 missionaries and over 200 converts.

HONOLULU.—Details of the death of Emil Uhlbrecht, one time winner of the Chicago road race, who was drowned on July 22, show that his body was devoured by a monster shark. Some of his bones and a foot encased in a shoe were found in a shark caught at the entrance of Honolulu harbor by a native fisherman.

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

JULY 27, 1914.

VIENNA. — No declaration of war has been issued, and it is not believed there will be one as Servia never subscribed to The Hague convention. The sending of his passports to the Servian minister, M. Jovanovitch, by the Austrian foreign office, however, is deemed equivalent to a declaration of war. There is an unconfirmed rumor that Austrian troops have crossed the Danube and occupied Belgrade, which was evacuated by the Servian forces. A panic broke out among the inhabitants there on rumors of the imminent entry of the Austrians and the bombardment of the town. A Semlin rumor says that the first encounter between Austria and Servia occurred near Semendria, on the Danube, 24 miles southeast of Belgrade. Vessels conveying Austrian infantry were said to have been fired on from the Servian side of the river.

ST. PETERSBURG.—Germany again was notified that invasion of Servia by Austria would be opposed by Russia. The information was given by Russian Foreign Minister Sergius Sazonoff to the German ambassador. Immediately after the conference an order was promulgated putting the cities of St. Petersburg and Moscow under a state of extraordinary protection—a modified form of martial law. Preliminary steps toward the mobilization of the Russian army have been taken. It can be stated on the best of authority that five army corps have been ordered to the frontier.

BERLIN. — All eyes in Germany were directed toward St. Petersburg today. "What will Russia do?" was the question that was asked probably a million times with bated breath and hearts almost standing still in fear that the answer will mean the long dreaded war. Wherever acquaintances met the one question was "Geht es los?" [Will there be war?]

FATHER RIBOURDE.

Chicago, July 16.—The report appearing in THE TRIBUNE of July 16 and telling of two skulls and religious relics found near Custer Park, Ill., was of great interest to me. For I am just now engaged in studying the story of Father Ribourde at the Newberry library, preparatory to writing an account of the missioner's death. On Sept. 19, this year, it will be exactly two hundred and fifty years that Father Ribourde, companion of La Salle, was killed by the Kickapoos on the banks of the Illinois river.

I have come to the conclusion that among the finds at Custer Park there could very well be relics of Father Ribourde. Father Garraghan says that Father Ribourde was killed down near Peoria, and there is little likelihood the Indians would have brought his remains as far north as Custer Park. However, the place where Father Ribourde lost his life is not far from Custer Park.

In March, 1680, shortly after La Salle had left for Fort Frontenac [Kingston, Canada], and Father Hennepin had gone to the Mississippi, the French at Fort Crevecoeur [Peoria] rebelled and destroyed the fort. The only ones who remained were Tonty, three Frenchmen and two Franciscan missionaries, Fathers Ribourde and Membré. They lived with the Illinois at their great village, near present Utica and Starved Rock. In September came the Iroquois and made war on the Illinois. The French were forced to leave. They started their journey on Sept. 18, sailing up the Illinois river in a canoe. About noon on the next day, when, as Father Membré writes, they were "full eight leagues from the village ascending the river," they landed to repair their canoe. Father Ribourde, an old man of about 65 years, walked into the woods to pray his breviary—and was killed by a band of Kickapoo Indians. The French league is about two and a half miles. Eight leagues would be about twenty miles; and twenty miles up the river from Utica would bring us to about Seneca, near Morris. Custer Park is only about 25 miles from Seneca, 15 from Morris. The objection, therefore, that Custer Park is too far distant from the place where Father Ribourde was killed, falls.

Father Ribourde, "a man respected by all who knew him," as we read in La Salle's account, was the first to give his life in God's service on Illinois soil. Is Illinois going to let the 250th anniversary of his death pass by without commemorating the event? The present year is also the 250th anniversary of Father Hennepin's trip of exploration on the northern reaches of the Mississippi, and Minnesota is erecting a monument to Father Hennepin at St. Paul. As yet there is not a single monument to Father Ribourde in Illinois.

THE NEW STATION.

Chicago, July 15.—When, if ever, is the work on the new Randolph-South Water Street Station of the Illinois Central Railroad to start?

WRIGLEY.

ANOTHER REFORM STARTED.

Chicago, July 17.—I greatly enjoyed W. R. O.'s letter commenting on the tobacco chewing proclivities of our street car conductors. However, on reading it the second time, the suspicion arose that W. R. O. might be an uplifter. The same thought occurred to Albert, who is helping me clean out my basement and who insists on a little salt every time I pass him a glass of home brew. For Albert said: "That's how prohibition started; some bird wrote a letter to the newspaper."

Should this be true, please let me say, I shall stubbornly resist any attempt by the invaders to cross the last frontier. Chewing is as intensely American as a Greek restaurant, a politician addressing his constituents in broken English or seventy minutes cheering following a nominating speech. Those who tamed the wilderness and made the desert blossom as the rose, even in their school days, took their chewing as seriously as their 3 R's.

At a recent national chewing and expectorating contest, where distance, radius of curve and area covered counted, the winner was a man who rates a thirteen gun salute. The runner-up was my Uncle Harry, who by saving chewing tobacco coupons, won a trunk, and a radio and is now spitting for a sewing machine.

When in the service, standing for inspection, the colonel barked: "You chewing tobacco in ranks?" "Damn right, I am," says I. "Give me a chew," says the colonel.

NOT A STITCH.

Riverside, Ill., July 16.—The south park commissioners are to be congratulated on the opening of the nude Twelfth Street beach. Driving along the lake front between 51st and 12th streets, I saw at least fifteen men standing on the sand and breakwater absolutely nude. Between 13th and 15th the breakwater is very close to the road and at this point there were three [illegible] ... as the day they were born. [illegible] ... drive was [illegible] ... containing children as well.

M. J. STROBE.

THE PRICE OF BAKERY GOODS.

Berwyn, Ill., July 14.—With butter, eggs, flour, sugar—in fact, everything that goes into bakery goods—so cheap [illegible] for the last six or eight months, why do bakeries still charge their old prices for coffee cakes, cookies, etc.? Surely the labor charge isn't 99 per cent of the cost of the goods!

VERNE OSBORN.

A PARK DOWNTOWN.

Chicago, June 28.—Wouldn't it be a grand reality if we could make a park out of the block between Quincy and Adams and Wells and Franklin streets, the ground occupied by the recent Marshall Field building?

LIQUOR SELLER DENIES SIGNING BUCKLEY CHARGE

Thousands Attend Funeral of Slain Radio Man.

Detroit, Mich., July 26.—(AP)—While a cross section of Detroit citizenry, 10,000 strong, followed Jerry Buckley to his grave today, a bootlegger who cannot read English swore that he was the man who accused the slain radio orator of racketeering and that he did it unwittingly.

Two affidavits signed by the admitted liquor seller, Frank Chock, were before the public tonight. One was that obtained by Police Commissioner Thomas C. Wilcox after Buckley was shot to death early Wednesday. It accused the dead man of having induced him to set up a liquor business and of having then "shaken him down" for $4,000.

Threat Is Charged.

The second sworn statement, made public today by Thomas F. Kennedy, Buckley's law partner, declared that Chock signed the Wilcox affidavit without a knowledge of its contents and under an implied threat of being placed in jail. In this affidavit Chock said that Buckley was his friend and had helped him get customers because he was sending money to needy relatives in France.

Coincident with this development police were forced to release the man they had announced as an important suspect. He was Jack Klein, a motion picture operator, who was sitting beside Buckley in the La Salle hotel when three gunmen killed him a short time after he had announced the result of the election to recall Mayor Charles Bowles. Klein was released on a writ of habeas corpus after admission by the prosecutor's office that there was no evidence to justify holding him. So far as the public knew this left the police in much the same position they occupied at the start of the investigation.

Those He Aided Attended.

Many persons in the crowd at the funeral at St. Gregory's Catholic church today and at the burial in Mount Olivet cemetery had been helped by the campaign in behalf of unemployed which Buckley conducted last winter over station WMBC, where as political commentator, he flayed the underworld and criticised the Bowles administration.

Others were millionaires, judges, former police executives, but mostly they were members of Buckley's "radio family," who knew him only as a voice on the air, championing their causes and ideals.

While the body was being taken to the cemetery a thunderstorm broke out. The long line of mourners did not turn back. They followed "Jerry" in death as faithfully as they had followed him when he was merely a voice issuing from their loud speakers.

Judge Arthur W. Kilpatrick from the bench of Recorder's court discussed the Buckley case today, saying that the police department apparently was "in a paralysis of hysteria."

BIG WHEAT SALE IS PREDICTED BY CO-OP PRESIDENT

Export Trade Is Reported to Be Growing.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 26.—[Special.]—Forty to fifty per cent of the 1931 wheat crop of the United States will be handled by the Farmers' National Grain corporation, C. E. Huff, president, predicted today on the first anniversary of the meeting of coöperative leaders at which the corporation was formed.

"Conservatively, I would estimate, we shall handle 200,000,000 bushels of wheat next year, and if the weather man hits the areas in which we are not so well organized, it may be 300,000,000 bushels or more," Mr. Huff declared.

The head of the farm board's country-wide coöperative sales agency came to Washington from Chicago to confer with Chairman Alexander Legge of the farm board on the future plans of his organization.

Has Largest Membership.

During its first year, Mr. Huff asserted, the grain corporation has "astounded the country" by its achievements and has even won the respect of the grain trade, its natural enemy. Coöperatives in every important grain area in the United States are embraced in its membership and it has a larger farmer membership than any other grain agency in the world, he said.

Mr. Huff announced completion of a purchase by the corporation of a large commission house with offices in Duluth, Minneapolis, and Great Falls, Mont. All of the personnel and assets will be taken over, he explained

In the southwest states, where the wheat harvest is in progress, approximately one-third of the new crop is being handled by the corporation, Mr. Huff said, basing his figure on a Kansas City report that 32 per cent of the wheat coming in is coöperative grain.

Sales Made Abroad.

"Our export department made its first sales to Europe on June 11 and has become a most important factor in the foreign field," he continued. "On one day recently we made eight sales in foreign ports. The first five days of this week our export wheat sales were 1,000,000 bushels. That is not a lot of wheat, but understand our export sales started on June 11.

"We delivered one lot of wheat directly from southwest farmers to the door of a coöperative consumers society mill in Scotland—a direct sale from producer to consumer without any other agency intervening. Thus, three or four profit-taking agencies were eliminated."

As a result of the farmers' national grain corporation putting American wheat on "an open chess board," and providing means for moving it physically on chartered boats, there are no congested export terminals, Mr. Huff declared, adding that there is a healthy demand for wheat abroad in contrast with the situation a year ago.

Asked for his opinion on the future price of wheat, the corporation official said:

"There seems to be every sound reason to predict that the price will be more favorable. I am not now advising farmers to holde their wheat for better prices, but I do say that everything in the picture is favorable for an increase soon."

Elaborating on this statement, Mr. Huff pointed out that the widespread drought is "knocking the corn crop into a cocked hat," with the result that wheat will be widely used as a corn substitute for live stock feeding purposes.

Fed to Live Stock.

"My information is that wheat is going into live stock feeling at the greatest rate in the last twenty years," he continued. "Reports from Kansas and Texas indicate that thousands of farmers are keeping a lot of their cheaper wheat, grinding and mixing it and using it for feed. As 2½ billion bu of corn are raised annually in this country it can be seen that any large substitution of wheat for corn will mean a big reduction in the wheat surplus."

RUMANIA JEWS WIN PROTECTION BY CABINET VOTE

BUCHAREST, Rumania, July 26.—(AP)—The Rumanian cabinet, after a session of seven hours, today voted to give the minister of the interior, Dr. Alexander Vayda Voevod, free hand to suppress attacks on Jews. Officers of the ministry of justice were instructed to give all possible assistance in fighting anti-Semitism.

The interior ministry said the burning of 20 homes of Jews in Galatz last night had nothing to do with the "iron guard," or anti-Semitism.

Vereshty, where Jews had asked armed protection during a bazaar today, was quiet under guard of a police detachment. News of the arrest of Zelea Codreanu, anti-Semitic leader, was officially given out today.

OUT OF DANGER

RALPH INCE.

Hollywood, Cal., July 26.—[Special.]—Rapid improvement was reported today in the condition of Ralph Ince, motion picture director, who was seriously injured Friday off Malibu Beach when a heavy 3 inch fish hook imbedded itself in the back of his skull. At Hollywood Community hospital Dr. S. R. Broadbent declared that Ince is practically out of danger.

HURT ON MERCY AIR TRIP, SUES FOR $100,000

Mrs. Louise McCusker, 24 years old, of the De Witt hotel, 244 East Pearson street, filed suit for $100,000 damages in Superior court yesterday against the Curtiss-Wright Flying Service. She alleges she was severely cut on the legs and body when the plane she had chartered crashed on May 23 near Crawfordsville, Ind.

Mrs. McCusker engaged the plane upon learning that her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Stothardt, also of the De Witt hotel, had met with an accident while motoring to Florida. She was accompanied by Dr. Frederick Harvey, 2561 North Clark street.

Harold L. Mayer, pilot of the plane, was killed when it crashed in the night. Dr. Harvey was also injured, but chartered another plane and continued the journey. Maj. R. W. Schroeder, manager of the flying service, investigated the accident and reported the pilot was apparently attempting to land because Mrs. McCusker became ill and hysterical.

HIDE IN TRUCK; ROB DRIVER.

A MAYOR TELLS CHICAGO HOW TO CLEAN UP A CITY

Hoan Says the Citizens Must Organize.

you can love or you can loathe Daniel Webster Hoan, but you cannot ignore him. That is the kind of mayor he has been—not to be ignored—and no sketches of the distinctions that have made Milwaukee famous would be complete without him.

When he had cheerfully greeted me, I responded with the routine query as to how he was, and he sang back in a nasal shout—

"Tip-top!"

He did not look it.

He looked tired—it was toward the end of his workday—and gaunt, and I think he could well carry more flesh. But in manner he was, for two hours, unflaggingly buoyant, emphatic, and specific.

He's Tall and Rangy.

He is tall and rangy. His forehead is high, his nose large, his lips firm, and his dark brown hair is touched with gray. In appearance, manner, and speech he seemed to me more like a north of Ireland type than south of Ireland, but as a matter of fact his ancestors in the old land were Leinstermen.

Throughout the interview he talked rapidly, pausing, when he wanted a date, to belabor his memory, which, he said, was bad.

He keeps a tidy desk, and that is significant, for the man who does not—be he executive or subaltern—is not much good. When the talk began, he smoked a pipe, which he lit and relit in the distrait manner of Gen. Dawes; then he smoked a cigar, and then went back to the pipe. Often he smiled, and it was a very winning smile. His manner, for 49, was boyish, but without being trivial. When I asked him direct questions, he would answer, "Yes, sir," or "No, sir," and that made me wince, for I could see that it was his expression of the sole courtesy which the faltering step and gray hairs of age can command. At that, he is only eleven years younger than I.

A Candid Character.

About his own mental processes he was candid, saying that often in politics he had to feel his way to conclusions. He cited the instance of a devious politician and said, "He went on with such an oration as I couldn't get a word in edgeways! I was puzzled, and later I tried to think it out and finally I said to myself, 'Why, that fellow is just trying to pull the leg of his crowd by making them think he is pulling my leg.' Then the whole thing was clear to me."

It was when the mayor talked on public measures—policies of construction and amelioration—that the tiredness went out of his eyes and his nasal twang deepened into a good baritone. You could see from the gusto with which he then spoke that he has Al Smith's joy in public business and his passion for it. In fact, he is the man most like Al Smith whom I have encountered since the five joyous months which I spent in writing about the governor in 1928. He has all Al's outspokenness, all his nervous force, and all his unpretentious yet dominating ways.

What Milwaukee Was.

When Daniel Webster Hoan entered public life Milwaukee was in a parlous state.

That was in 1910 and the years just before.

Financially the plight of the city was much the same as Chicago's now is.

It was rapidly approaching bankruptcy.

Contractors were being paid in interest drawing certificates.

There was a deficit of nearly two millions in the fire and police pension funds.

There was a deficit of cash to meet running expenses.

There was a deficit of thousands of unpaid personal property taxes.

The city was ten schoolhouses short.

Its drinking water was polluted.

Its streets and alleys were being left unrepaired and the municipal properties were unkempt.

Money was being borrowed in large amounts from banks and through bond issues to meet recurring expenses.

"In short," said Senator Thomas M. Duncan, who until a few months ago was secretary to the mayor, "Milwaukee twenty years ago was going at the clip Chicago is going. Indeed, taxes then were higher here than they were in Chicago because we were living from hand to mouth, and expert investigators have proved that a municipality can do that for about twelve years. Then the interest comes back to bite you in the nose. For the first eight, or ten, or twelve years you seem to be getting a dollar for four cents. There is no sorrier seeming, for the day comes when you pay, and pay, and pay just for dead horses."

And Then Came Hoan.

Upon this chaotic scene Mr. Hoan made his entrance in 1908. He was then twenty-seven years old, two years out of a Chicago night school for the study of law, and a university bred Socialist—that being mainly the kind they breed in Wisconsin.

He came to Milwaukee to make a career as a lawyer, but politics took charge of him and that career has not been fulfilled. His career has been mayoralties.

Looking back on two decades of official life in one city, and sketching municipal conditions as they were in 1908-'10, the mayor said:

"Whatever you may think of us now—and I judge that you think pretty well—Milwaukee wasn't always the Utopia you picture it. Twenty years ago it was as corrupt as Chicago—as any city can be. There were bagnios a block from the city hall, and the painted ladies were in the hall corridors on pay day to get theirs from officials. From the second floors along good streets you could hear the whir and rattle of gambling.

"The public service was what you would expect it to be under such general conditions. There was little independence or courage in it. Why, I remember how one man—a man that was the big-I-am boss in transportation—would stand up to a protesting alderman and shout 'Sit down! What do you think I give you my insurance for?'

Leads Milwaukee

MAYOR DANIEL HOAN.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

"Say, I never swear in public, but if a man talked that way to me I think I'd tell him to go to hell.

A Socialistic Surprise.

"Well, such conditions couldn't last forever in a community that had any considerable number of citizens with any self-respect left in them. In 1910 the Socialists nominated Emil Seidel for mayor and me for city attorney. I was nominated over my protest. I didn't want to go into political life. I wanted to practice law. But I finally accepted the nomination because I was assured there was no chance of being elected. To the amazement of us all—at least until within a week of election—we were all elected. It was a protest vote against graft and corruption—and it was decisive.

"I was elected for a four year term. In 1914 I was renominated for the city attorneyship, and I squeezed through by 300 votes. That should have taken me to 1918 as city attorney, but I didn't finish the term, for in 1916 the mayoralties began.

"When I was city attorney I wrestled thirteen million dollars' worth of concessions out of the public utilities, such as paving between the rails and sprinkling between the rails, and compelling the company to pay the cost of removing the snow they had swept from between the rails into the street, and compelling them to scrub their cars. And I won several track depression cases and reduced rates of gas, light, power, street railway fares—the last very slightly—and telephone rates.

"I tell you all this not to blow but only because I think it helped elect me mayor.

"In 1916 came the first term as mayor. That was a two year term, and so was the one that began 1918. Since 1920 they have been four year terms."

"In looking back on the fourteen years as mayor do you feel that the community has been with you, or has it been a fight?"

"In all that time I think I've had the support of most all small business people and working people who want a clean, happy city, and a great deal of support from what are called the silk stocking wards. O my, yes! I know that."

"Some of my newspaper colleagues in Milwaukee," said I, "tell me that your struggles with life began early. Will you tell me that story, Mr. Mayor?"

"I don't know as I'd call it early struggles," he replied, "but it was early to work, that's certain. My father died when I was fourteen. But I liked work and was ambitious, and saving, too."

"First," I interrupted, "about the name. "It's uncommon. I can't remember that I ever encountered it before."

It Used to Be Horan.

He smiled, saying, "I guess my folks never encountered it, either, until my grandfather wished it on them. Originally it was Horan, but when he emigrated he thought he'd take out the 'r' to make the name more American. The Horans were from King's county and the adjacent Queen's county in Ireland, and once when I was traveling there I tried to trace the family but I couldn't. The records hadn't been well kept. My Irish grandfather first settled near Quebec.

"On my mother's side I can trace my way through eight generations on these shores. She was a Hood—Margaret Augusta Hood—and five of the Hoods fought in the American revolution."

"Now, about the 'Daniel Webster.' It's your name, and I learn from 'Who's Who' that it was your father's and that you have passed it on to your boy. How come?"

"Well, that was more of grandfather's work. My father was born in 1841. That was about the time, wasn't it, when Daniel Webster was at the height of his glory, and grandfather, though he was a Canadian, must have idolized him because he gave his name to his son. And my father gave it to his son and I gave it to my son."

As a matter of fact, Mr. Webster, then secretary of state, was negotiating with Lord Ashburton in 1841 the treaty which peacefully established the Canada-Maine boundary, and his name must have been much on the lips of Canadians as well as of Americans.

Has Career as a Cook.

The mayor resumed:

"When I was a little boy I worked around hotels in Waukesha, where I was born, and finally I became a good cook, if I do say it. I was so good that I thought there might be a chance for me in Chicago restaurants. So I went to the big city and for several years I cooked in the Auditorium and the Great Northern and the Del Prado, and at Rector's, where I was Rector's 'fry cook'—anything fried, that was me. But, good Lord! all this bores you."

"No, it doesn't, Mr. Mayor. It interests me intensely. Please go on."

"Well, around nineteen years old I began to have ambitions, and I had saved money. So I entered the University of Wisconsin. There I cooked for thirty-five students for two of those four years and every summer in hotels, and at graduation I was president of my class."

"Was yours the classical course?"

"Yes, sir, but I majored in political science.

"After graduation in 1905 I went back to Chicago and got into business. I ran a restaurant right opposite Siegel & Cooper's—ran it a year and then sold out. Later Jim Corbett took the lease.

Enters Legal Work.

"After nine months in 1905 and '06 at the Kent College of Law's night school I took the state bar examinations in both Illinois and Wisconsin, and passed them both, and I was in Seymour Stedman's office till 1908, part of the time at six dollars a week. Then to Milwaukee to practice law. The first year here I became attorney for the Wisconsin State Federation of Labor and as such drafted the first state workmen's compensation act—not the one that was passed but the parent of the more drastic one that was passed. Now all but five states have such laws."

We got back to municipal administration.

He was pitiless about Chicago—pitiless because he thought our state so cruelly unnecessary.

"Your city hall," he said, "stinks so bad we can smell it clear up to Milwaukee. Clean it out! Two years ago this coming fall I was severely criticized for doing what the critics called 'bringing in politics' into my Labor day address in our Washington park. They said I violated park board rules by doing that. Well, if politics is too rotten to be discussed in the parks it's time to clean up politics. The parks belong to the people and there's room enough for everybody in them. There's room enough for political, religious, or any other kind of meetings—if the speakers can get an audience. Great public meetings in Chicago's parks, in Chicago's public school houses, of men and women who suffer by municipal maladministration would do much to get those men and women organized into an effective voting body.

On City Managers.

"In a Chicago meeting where the mayor of Cincinnati and I spoke I agreed with Mr. Seasongood that the city manager system is more efficient than the old, traditional form, but what is more important than the form of government is an organization of unselfish citizens who want clean government and are willing to fight for it."

Mr. Hoan declared that the first step toward decent city government is to end the alliance between groups of credulous foreign born citizens and the corrupt men who get those groups to accept them as "leaders," a word which he touched with a withering sneer.

"I've been all through that guff about 'leaders,'" he continued, "fellows whose trick was to herd poor Italians with a little English into a room and then telephone me a long winded oration about the importance of obtaining a permit for a religious procession in honor of St. Borneo—or heavens knows who!"

(Whether the mayor was here doing an Al Smith catch-as-catch-can with an unfamiliar word or was just being facetious, I know not. The reference, I take it, was to St. Charles Borromeo of Milan, a popular intercessor with northern Italians.)

How Hoan Fought Them.

He steamed on:

"Anyway, the next step by the 'leaders' was to get those poor people to thinking that these 'leaders' were the sole source of city jobs. Well, my first step was to talk face to face to groups of the deluded Italians, and I said, 'Now, here, you can have all the religious parades you want as long as you behave yourselves'"—a lovely touch, I thought, this insistence that piety be coupled with decorum—"'but my secretary will give the permits, not me.' That ended their notion that the 'leaders' had to get the permits for them. And then I took up the matter of jobs in the street cleaning department and I said: 'Now, soft hands or hard, if you get city jobs you go to work. We want no 'leaders.' If you get the jobs you'll get them through the department, not through 'leaders,' and you can vote for anybody you damn please. You are American citizens now.'

"Simple as that was, it ended the black hand didoes in Milwaukee because it ended the influence and the power of the 'leaders.' A lot of things are simple if you go right to 'em."

"Just a moment, Mr. Mayor; what did you mean when you said 'soft hands or hard'?"

"Say, that's interesting! When our police want suspects or the accused out of the Italian section, they look first for the men with soft hands—and usually they're right. I suppose it would be different in Chicago because it's a bigger city and many of the soft hands would be in honest businesses."

No Socialist Oratory.

In all this interview Comrade Hoan gave me no flamboyant socialist doctrine; in fact, I don't recall that he ever mentioned doctrine. On the contrary, he was extraordinarily specific, and he talked to specific points, among them burglary insurance, public library circulation, ash removal, playgrounds, street widening, popular education, and the Jones island sewer reduction plant.

He was proud about ash removal, saying:

"Milwaukee is the only city where the collectors go into the basements to remove ashes. That's a tremendous popular thing because it saves a lot of dust, and it's a health measure. We've bought old stone quarry holes and we fill them up, with the ashes and either make a park out of the fill or sell it. They're always worth three times as much as we paid for them. The idea originated with the city's licensed real estate agent. The city had paid sixteen or eighteen thousand dollars for one quarry hole. He sold it for $54,000 at the end of seven years because he got three or four fellows bidding on it. You might like to mention his name. It's Edward Grieb.

On Street Widening.

"Same way with street widening. Make the land work for the city. If cities would buy the whole of the abutting lots when they launch street widening projects and then take off what land they need for the widening and sell the remainder they could pay all the cost of the widening out of what the remainder will bring. But when you propose that, then the howl goes up, 'O, you're putting the city in the real estate business.' Well, in Manchester, England, they did that and made enough out of the resale prices to pay for Queen's boulevard and the subway under it."

"This administration has been accused of extravagance. In the 1924 campaign that was the principal charge.

"But there are some 'extravagances' that save money. Milwaukee raised its policemen's wages, not only because the men deserved it, but also because it wanted a police department where underpay and delayed pay did not put a premium on dishonesty. Result: We now have so good a department that the taxpayers are saving $400,000 a year on their burglary insurance policies. In Chicago the burglary insurance rate"—here again the mayor has shouted to a secretary for the exact figures—"is awful—$24.38 a thousand, and in Kansas City it's appalling—$68.75. In Detroit and St. Louis it's the same as in Chicago, and in New York it's $31.25. In Milwaukee it's $15.13—less than one-half yours and a good deal less than one-fourth of Kansas City's. Rochester and Boston have the same rate as we have—and it's the lowest of any large city in this country.

Fire Risk Rate Lowest.

"Our fire department has won the same solid proof of excellence—namely, Milwaukee has been granted the lowest fire insurance rates of any city in the United States.

"Now, those are triumphs of efficiency. I want to give you some cultural records.

"We have the largest per capita circulation of library books of any city in this country.

"Today in Milwaukee there is no individual, old or young, who can't connect himself with some form of free education. There is some school that will fit into his needs.

"And the boy that makes fodder for the crime mill—I mean the boy that's two or three notches behind in his grades—there are prevocational schools for him where they teach in a different way that accelerates him and enables him to catch up.

"Clean recreation is fully as important as education, for with it you've got to fight the poolrooms and the girls' street parading. So we have forty-eight well organized public playgrounds open day and night, winter and summer.

"Now a big point is that citizens who are not—strictly speaking—officials, have a real share in shaping the policies that have made Milwaukee what it is. What is called 'the mayor's advisory council' comprises fifty delegates from service and civic clubs and they are appointed to the advisory council by the city council, not by the mayor. They can, and do, study and recommend any measures, expenditures, and policies that they think will be for the community's good, then taking a vote on each one and putting their vote and recommendation in print as a guide to our citizens and officials. They can call on any official for information and no official, so far as I know, has ever refused information. But they have nothing to do with appointments. I wouldn't let 'em tell me that."

The Milwaukee of Today.

The mayor never intimated that the substantial civic blessings which Milwaukee enjoys are superhuman evocations. They meant work, he said, and he ran them over:

"The best credit of any city in the United States.

"Disappearance of deficits as a result of savings effected by a scientific budget system, a centralized purchasing board, and the levy of direct taxes.

"Contracts met with cash, the city thus earning thousands of dollars in discounts on its purchases.

"The city's share in street and alley paving and in dredging paid for in cash instead of bonds.

"Addition to the municipality's wealth in less than twenty years of $30,000,000 worth of capital improvements without the issuance of bonds.

"Establishment of an amortization fund to ultimately wipe out all the city's debt. Milwaukee is the only city in the world that has established such a fund."

"What is the secret of such developments and advances?" I asked.

"It isn't a secret, sir," he replied. "It's putting workers in the municipal offices and giving an honest dollar's worth of service for each dollar expended."

When he was first elected mayor fourteen years ago the reporters pestered him on the night of victory with facetious questions as to whether he would write a book and call it "From Scullery to Mayoralty."

"I tried to be a good cook," he replied gravely. "I shall try to be an honest mayor."

EXPERTS ASSAIL TRAFFIC SYSTEM OF MICHIGAN AVE.

So. Park Official Explains Opposition to Change.

BY HAL FOUST.

The regulation of traffic on Michigan avenue, between 22d and Oak streets, received further criticism from traffic experts yesterday while the south park board remained firm in its refusal to join with the city and with Lincoln park to coördinate control.

A stop watch on the traffic lights between 22d street and the link bridge showed a synchronous movement of 77 seconds for the green and 50 seconds for the red lights, against the boulevard drivers. The lights from 22d to Randolph street are under south park jurisdiction and those from Randolph street to the bridge are the city's, but they worked together.

North of the bridge, the stop watch showed 78 seconds for the green and 30 seconds for the red lights as seen by boulevard drivers. These lights are under Lincoln park jurisdiction.

Many Autos Halted.

"Because the cycle of the Lincoln park lights took 108 seconds, whereas the cycle south of the bridge took 122 seconds," said George Barton, traffic engineer of the Chicago Motor club, "many cars were stopped at both Wacker drive and in front of The Tribune Tower.

"South of the bridge more time is required for east and west traffic than north of the bridge. However, Lincoln park could adjust its lights for a cycle of 122 seconds, the same as the city's and the south park's, by making 88 seconds green and 34 seconds red. This would give immediate relief to the rush hour blockades while the three governmental agencies are agreeing upon a unified control."

The proposed unified control would use a progressive light regulation rather than a synchronous timing. The progressive system is now used in the loop, making it possible to drive at fourteen miles an hour without being stopped by a red light. The lights turn from red to green in front of the fourteen mile an hour driver as he progresses.

The Progressive System.

The progressive system planned for Michigan avenue by Leslie J. Sorenson, city traffic engineer, is designed for uninterrupted travel at 21 miles an hour. Under the present system, with all lights changing at the same time, the average speed of traffic between 22d and Oak streets ranges from 14 to 10 miles an hour, the low average being due to the many stops.

"The success of the progressive system for Michigan avenue is speculative, in the opinion of the south park commissioners," said George Donoghue, superintendent of the south parks. "We don't approve an expenditure of $50,000 to make the change until we are convinced of the benefits of the plan.

"The progressive system works at other places, including Garfield boulevard and Broadway, but the movement of traffic on Michigan avenue in the business district is eccentric. There are peculiar conditions at Wacker drive, at Randolph street, at Monroe street and at Jackson boulevard.

Says Benefits Are Uncertain.

"Maybe some eccentric timing of the lights could fit these conditions and relieve congestion by speeding traffic. However, I am not certain but that Michigan avenue is not carrying its maximum capacity in view of the heavy turning movement. In that case the only relief will be the completion of the outer link bridge and the changing of the light timing would be of no avail. Or perhaps, with the completion of the outer link bridge, much of the turning on Michigan avenue will be eliminated and then the success of a progressive light control would be less uncertain."

FROM QUITO, ECUADOR

Letter received by M. W. Macy, Lake Wawasee, Syracuse, Ind.

This interesting letter comes from Quito, the capital city of Ecuador. It is located in the northern part of the country, only 18 miles from the equator, and is on the proposed route of the proposed Pan-American auto highway. At present, according to the recipient of the letter, the longest motor highway in the country runs from Quito to Rio Bamba, 120 miles to the south and east.

Ecuador is a unique country, in that it offers practically every variety of climate. In a railroad trip from Guayaquil on the Pacific ocean to Rio Bamba, 120 miles up the mountains, one can view vegetation and plants similar to those seen on a trip from southern Cuba to central Canada by way of the United States.

The City of Quito has several handsome squares, on one of which, the Plaza Mayor, are the cathedral, the cabildo, or town hall, and the palaces of the archbishop and the president of the republic. Large quantities of cotton and woolen goods, blankets, carpets, leather, lace, and jewelry are manufactured there and it has a large trade in oil paintings of religious nature.

32,522 MILES OF STATE ROADS IMPROVED IN '29

Nearly Billion Spent, Bureau Reports.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 26.—[Special.]—Highway departments of the forty-eight states improved a total of 32,522 miles of state roads in 1929 at a cost of $910,485,291, according to reports made public today by the bureau of public roads of the department of agriculture.

The total mileage improved was an increase of 3,270 miles over the 1928 figure, and includes 7,451 miles of graded and drained earth roads and 25,071 miles of new surfacing.

Of the 25,701 miles of new surfacing, 14,014 miles were laid on unsurfaced earth roads, 4,337 miles on a lower type of surfacing, and 6,720 miles on the same type of surfacing.

Types Are Listed.

The types and mileages of new surfacings are as follows: Sand-clay and topsoil, 2,399 miles; gravel, 12,183 miles; waterbound macadam, 1,642 miles; bituminous macadam, 1,200 miles; sheet asphalt, 116 miles; bituminous concrete, 440 miles; Portland cement concrete, 6,991 miles, and brick and other block pavements, 100 miles.

The total of 314,136 miles in the state systems represents an increase of 7,654 miles over the 1928 figure, and includes 208,324 miles of surfaced highways, 28,554 miles of graded and drained roads, and 77,259 miles of unimproved and partly graded highways.

Revenue Sources Given.

The total sum available to the 48 states for 1929 for state highway and bridge work under supervision of state highway departments [including bond payments and transfers to counties] amounted to $1,194,775,026.

Of this sum, motor vehicle fees of $278,092,734 and gasoline tax receipts of $287,258,416 allotted to state highways represented more than 58 per cent. Sales of state bonds and notes issued for state highways amounted to $161,229,297, or more than 16¾ per cent of the income. Federal aid fund allotments of $77,572,691 represented 8 per cent.

COMPLAIN AS CITY FAILS TO PAY FOR SEIZED PROPERTY

Payment on La Salle St. Award Check Refused.

Several North La Salle street property owners whose real estate was condemned for the widening of the thoroughfare, complained yesteday because they have not been paid their condemnation awards. Several million dollars eventually will be paid to the property owners. Some already have been paid.

One of the owners received his check some days ago, but it was returned from his bank with "payment refused" stamped across its face.

City Holds Up Payments.

An investigation yesterday revealed that the money to pay the awards is available but the city is withholding payment temporarily because of added litigation on the part of some objecting owners who have not felt they were treated fairly in the deal.

Attorney Howard Bishop recently filed an appeal in the United States Supreme court in behalf of the Moody Bible institute and others from a decision from the Illinois Supreme court which denied the owners a rehearing on their objections early this month.

According to Attorney Bishop, 58 pieces of property are listed in the appeal. Of these, about one-third are owned by the Moody Bible institute.

May Decide on Payments.

Mr. Bishop said the appeal to the United States Supreme court was made possible because of a federal question involved—the charge being made that the property was taken without due process of law.

First Assistant Corporation Counsel James W. Breen said yesterday that at a conference in the city hall tomorrow it may be decided whether the awards will be paid before the outcome of the appeal is known.

William Bell, rooming house proprietor at 1118 North La Salle street, is the owner who received the unpaid check. It was for $1,550, dated July 9 and he deposited it in the Cosmopolitan State bank the same day, he said. On July 18 the check came back with the notation that no funds would be paid until the appeal case was settled.

3 BEAT GEHLBACH INTO DOUGLAS, BUT FLYER KEEPS 2 HOUR LEAD

Douglas, Ariz., July 26.—(AP)—Lieut. Lee Gehlbach, Little Rock, Ark., entrant in the All-American Air Derby, kept his elapsed time advantage of nearly two hours safely beyond reach of twelve other flyers today, but three of his competitors beat him into Douglas from San Angelo, Tex., to take all the day's prize money.

Gehlbach made the 535 mile hop from the Texas control point in 4 hours 22 minutes 31 seconds, bringing his elapsed time to 22:00:38.

Ahead today in the race over rugged Texas, New Mexico, and Arizona were Herman Hamer, San Angelo to Douglas in 4:15:52; J. R. Weddell, 4:18:30, and Stub Quinby, 4:22:10.

Hamer, reported officially out of the running after he experienced several hours' delay before raching Houston, Tex., was announced tonight as reinstated.

Raid County Orphanage and Seize Home Brew

Newberry, Mich., July 26.—(AP)—The Mackinaw county orphanage at Rexton was raided Friday by state police and more than 300 pints of home brew, together with manufacturing equipment, was destroyed.

U. S. Auto Firms in Spain, Hit by Tariff, Cut Staffs

MADRID, July 26.—(AP)—The United States automobile agencies in Spain have begun to reduce their personnel and overhead expenses because of the new Spanish tariff, which doubles duties on automobiles. All foreign cars have been hit equally by the measure. As the United States manufacturers have held a leading position in the past, they probably will continue, agents declare, to maintain that position, although with smaller volume.

Berlin-Chicago Flyers Held Up by Bad Weather

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 26.—The third stage of the Berlin to Chicago flight by the German aviators, Wolfram Hirth and Oskar Weller, was postponed today because of bad weather between London and Kirkwall, Orkney islands. The flyers expect, if conditions are right, to take off early tomorrow. The aviators, in a small two seater plane, are trying to negotiate the northern route via Iceland and Greenland.

"NOW... I can stand the Public Gaze"... Can You?

June Clyde and Arthur Lake, supported by a clever chorus, prove how appropriate is the title of that sparkling Radio Picture, "Tanned Legs"

SUMMER LEGS
—require the observance of this rule of refinement
BRONZED... or white... lithe feminine legs are lovely only when they are free of fuzzy hair.
Shapeliness of limbs cannot diminish the ugliness of superfluous hair. The informality of the bareleg vogue can't excuse it. Gossamer chiffon hose cannot conceal it.
That's why dainty, modern women turn to Del-a-tone Cream. There's nothing else like it, for Del-a-tone Cream is faintly fragrant... snow-white... pleasant to use and actually removes hair safely in 3 minutes or less.

DEL-A-TONE
The *WHITE Cream Hair-Remover
Can you stand the public gaze? If your skin is smooth and free of hair—you can meet curious eyes with poise and self-confidence. Confirm your own personal daintiness by using Del-a-tone before donning your bathing suit, brief tennis frock, sleeveless suit blouse or sheer evening-dress.
Easy to use as cold cream... Del-a-tone Cream is the most pleasant modern way to remove superfluous hair from fore-arm, back of neck and face as well as under-arm and legs.
Del-a-tone helps you stay immaculate at all times because the removal of under-arm hair lessens perspiration odor. It leaves your skin soft as velvet... clean of the least trace of disfiguring hair.

1929 sales of Del-a-tone Cream reached a record peak—four times greater than any previous year. And now 1930 sales are exceeding by far the record year of 1929. Superiority—that's why.

WHAT is Free Wheeling?

This is the question thousands of motorists are asking.

Free Wheeling is the second milestone in automobile development.

The first was the electric starter in 1912.

The second is Free Wheeling with positive control, pioneered by Studebaker in 1930—an exclusive Studebaker feature, manufactured under Studebaker patents, and available only in the new President and Commander Eights.

Due to Free Wheeling with positive control, you can shift from high to second, back and forth, at 40—50 miles an hour, and never touch the clutch. You need use the clutch only to start or back up.

For the first time in a motor car you get the full benefit of momentum automatically. When your car has traveled 10,000 miles, your engine has "worked" only 8,000 miles.

The braking power of your engine is available as readily as in conventional cars. Yet your car glides along, in gear and fully controlled, but free and silent as though there were no gears.

You save 12 per cent on gasoline, 20 per cent on oil—even more in heavy traffic. Strains on engine, transmission and rear axle are lessened; tire life is lengthened.

There is nothing new to learn—for driving the new President and Commander Eights is simplicity itself.

Words and phrases cannot adequately describe the sensation of Free Wheeling with positive control, but a demonstration will make it clear to you.

The new President and Commander Eights are larger, more beautiful, with many refinements, but above all, they give you Free Wheeling with positive control, which cannot be obtained in any other cars in America.

Come, experience for yourself the first really new development in motoring in years—an achievement of Studebaker's 78 years of manufacturing progress.

THE STUDEBAKER CORPORATION OF AMERICA

Johnny Lehman of Olympia Fields won the western amateur golf championship by defeating Ira Couch of Glen View, 4 and 2, in the 36 hole final yesterday at the Beverly Country club.

The two young players battled through a day of wind and rain squalls and baking sunshine. Couch didn't quit fighting until his 12 foot putt on the 34th green rimmed the cup and trickled beyond. Then he laughed and shook hands and it was all over.

Lehman never was headed after the fourth hole, though Couch kept coming up to square the match, and at one time it seemed that he had his opponent on the run. That was when he won three consecutive holes to go all even on the 24th.

Next Hole Turning Point.

The turning point of the match came on the next hole. Lehman had been quite shaky on those which he had dropped, for he had three putted on the 22d, overshot the green on the 23d, and driven into a trap on the 24th.

Couch sent a beautiful drive from the 25th tee and it seemed that Lehman was slipping as he sliced into the rough. Couch's second was straight as a die and again Lehman made a bad shot, this time hooking to the rough on the opposite side of the fairway, with a grove of trees between him and the pin.

He made a fine attempt to recover but his ball swished through the branches and came down on the steep slope of a bunker. Then Couch put his ball squarely on the green. Both were now lying three and it seemed certain that Ira would take his fourth straight hole and shatter Lehman's morale.

Lehman took his stance on the sharply slanting bunker, swung his niblick and laid the ball four feet from the pin. That shot was the one on which the whole match turned, for never again was he in serious danger. He sank the putt to halve the hole in par five after having been in difficulty on every shot from tee to green.

Goes Ahead on 28th.

Lehman went one up on the 28th when Couch three putted, increased his lead to two up when Ira again took three on the 31st, and became dormie three when his opponent drove into the trees on the 33d.

The end came on the next hole. Couch's approach went over the green and down an embankment while Lehman's was squarely on. Ira chipped back and his 12 foot putt for a four rimmed the cup.

Lehman, who was the Big Ten champion in 1928 when he was a senior at Purdue, began the tournament in brilliant fashion by shooting 147 to tie Chick Evans for medal honors at the end of the 36 hole qualifying round which was held last Monday and Tuesday. Then in succession he overthrew Lloyd Nordstrom of Davenport, who had led the field on the first day; Don Moe, the defending titleholder; T. P. Perkins, 1928 British amateur champion, and finally Ira Couch.

Lehman and Evans are scheduled to play off their tie for the medal this morning at 9 o'clock. The match will be 18 holes.

Couch Gets Bad Start.

A tricky wind and an overcast sky greeted the two finalists as they stepped up to the first tee yesterday morning. Couch got away to a bad start by laying his approach in a trap and slugging twice with his niblick before getting out.

He came right back to square the match, however, by holing a ten foot putt for a birdie on the second hole. Then he took the lead when Lehman's tee shot on the third was to the left of the green. Rain began to fall at this time and continued intermittently for an hour.

Lehman evened things on the fourth by laying his approach within four feet of the pin and holing out for a birdie. He forged ahead on the fifth by sinking his first putt after his iron shot from the rough had landed fifteen feet from the pin.

Couch Squares Match.

Johnny went to two up on the seventh when his opponent's second shot landed behind a tree but dropped the eighth on a stymie. He again went

PIGEON HOLE WINS RICH HANDICAP AT ODDS OF 10 TO 1

BY FRENCH LANE.

Pigeon Hole, running in the purple and white silks of Hal Price Headley of Kentucky, won the Arlington handicap, worth $44,900, over a muddy track at Arlington Park yesterday. A brilliant and game drive in the stretch brought Pigeon Hole up in time to beat Joseph E. Widener's Curate by a length. The Nut, racing from far back, closed fast enough to be third.

Pigeon Hole was ridden by R. Finnerty, a lad who every now and then gains some fame by his ability to guide horses home in front when he is riding over a muddy course. His victory was unexpected, for in the betting Pigeon Hole was a long shot, paying $23.74 to win, $8.80 to place, and $6.86 to show. Curate, almost an even money favorite with Sun Beau, paid $5.56 to place and $4.74 to show. The Nut's show price was $9.62.

Paul Bunyan finished fourth, William T. was fifth, and Stars and Bars sixth. Sun Beau, the favorite, unable to negotiate the muddy going, was a distant last.

Old Toro Breaks Down.

The race had its tragedy. Halfway down the backstretch Toro, the great son of The Porter-Brocatelle, owned by Edward B. McLean, broke down. He stopped as if he had been shot. The tendons in his right foreleg had given way. He was unable to walk off the track, and as the ambulance picked him up and slowly hauled him away the crowd of 25,000 gave him a great cheer, for every one knew Toro's racing days were over. Last night Trainer Johnny Schorr said he hoped to save him for breeding purposes.

The rainstorm, which missed numerous sections of Chicago, developed into a near cloudburst at Arlington shortly after 7 o'clock yesterday morning. It continued for an hour. As a result the track was drenched and was soaked with water by the time the sun appeared, shortly before noon.

Instead of improving under a warm sun which beat down in the early hours of the afternoon, the running strip became more difficult, and by the time the handicap was decided it was muddy and holding.

When Pigeon Hole galloped to his surprise victory he added $34,400 to the turf earnings of Owner Headley. Curate got $6,000 for finishing second, third money was worth $3,000 to The Nut's owner, and Paul Bunyan's prize for landing fourth was $1,500. It was the second running of the heavily endowed race, Misstep having won it a year ago.

When the start came My Dandy was first away from the barrier, Curate was second. Stars and Bars was third, and Sandy Ford fourth. Rounding the Post and Paddock club turn, Lady Broadcast was the leader, but Curate was going very fast to be second. My Dandy was third and Sandy Ford was clinging to fourth place.

Curate Goes to Front.

The field had no sooner straightened out for the run down the back stretch than Jockey McCoy took Curate to

French Beat Van Ryn and Allison; Lead Cup Play, 2-1

PARIS, July 26.—[U. P.]—The big surprise of the Davis cup final round came today when France defeated the United States in the one doubles match of the challenge round of play for the historic tennis trophy now held by the French. France now leads by two matches to one in the five match final.

Henri Cochet, No. 1 French player, and Jacques Brugnon won the doubles over Wilmer Allison of Austin, Tex., and John Van Ryn of East Orange, N. J., top ranking United States combination. The scores were 6-3, 7-5, 1-6, 6-2.

It had been expected that Christian Boussus would be Brugnon's partner unless the French lost both of Friday's two singles matches. Cochet's match on Friday, in which he defeated George Lott of Chicago, was, however, scarcely a workout. The other singles match of Friday was won by Big Bill Tilden over Jean Borotra.

French Need One Victory.

There are two singles matches to be played Sunday. Tilden will meet Cochet and Lott will play Borotra.

The French are favored to win both of these matches and need only one more victory to retain the cup, while the Americans face the task of winning both matches if they are to regain the trophy.

The doubles defeat was the third sustained by the United States forces since the beginning of the "Tilden era" in 1920. Out of 11 final doubles matches played in those years the United States was victorious except in 1922, when Australia won, and in 1928, when Cochet and Borotra bested Tilden and Francis T. Hunter, and in the current play.

American players and their supporters, however, were tonight a long way from giving up the cause. Tilden rested today while Cochet labored. Tilden, at the top of his game, may be able to down the small French player. It will be their fourth Davis cup finals meeting. Tilden beat Cochet in 1927, but Cochet won over Tilden in 1928 and 1929.

Lott Is Given Chance.

The Lott-Borotra match also may be a close one. The French adherents argue that Borotra had a cup victory in his racquet when the play started, and point to his fine work against Tilden as an indication of victory against Lott. Lott, however, may be counted on to play his best against the bounding Basque, now that a victory is needed.

Today's match hinged on two factors, the brilliant play of Cochet and the lacklustre performance of Allison. The Texan is considered to be at least as good in the doubles as any of the four, yet his play today was the least admirable. Allison was guilty of 41 nets and 24 outs, each more than any other player. He led in placements, however, with 13.

The first set was marked by loose play on the part of all four men. There were many errors and few cleanly delivered placements. Allison was extremely nervous, while Brugnon played with unexpected steadiness. It was his cool play that gave the French the first set, at 6-3.

Allison made 21 errors in the second set, and appeared as if he were in a daze. Again Brugnon supplied the necessary points for victory, the French winning at 7-5.

Allison Better in Third.

In the third set Allison came to life, and both he and Lott played to Brugnon without mercy, forcing him to commit 19 errors. When the Americans had a lead of 5-1 in this set the French threw away the remaining game to give themselves a rest.

Playing in whirlwind fashion, Cochet and Brugnon swept their rivals off their feet in the fourth and deciding set. Never has the Cochet-Brugnon team played better than in this set. Allison again slumped. The French won the first five games and took the set by 6-2.

Still a Chance

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 26.—(AP)—Joseph W. Wear, chairman of the United States Davis cup tennis committee, after a telephone talk with Fitz Eugene Dixon, nonplaying captain of the American team, in France this afternoon, said there still was a good chance to bring the Davis cup back to this country.

Dixon said Bill Tilden was playing superb tennis, and that if Lott defeated Borotra tomorrow in the first singles match, the players felt that Tilden would beat Cochet and bring back the cup.

MRS. ZECH BEATS MRS. MARSHALL IN COUNTY GOLF

Mrs. Lillian Zech of Tam O' Shanter won the Women's Cook county golf championship yesterday by defeating Mrs. Rose Marshall of Marquette in the finals at Jackson park, 3 up and 1 to play.

The match was close all the way, with both contestants hitting their wooden club shots well and the winner having the edge in iron play. Although Mrs. Marshall was never ahead of the new champion, she was always close on her heels.

Mrs. Zech finished the morning round 2 up, having scored a medal 78, tying par for the course, to her opponent's 80. She won the third hole with a birdie 3, and the 6th, 7th and 8th with pars. Mrs. Marshall took the 4th and 5th with pars.

Coming in, Mrs. Zech won the 11th and 14th while Mrs. Marshall kept the count even by taking the 12th and 16th.

In the afternoon, Mrs. Marshall went 3 down at the 21st hole, but fought back to carry Mrs. Zech to the 34th green.

THOMAS NAMED HEAD GRID COACH AT U. OF ALABAMA

University, Ala., July 26.—(AP)—Frank W. Thomas, associate coach of the University of Georgia, has been named to succeed Wallace Wade as head football coach of the University of Alabama and will take charge next January, the university athletic commission announced today. The contract carries a three year clause. Thomas was graduated at Notre Dame in 1920 after making an excellent record as a football and baseball star.

Wade announced his resignation some weeks ago to accept the position of head coach at Duke university.

1,470 Girls and Boys Will Race Today

BY WILFRID SMITH.

[Picture in Rotogravure Section.]

Fourteen hundred and seventy youngsters between the ages of 12 and 15, the largest entry in Chicago's swimming history, are eligible for the four events. From Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana, and a score of Illinois cities hundreds will converge on the Lincoln Park Boat club, where at noon today contestants will receive their numbers and be assigned positions in the preliminary heats.

The first race starts at 2 o'clock. Three hours later four champions will be crowned. They will be the speed kings and queens of the first annual TRIBUNE meet.

More than a Speed Test.

The 100 yard races are more than a test of speed. They are tests of ability. Each contestant finishing the race will receive a TRIBUNE merit badge, proof of his ability and an incentive to further competition.

These boys and girls, in the main, are novices. Many have written of their hopes in these races the first in which they have competed. All seek merit badges. A few have championship ambitions, and the hundreds are unanimous in welcoming the opportunity to test their speed and endurance.

The largest crowd ever to watch amateur races is expected to throng the banks of the lagoon as the starter's gun sends the first group splashing away from the barge toward the finish line, the goal of these merit badge swimmers.

In rapid succession other groups will plunge in. Then the winners of the preliminary races will meet in the final races, and from these more expert swimmers will come the champions whose skill will earn them the bronze statues, the rewards of victory.

Second, third, and fourth place fin-

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

With young Cecil Pat Caraway, the southpaw with the accordion delivery, in no mood to permit the enemy much freedom on the base lines, the White Sox had little trouble winning another game yesterday. Only four Senators could solve him for hits, three of them raw flukes, and while this was going on the Pale Hose bunched enough blows to attain a 4 to 1 victory. It made three in a row over the Washington lads and put a depressing crimp in the latter's flirtation with first place.

Caraway was so close to being a perfect workman that there was only one inning in which he actually was staggering under a strain. This was round one, which started with Rice getting a double on a popup lost in the sun by Cissell. Then he walked a couple, with a sacrifice in between, but a double play with the bags loaded let him get away safely. Not another blow was registered against him until the seventh when Harris sent a long fly to center for three bases. The next hit was a bunt by Ruel in the eighth and the fourth a scratch by Bluege which hopped out of Ryan's hands in the ninth.

Sox Score on One Hit.

The Sox attack against old Sam Jones was only a bit more potent than Washington's, but it was timely and properly mixed with a blunder in the hostile defense. The Hose came into possession of a run in the first inning on one hit. For quite a spell it looked as if Caraway would have to make this lone tally win for him, but his mates came through in the sixth when they hung up three more runs on a pair of hits, a pass, and a miscue by Sheriff Harris, which cleaned up the base lines. As is customary in Sox rallies, this one was led by Carl Reynolds, but in so doing he forced himself into retirement with a charley horse in his right leg.

Henry and Marberry are billed for the final today.

The wallop that presented the Sox with their first inning was a double to Philadelphia, Pa., July 26.—Hack Wilson, in a state of ecstasy over a concert by a fraternal band which preceded today's 16 to 2 Cub victory over the Phillies, knocked out three home runs as his part of an impressive lodge demonstration.

The band was neither Moose, nor Elks, nor Eagle, so they weren't even brothers of Hack's. But the pudgy ritualist was charmed none the less, and when he was seen marching jauntily to the musicians' strains before the game it was freely predicted he was in for an inspired day. His first homer came in the opening inning off Collins; the second in the second inning, also off Collins, and the third was off Willoughby in the eighth.

Hartnett, Malone Connect.

Hack, however, was not the only one who got churned up on the lodge proposition. There were Gabby Hartnett, the well known Kiwanis, who smashed his 23d homer in the seventh, and Pat Malone, the black knight of the border, who also rapped out one.

And Pat hung up his thirteen win of the season, too, besides the homer, two singles and a walk.

The Cubs, with this 16 to 2 slaughter today, in which they made 20 hits for 40 bases, completed their second eastern invasion with 13 wins and 11 losses. The three game series with the Phils was the only one they swept, although their four out of five in Brooklyn was impressive enough.

Tomorrow the fellows stop off for a contest in Cincinnati against the Reds, the ornery athletes who whipped them four straight on the second stop of the present long journey. Root will oppose Frey in the Cincy stopover affair.

Cubs Start with Pair.

The Cubs started modestly with two runs in the first inning. Blair singled, went to second when Sigman juggled the ball and to third while Collins was throwing out English. Cuyler was called out on strikes. Then Hack smacked his No. 30, scoring Blair ahead of him. D. Taylor doubled to left center, but was stranded because Grimm fouled to Hurst.

Hartnett opened the big second with a single to left, but was forced by Farrell. Malone then drove the ball over the right field wall, scoring Farrell ahead of him. Blair's second hit in two innings was a double to center. English's easy grounded got past Thevenow, Blair scoring and English reaching second. Cuyler singled to right, scoring English. Hack then accomplished his No. 31. D. Taylor flied to Sigman, but Grimm got credit for a double when Sigman misjudged his long fly. Hartnett walked. Grimm scored, Hartnett went to third and Farrell pulled up at second when Whitney made a wild throw past first after capturing Farrell's grounder. Malone walked, filling the bases and Willoughby relieved Collins. Blair was out, Davis to Hurst.

Lull in the Storm.

After their nine run splurge in the first two innings, the Cubs rested until the fifth when Blair knocked his third hit, stole second while English was striking out, and scored on Cuyler's single to center.

There was more resting in the sixth, but in the seventh our boys stepped out for five runs, featuring Hartnett's No. 23. English started it with a double and went to third while Thevenow was throwing out Cuyler. Wilson walked and D. Taylor rapped out his second double, English scoring and Wilson stopping at third. Grimm singled to right to score Wilson and put D. Taylor on third. Gabby then drove the ball into the left field stand and followed D. Taylor and Grimm across the plate.

Hack's third homer of the game came with two out in the eighth. It was the longest and highest of the three.

CROWD HE'D HAVE LOVED ATTENDS HARMON RITES

10,000 Pay Tribute to Paddy in Stadium.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Paddy Harmon returned to the building that was his pride for the last time yesterday.

The body of the stubborn Irish dreamer who fought to realize his vision of the world's largest sports arena in his own home town was brought back to Chicago Stadium, the $6,000,000 pile of steel and stone which made that vision a reality.

It was one of Paddy's last requests before he died following an automobile crash Tuesday that his body be permitted to lie in state in the Stadium.

For nearly four hours—from the time the funeral cortége came to the Stadium from the chapel at 3604 Ogden avenue until Judge John H. Lyle delivered the brief eulogy—Paddy's people filed past the coffin in the center of the Stadium floor and paid a last tribute.

Where His Dream Came True.

It was fitting that Paddy's body should lie near the center of the Stadium. Here it was that he saw his dream come to life on the night of March 28, 1929, when he stepped into the ring and acknowledged the applause of the 15,000 who had come to see the championship fight between Tommy Loughran and Mickey Walker. That was the biggest night in Paddy's 53 years of life.

Here Paddy ran the six day bike races that had made him famous sixteen years ago at Dexter Park pavilion and later at the Coliseum. Here also he attempted to introduce his "society infield," with its tables and potted palms and restaurant for bike fans. Still later, after Paddy had lost control of the Stadium, he saw the Chicago Blackhawks, a team in which he had no hand, draw a world's record hockey crowd. Basketball, soccer, circuses, and rodeos followed, and while Paddy may have felt frustrated at being barred from supervising them, he always knew that they couldn't have been without his Stadium.

They came from everywhere yesterday to make that last visit to Paddy. During the four hours his body lie in state 10,000 passed through the stadium.

Old Friends Honor Him.

There were men and women who knew him from his boyhood on Vedder street, where he started life selling newspapers and extinguishing the neighborhood gas lights. Others returned from the days when Paddy was a youthful dance hall proprietor out on Milwaukee avenue. Milkmen, printers, street car employés and other night workers who were regular fans at Paddy's six day bike races were there, too. And in the stream were a number of west side kids who hadn't forgotten that Paddy was Santa Claus' best pinch hitter when Christmas didn't look so merry. And with them came business foes of Harmon, men who called him "bull headed," but admired him for it.

Floral tributes from friends, business associates, politicians, and rivals in promotion surrounded the coffin. In the center of these was the bicycle on which Carl Stockholm of Chicago won his first six day victory, decorated with flowers sent by John Chapman of New York, who holds the contracts of all the riders who performed in Harmon's races.

Everybody Called Him "Paddy."

"He was called Paddy from the time he started to toddle around," Judge Lyle said, "and none of us who knew him well would call him by any other name. Paddy—that was his name to public officials, politicians, newspaper reporters, business men, and children. Had anyone called him Mr. Harmon, he probably would have replied in derision, 'Mr. Harmon? Paddy's my name. Don't let that happen again.'

"And if he had a last message to his associates in the conduct of the Stadium, it would have been, 'Hold on to the building, boys. Keep up your courage. It will pan out.'"

Mrs. May Harmon, who was injured in the automobile accident which proved fatal to her husband, attended the services on a wheeled stretcher, accompanied by a physician and nurse.

The pall bearers included Sidney Strotz, president of the Stadium corporation; Judge Lyle, Walter L. Meyer, Otto Baer, Edward J. Geiger, Robert Knight, Charles Camp and Lieut. Charles Welling. Burial was at Oak Ridge cemetery.

He'd Have Liked That Sign.

The one detail in yesterday's services which would have pleased Paddy most—and it may have been an accidental one—was the electric advertising screen which tells of coming events at the stadium. Suspended from the Stadium organ, it faced the coffin. The current had been turned off the last time the sign was used so that the beginning of one sentence was captured. It read:

"This Is the World's Largest——"

STATE OUTDOOR AMATEUR BOXING TITLES AT STAKE

The Illinois state outdoor boxing championships of the Central A. A. U. will be held tomorrow, Tuesday and Wednesday nights at Mills stadium, Kilpatrick and Lake streets.

Proceeds will be used by the Majestic Radio Welfare association for welfare work and by the Central A. A. U. for the advancement of amateur sports.

One hundred forty-one entries, including Bob Store, heavyweight champion of last year; Herbert Derex, Central A. A. U. champion; Marian Matuzak, German heavyweight champion, and Dick Mastro, brother of Earl Mastro, have entered. Teams from all the leading gymnasiums will compete for a team trophy.

THOUSANDS ATTEND HARMON RITES AT STADIUM

Hundreds gather outside the Chicago Stadium, monument to Paddy Harmon, whose body lay in state yesterday in the huge structure he built. More than 10,000 filed past the bier of the sports promoter, who was fatally injured in an automobile accident Tuesday. Burial was at Oak Ridge cemetery.

SHRINERS NAME STEFFEN HEAD OF GRID COMMITTEE

Will H. Wade, general chairman of the Chicago unit of the Shriners Hospitals for Crippled Children, announced yesterday that Judge Walter Steffen, former University of Chicago gridiron star and coach of the Carnegie Tech university football team, has been appointed chairman of the games committee for Chicago's first annual Thanksgiving day football classic. The game will be played at Soldiers' field between West Virginia university and Oregon State college.

The game, for the benefit of the Chicago unit of the Shriners' hospitals, at 2211 North Oak Park avenue, will be the first of a series of annual games between leading college teams of the east and the west. The board of governors of the Chicago unit hospital has leased Soldiers' field from the south park board for each Thanksgiving day for the next ten years.

---at less than a penny a mile!

The bantam Austin offers a new idea about going places!

CONSIDER this new idea of transportation without tonnage, beauty without bulk, mileage with minimum expense... see what it offers you.

First of all... economy. Here is the bantam Austin waiting to take you wherever you wish for a mere ¾ of a cent a mile for gas, oil and tires. It's a car that does fifty miles an hour on the straightaway yet which stretches a gallon of gasoline over forty miles of road as well.

It is one member of the family that seldom needs new shoes. Twenty to forty thousand miles on a set of tires is its usual performance.

Yet the bantam Austin vies in smartness with cars of far more impressive list prices, offers as much of a thrill in its way as the high powered giants, and gives you a sense of perfect control and easy handling that only another Austin can match. Yet it lists for but $445 f.o.b. factory.

As the garage-mate of your larger car, the Austin will pay for itself by sparing the big car the many one and two passenger trips that are so costly in fuel and depreciation.

Certainly it's a car worth seeing. You'll find it waiting for you at the address below.

Come see it! Bring your prejudices with you!

VETS' FAMILIES TO ENJOY GOLDEN GLOVES PROFITS

The profits of the Golden Gloves bouts between Chicago and New York, which were held last March in the Stadium are being used to provide summer outings for the wives, widows and children of war veterans. Arrangements for distribution of the fund was made at a recent meeting of representatives of THE TRIBUNE and the United Charities of Chicago, represented by Samuel Insull Jr.; Joel D. Hunter, general superintendent of the United Charities, and Edwin C. Jones, director of summer outings for the same organization.

Other summer camps are coöperating. They have submitted lists to the United Charities offering places for the dependents of veterans. Approximately 800 places are available. Each outing averages 12 days and the approximate cost is $1 a day.

40 and 8 Received $30,000.

The plan of THE TRIBUNE to expend $16,000, its share of the intercity bouts, on the dependents of veterans, is in accord with the policy followed for three years in distributing the profits from the Chicago preliminary matches. Last April a check for $30,000 was sent to Col. A. A. Sprague, treasurer of the Forty and Eight for maintaining that organization's convalescent camp for war veterans, located on a forest preserve farm in Orland Park at 143d street.

The camp was established in June, 1928, through Capt. James C. Russell, then chef de gare of Voiture 220 of the Forty and Eight; Col. Sprague, Anton J. Cermak, president of the county board, and THE TRIBUNE. Nine thousand dollars raised by the Golden Gloves bouts of 1928 was the nucleus for the camp.

In 1929 the veterans' organization was given $25,000. This year's sum brings the total given the convalescent camp to $64,000.

Include Vets' Families Now.

The profits of the intercity bouts provide opportunity for expansion of the aid given to ex-service men. Through the coöperation of summer camps the dependents of veterans now are included.

Several score of boys, girls, and mothers already are in camp. The remainder will be sent during the next eight weeks.

A partial list of camps and the number they will entertain with funds supplied by the Golden Gloves bouts follows:

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

THE LAY OF THE HOSPITAL RACE.

[Written by Hugh E. Keough—"By Hek"—original conductor of this column until his death. It was first published in the Sporting Journal more than thirty years ago and subsequently reprinted in The Wake during Mr. Keough's régime.]

The ambulance stood near the paddock gate,
The stretcher was close at hand,
And murmurs and squeals of hysterical dames
Came down from the crowded stand.

And Dr. Squibbs said to Dr. Squabbs:
"There'll be practice enough for two—
I'll take the legs and the busted skulls,
The collar bones go for you."

The gamesters down in the slaughtering pen
Looked leery and woebegone,
And some of the pencillers turned their slates,
For the hospital race was on.

The program called it a steeplechase—
That is the conventional name—
But we can call it whatever we please—
The odor is just the same.

This one was rehearsed the night before,
In a small back room somewhere,
And 'twas settled that Smiley should wait on Blink
And that Peeler go out for the air.

'Twas also agreed that The Bat go wide
Of the flags on the far off bend;
That Bourbon should balk at the water jump
And that Guzzle turn end for end.

There was one who wasn't extended a bid
When the caucus was held that night—
An unfortunate fellow called Famishing Flynn,
The owner of Mike the Bite.

Now, Mike the Bite was a maiden coy,
Though he'd raced three years on the flat;
"I'll put him to jumping," said Flynn one day,
"Perhaps he'll be good at that.

"He's jumped the barrier once or twice,
Just look it up in the guide—
And as for jumping a feedman's bill,
Why, he takes that in his stride!"

Mike was the champion no-account in every one's eyes but Flynn's,
But he was "consistent," and that in a horse
Atones for a heap of sins.

Flynn coddled him through all manner of ills
Of liver and lungs and limb;
When equine diseases were flying about,
Mike got what was coming to him.

Quarter cracks, spavins and splints and botts
And several more he'd had;
Then he caught lung fever which left his pipes
Some more than a bit to the bad.

He was nerved behind, he was fired in front
From his pastern joints to his knees;
No wonder the "talent" regarded him
As a putrefied piece of cheese.

A scullion called Mose was given the mount
On the horse with the gangrened legs;
Mose wasn't a lot at the horseback art,
But an artist at frying eggs.

It took four fingers of "kill-me-quick"
To put him on proper edge;
With that in his hold, a five bar gate
Was the same as a two foot hedge.

While the horses walked in the paddock yard,
Awaiting the saddling call,
Flynn hooked his flipper in Mose's arm
And led him within the stall.

"Mose, there is something doing here,"
He said in his softest tones,
"The thing is framed up for Blink to win,
I'm feeling it in my bones.

"Opening up at eight to one,
They have backed her clean out of sight,
And everything looks like a corpse to her
But Slasher and Mike the Bite.

"I saw them setting it in in chunks—
She's backed to a fare-thee-well,
And there wasn't a cent in the ring for her
Last Saturday when she fell!

"And never a word did they say to me—
Oh no, to the dump with Flynn!
They didn't have him to skin.

"Mike the Bite was a joke to them,
And Slasher was only a lob.
Oh, I'd give three fingers from my right hand
If we could upset the job!

"Now listen, Mose, we can do it too—
The question is up to you.
You can run it out on that crooked bunch
If you do what I tell you to do.

"As a jumping jock, you are rotten, Mose,
In putting you up, I'm a jay;
For you couldn't ride in a Burton car
Strapped down to a bale of hay.

"The horse is good. For once I think
I've got him in perfect trim;
He will run every inch if his nigh fore-leg
Doesn't get too hot for him.

"Moreover, Mose, I've slipped him a charge
That would blow up a national bank,
And when it gets to working for all it's worth,
You will find him a trifle rank.

"Just take a good tight hold of his head
And keep him within the flags,
And draw your skillet and bust his slats
If you find that he loafs or lags.

"When the pill goes off, which I think it will
'Bout the second turn of the course,
You take a good hold with your hands and teeth,
For then he'll be Hawkins' horse.

"He's as good as one hundred to one to win.
(A funny guy making a book
Says that means twenty to one the horse
And eighty to one the cook.)

"I've made an agent from up the pike
Dig down in his moldy hoard
And bet six hundred straight, place and show—
Two hundred across the board.

"There goes the bugle! Remember, Mose!
The ticket is in your boot.
You keep him standing and keep him straight—
I'll get on the fence and root."

The cavalcade filed through the paddock gate
And steered for the lower turn,
With a ragged collection of silks aloft
And an odor of drugs astern.

Never, I ween, was a tougher lot,
Surmounted by coons and Turks,
Stopped on the straight and narrow path
That leads to the glucose works.

A ribald shout or a mocking cheer
Saluted each equine vag,
And each boy thereon as the bunch went by
On the way to the man with the flag.

"Line up, now; line up, now," the starter cried,
"Or I'll put you all on the ground!
Jones, what are you doing with Peeler, there?
Why don't you turn him around?

"Now, look at that Guinea on Thompson's mare,
And that lobster aboard of The Rat!
Say, Hogan, get straight with that goat of yours,
Or it's you and me to the mat.

"Couldn't help it, eh? O, you come off;
Don't give me that old bull con!
Now, steady there, steady! Whoa up, whoa up!
Come on there, come on! Go on!"

'Way back in the dope of a day long dead,
Which haply you have forgot,
You'll find the tale of this steeplechase
In figures and notes—and rot.

The record shows that a horse "ran out,"
And that others "refused" or "fell."
The dope nails down all the callous facts,
But it doesn't record the smell.

It doesn't show when the pill went off
In the carcass of Mike the Bite,
And it doesn't bring Chef Mose out strong
In the glare of heroic light.

It doesn't record the shudders and thrills
That swept through the frenzied mob,
Nor gives it a hint of the deep chagrin
Of the fellows who framed the job.

However, it shows that Old Mike came down
Like the White Ghost on a tear,
And caught Blink tired at the water jump,
And passed her out in the air.

It says in a note that the cook shook loose,
But hung till the line was passed,
And leaves me to tell you that Famishing Flynn
Was square with the world at last.

CARAWAY HOLDS GRIFFS TO 4 HITS; SOX WIN, 4 TO 1

center by Watwood. A bunt by Mulleavey shunted him to third and he romped home while Reynolds was being pegged out by Cronin. Then Jones settled down to some real pitching and maintained almost as swift a pace as Caraway. In the next four chapters the Hose reached the one time Yankee star for only one single, a tap bounced into center by Reynolds in the fourth.

Reynolds Hits Double.

Reynolds' method of touching off the big bomb under Jones in the profitable sixth was to double to the left field wall with one out. When he reached second he wigwagged for relief and Giant Man Fothergill was sent forth to run for him. Jones purposely passed Jolley, the idea being that Barnes would ground into a double play. Barnes fooled his former mates. He whacked a single to center and Harris let the ball roll to the fence. By the time it was back to the infield everybody, including Barnes, was home.

It was Harris' triple in the seventh that led to Washington's only tally. Just as the runner reached third Cissell took the return throw and nonchalantly rolled it toward the mound. Harris promptly ran home on the blunder. The scratch hit by Ruel, who batted for Jones, almost became a run in the eighth. Caraway threw the bunt into right field, letting the runner reach third with one out. He went no further. Then Caraway walked Cronin in the ninth, but surrounded the pass with strikeouts. Next was Bluege's infield tap, whereupon Cecil Pat ended the matinee with Hayes flying to center.

McGRAW LOSES HOPE OF TAKING NATIONAL FLAG

MONTREAL, Que., July 26.—[U. P.]—John J. McGraw, manager of the New York Giants, has abandoned hope of winning the 1930 National league pennant and believes the Philadelphia Athletics will prove too strong for the National league entrant in the world series.

"The Giants need pitchers," he said in explaining his visit to Montreal and his readiness to concede defeat in the National league race. "My team would have had good chance in winning the flag if the pitchers had come through. This time last year my best hurlers had won a lot more games.

"As for the world's series, the Athletics have the class, and Connie Mack is the best manager of them all.

"The rabbit ball and poor umpiring are making baseball unpopular. I think the club owners ought to get together on the ball. It has taken the confidence out of the pitchers and is so lively the fielders cannot handle it. Bunting is gone and base running has disappeared. The public liked that."

Beats Curate by Length; The Nut Is Third.

the front, and when he sailed on past Lady Broadcast the Lady was all through. She quit all of a sudden, and My Dandy moved into second place, and Finnerty, coming on the outside with Pigeon Hole, was running third. William T. had started to move up and so had Paul Bunyan.

When Curate hit the lower bend two lengths in front it looked like the Widener 4 year old was as good as home. Pigeon Hole had by this time moved into second place, and The Nut had worked his way up third, going on past the fast running My Dandy.

Finnerty shot Pigeon Hole up toward the leader at the eighth pole. As Pigeon Hole moved up Jockey McCoy on Curate became aware that danger of defeat was at hand and he took Curate out to the center of the track, carrying Pigeon Hole far wide.

But Pigeon Hole kept on coming, and at the sixteenth hole had headed Curate. It was easy for Finnerty to guide him on home and to whip Curate by a length. The stewards suspended Jockey McCoy for six days for carrying Pigeon Hole wide. Curate had no trouble holding The Nut safe, and while Paul Bunyan was coming fast near the end he was out of third place by two lengths and a half when the finish came.

Pigeon Hole's victory came just a week after he had run a sensational mile in 1:36 to beat Hot Toddy, Jock, and Cog Air. On that occasion he carried 112 pounds. In the Handicap he was asked to pick up only 105 pounds. Curate had up 108 pounds, and the Nut, 114. Pigeon Hole's time yesterday was 2:07 1-5. Curate made a very fast run, passing the three-quarters in 1:12 4-5 and the mile in 1:39 2-5, and it was this early speed that probably caused him to fall a victim of Pigeon Hole's final challenge.

Widener Jumper Scores.

Joseph E. Widener's aged jumper, Arc Light, won the first running of the $5,000 added North Shore steeplechase over the 2 mile course. Arc Light was the heavily backed favorite, and came from behind at the 10th jump after his stablemate, Milan, had made all the pace.

Arc Light won by five lengths from Mrs. Helen Hay Whitney's Valorous. Personality was third. Ivan Parke, who rode Valorous, slipped out of the saddle at the eighth jump, but clung to his mount's neck and threw himself back into the saddle. He then rallied Valorous and was gaining on the leader at the finish. It was the finest exhibition of horsemanship shown in the steeplechases run here. Fair Class was the only casualty, going down at the first jump, but his rider, E. Fitzpatrick, escaped without injury. Arc Light paid $3.96 in the mutuels.

Playground of Middle West Busy as Ever

BY BOB BECKER.

The middle west's largest and most attractive school of campcraft and canoeing is running full blast this summer after receiving the official stamp of approval from congress.

This "school" is the Superior National forest along the northern boundary of Minnesota, an area that because of its wilderness atmosphere, countless lakes and streams, abundant wild life and opportunities for canoeing and camping far from crowds, is virtually a "finishing school" for those outdoor fans who want to learn more about canoe cruising, the tricks of living outdoors, and how to fool several species of fish that inhabit the hundreds of square miles of water up there along the boundary.

Congress Preserves Wilderness.

And now congress has acted to preserve and enlarge that wonderful wilderness of timber and water in northern Minnesota by the passage of the Shipstead-Newton-Nolan bill. This insures the future of the most beautiful, natural "school" of camping, woodcraft and canoeing in the middle west.

We should have several more here in the middle west. Possibly they will come. But, even if they don't, the Mississippi valley has one playground that cannot be equaled anywhere in the United States.

Place for Vacation.

After pushing a paddle over many a mile of canoe routes in the Superior National forest and the Quetico park and tenting near lovely fishing holes, we have urged outdoor fans to visit this country for camping, canoeing, and fishing. Shove off from Winton, Minn., and lose yourself for two weeks with jumping bass, smashing northern pike, and big moose for company.

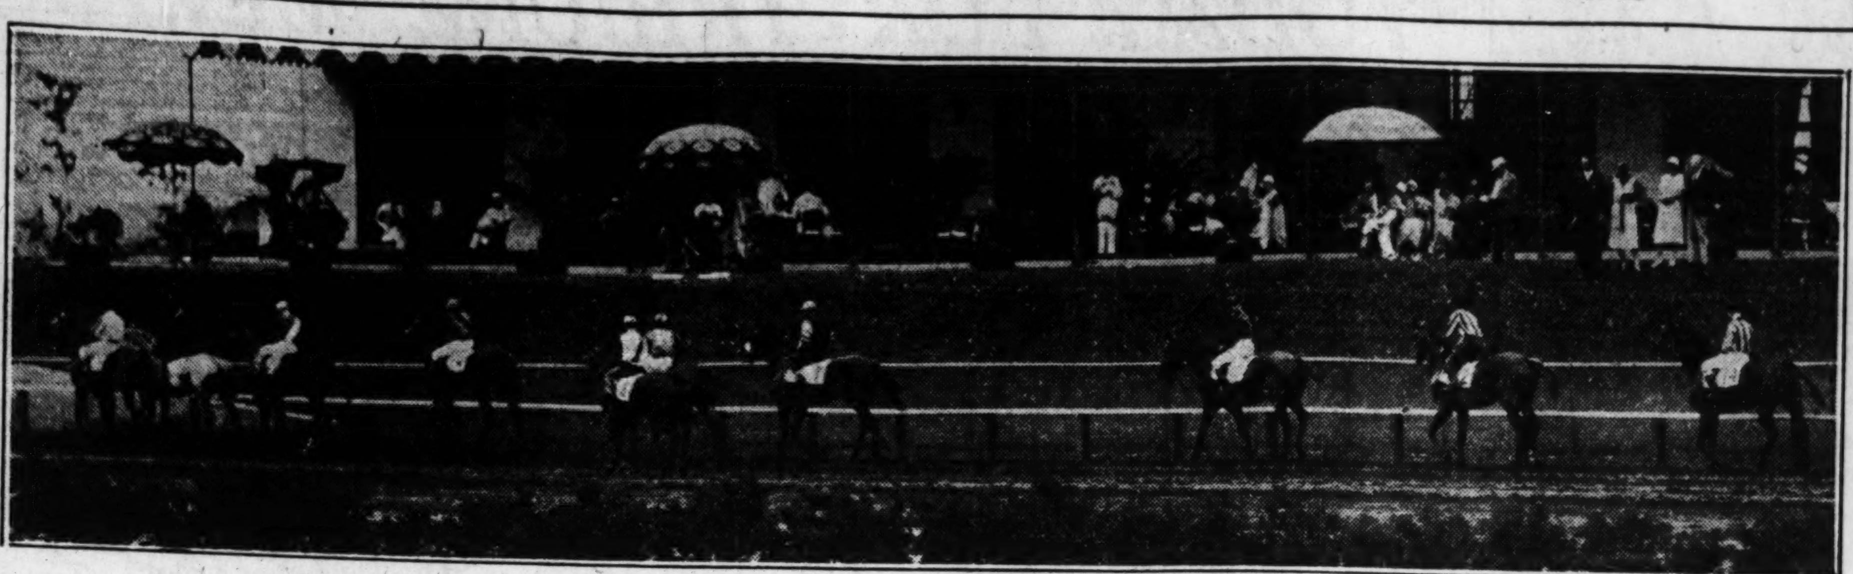
When you are up there, by all means get acquainted with one or two of the foresters who roam that northern wilderness if you want to meet some interesting characters and hear some good yarns of the northland.

HAT SAWYER, 16, TAKES TITLE IN MINNESOTA GOLF

Rochester, Minn., July 26.—(AP)—A 16 year old youth, Hat Sawyer, of Minneapolis ruled tonight as king of Minnesota amateur golfers, winning the state amateur championship over Art Tverss, Minneapolis, 6 and 4, at the Rochester Country club course today.

The new champion is the youngest ever to hold the title. The new champion was forced to display a sensational comeback in the morning round. Three down going to the 14th, Sawyer won the next four holes to start the final round one up.

BEFORE PIGEON HOLE SHOWED HIS HEELS TO HANDICAP STARS



When the field paraded past the Post and Paddock club most of those in the crowd of 25,000 still expected Sun Beau to win the $34,000 Arlington handicap, but their hopes were dashed a few minutes later when Pigeon Hole led ten other thoroughbred stars across the finish line. Curate, second choice, was a length behind the winner, and The Nut wound up third. Sun Beau found the heavy impost of 125 pounds too big a package or didn't fancy the muddy track and ran tenth. The race over a mile and a quarter was run in 2:07 1-5 by Pigeon Hole, which paid $23.74 for $2 in the mutuels.

Minneapolis, Minn., July 26.—(AP)—Joe Armstrong, St. Paul, playing a strong game despite his 43 years, today won the Northwestern Tennis association's singles championship for the ninth time when he defeated Leslie Johnson, Minneapolis, 6-1, 3-6, 6-1, 6-3.

Miss Marguerite Davis, St. Paul, won the Northwest Women's singles title for the 13th time by defeating Miss Selma Kenefio, 16 year old Iowa State champion. The scores were 6-3, 4-6, 7-5.

South Sends 3 More Horses to Arlington

Three of Kentucky's best two year olds will arrive at Arlington tomorrow to take part in the Post and Paddock stakes to be run on the final day of the Arlington season next Saturday afternoon. Those making the trip are Betty Derr, winner of the Debutante stakes at Churchill Downs and Washington Park and of the Clipsetta stakes at Latonia; Back Log, victor in the Bass Ford Manor stakes at Churchill Downs and in the Harold stakes at Latonia, and Don Leon, who has been close up in all the Kentucky juvenile stake events this year.

Siskin, the winner of the Agua Caliente Futurity and of the Hyde Park stakes at Arlington, worked brilliantly over the Arlington course yesterday for the Post and Paddock engagement, turning five furlongs in 1:00 4-5 easily, and pulled up six furlongs in 1:14 2-5. Other leading Post and Paddock candidates are Risque, Outbound, Insco, Pittsburgher, Birthday Gift, B'ar Hunter and Priory. It will be the richest two year old race run in the west this year and may have a gross value of $30,000.

Flag Bearer, a full brother to My Dandy, and at $49.32 in the betting, made a run away of the six furlong third race called the Dash. He was ten lengths in front most of the way. While he was stopping near the end, he managed to beat the Audley Farm stable's Bobashela by two lengths. Blackwood landed third money and Eskimo, the favorite, was fourth. Flag Bearer ran the three-quarters of a mile over the muddy course in 1:13. He was ridden by Jockey M. Knight.

Club enclosure spectators included Sam Insull, James Simpson, chairman of the board of directors of Marshall Field corporation; Gen. Roy D. Keehn, Lawrence Stern, Val Crane, H. C. Watts, Walcott Blair, William Collins, John R. Thompson Jr., E. N. Hurley, C. N. Mather, Morris Vehon, Vincent Bendix, John E. Merrill, Ben F. Stein, Mr. and Mrs. H. Teller Archibald, Mr. and Mrs. George E. Van Hagen Jr., A. Watson Armour, Laurance Armour, Mrs. Lester Armour, J. Clarke Dean, August Gatzert, John P. Kellogg, Mrs. Joseph Lewis, Mrs. Mary Lewis, Mrs. Elizabeth Belknap, Leonard Florsheim, Miss Jessie Bond, Mrs. Otto Lehmann, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Austin Niblack, Mrs. H. H. Lobdell, Mrs. John R. Thompson, Mrs. Harry Thomas, and Lieut. Gov. Fred Sterling.

Albert D. Lasker, one of the directors, had as a luncheon guest Felix Lowy, vice president of the Colgate-Palmolive company. Mr. Lowy is spending a vacation in the north Wisconsin woods. He motored down to see the Arlington handicap renewal when Mr. Lasker told him what a fine race the gallop of a mile and a quarter was going to be.

Four three year olds went to the post in the Combat purse at a mile, which was fourth on the program. High Foot, scratched out of the Arlington handicap, was in front all the way and beat Dark Entry, the Virginia Derby winner, by two lengths. Uncle Luther, a noted mud runner from Kentucky, was third. High Foot ran the mile over the muddy course in the good time of 1:40 2-5. He was backed stoutly and paid $4.16.

According to Trainer Patsy Dwyer, Snowflake came out of her disappointing race of last Friday in good condition. He is of the opinion that she has been in training too long and the American Coaching Club Oaks winner likely will be given a long rest.

DON LEON WINS $7,540 RACE AT LATONIA TRACK

Latonia, Ky., July 26.—(AP)—Don Leon, rapidly forging to the front as a ranking juvenile of the midwestern turf, more than doubled his earnings today when he won the ninth running of the Cincinnati trophy, worth $7,540, at Latonia. His previous winnings for R. W. Collins totaled $6,450, accumulated from three firsts, one second and two thirds in seven starts.

Fourteen two-year olds accepted the six furlong issue and they were off in perfect alignment. Don Leon was the first to show in front with Harry Payne Whitney's Elysium close up and Charles Nuckold's Cousin Joe running in third place. They finished in that order.

McCrossen, who had the mount on the winner, just eased the Collins' youngster along and at the end was galloping easily. Elysium made a weak effort to close the gap in the last sixteenth, but was not equal to the task.

Don Leon stepped the six furlongs in 1:14, over a track which was considered fast.

Race Horse Prices Slashed by Hard Pressed Germans

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, July 26.—Bargains in race horses can be had in Germany now. Dull times make it difficult for stable owners to provide the oats, stables and attendants, and they are selling out to the highest bidders.

Orgie, a famous stud horse, was sold recently at auction and brought the highest price of the day, $675. Peter Harvester, a ranking trotting horse, sold for $155. Many a good horse of lesser fame has been selling for around one hundred dollars.

RUPTURE

Don't submit to avoidable operations or the use of antiquated trusses, as they all set where the lump is and not where the opening is. The opening is seldom larger than a dime no matter the size of the rupture, and all cases can be retained with the end of a lead pencil. "The Spermatic Shield-Complex in combination with the Retiner-Simplex (patent No. 747247, No. 1237709 and other patents pending)—a scientific achievement in a highly specialized art. It will not only retain any case of rupture perfectly, but contracts the opening in 10 days on the average case. Infinitely superior to any instrument method or operation and producing results in no other way obtainable. All cases are secure a lifetime as against further trouble or expense. Large or difficult cases or incisional rupture (following operations) specially solicited. This instrument received the only award in England and in Spain, producing results without surgery, injection, medical treatment or prescriptions with distinguished personal patrons of all nations. *See Booklet on "The Fallacy of Surgical Procedure." LA BARBA PLANS TO FIGHT MASTRO, THEN CHOCOLATE

A manager is generally conceded to be the one man who knows his fighter. Boxing fans agree this is true of George Blake. Blake pilots young Fidel La Barba, the west coast Italian who tackles Earl Mastro in the ten round windup to Sammy Wolff's first promotional venture in the Chicago Stadium on Thursday, Aug. 7.

Blake has had charge of La Barba since the tiny Italian was 15 years old and first hankered for a place on the American Olympic team. Blake drilled him for the tryouts and saw him win the international flyweight championship. Then he brought La Barba into the professional field with equal success.

Comes Back as Feather.

But La Barba was growing too fast to hold the flyweight title long, and soon he was bereft of his crown and enrolled in Stanford university, where he paid his tuition with money that had come to him in the ring.

They all try to come back some time, however, and Fidel, whom Blake calls "Fiddle," was no exception. He came back as a featherweight. Today he stands on the threshold of another title match, provided he can get rid of Mastro.

"Fiddle," Blake said yesterday, "is one of the three greatest featherweight boxers. The other two are Chocolate and Mastro.

"Because of that," Blake continued, "this match is the best that could be made in the division at this time, because a bout between Chocolate and either Mastro or La Barba is impossible at the moment. But we will get Chocolate. In fact we are matched with him in the Garden for Oct. 1.

La Barba Arrives Monday.

"Now about La Barba. Fiddle is better than any time in his life. He is punching harder than any featherweight I have seen. And all the old speed he had as a flyweight has stayed right with him.

"We don't expect Mastro to be easy, but we do expect to win. Fiddle will be here Monday."

Duly informed of La Barba's great condition, Mastro bore down in his drill yesterday at Barry's gym, where he has been training for a week.

MOTORS — TRAFFIC — HIGHWAYS

PARKING PLACES INCREASING, BUT NOT FAST ENOUGH

Survey Shows Need for More Facilities.

BY HAL FOUST.

Private parking facilities in the central business district are increasing rapidly, but not so fast as the growth in the demand for car storage space. This is shown in a survey just completed by the traffic division of the bureau of streets of the department of public works.

The area covered by the survey is bounded by Grand avenue, Lake Michigan, Roosevelt road and the Chicago river, and in addition the near west side between the Chicago river and Des Plaines street from Lake street to Harrison street.

It was found that in this district there are 105 establishments offering automobile storage, of which 64 are parking lots and 41 garage buildings. This is an increase in three years of 30 parking lots and 15 garage buildings.

Capacity for 20,181 Cars.

The present physical capacity of these facilities is 20,181 cars, divided as follows: 8,140 in parking lots and 12,041 in garage buildings. This is an increase in capacity over 1927, according to the survey, of approximately 6,920 cars, or 52 per cent.

The lots and garages are not always occupied to their capacity, which could not be expected any more than that the railroad trains should be able to sell every seat. The unused capacity is divided as follows: Parking lots, 1,160 storage spaces; garages, 2,659.

While the capacity of the storage facilities in the central district has increased 6,920 cars, the unused portion of these facilities has increased only 1,798 in the last three years. A 1927 survey showed a total of 11,240 motor vehicles being stored in this area daily, while the 1930 survey shows a total of 16,362 daily patrons, an increase of 5,122 cars or 46 per cent.

Traffic Increasing.

This increase, the traffic division concludes, is due to the larger volume of passenger car movement into the district. The 1929 cordon count indicated an increase of 22 per cent over 1926 in the number of motor vehicles entering the central business district.

The city's survey divided the business district into four sections. In the area bounded on the west and on the north by the Chicago river, on the east by Lake Michigan, and the south by Harrison street there are 24 parking lots with a capacity of 4,895, and 22 garages that can storage 7,956 cars.

Between Grand avenue on the north, Lake Michigan on the east, and the river on the south and west there are four lots with 146 car capacity and ten buildings with 1,830 car spaces.

West of the river and east of Des Plaines street between Harrison and Lake streets 18 lots will hold 1,964 cars and there are three buildings that will serve 700 machines.

Between Lake Michigan and the river, from Harrison street south to Roosevelt road, there are eighteen lots for 1,135 cars and six buildings for 1,555 vehicles.

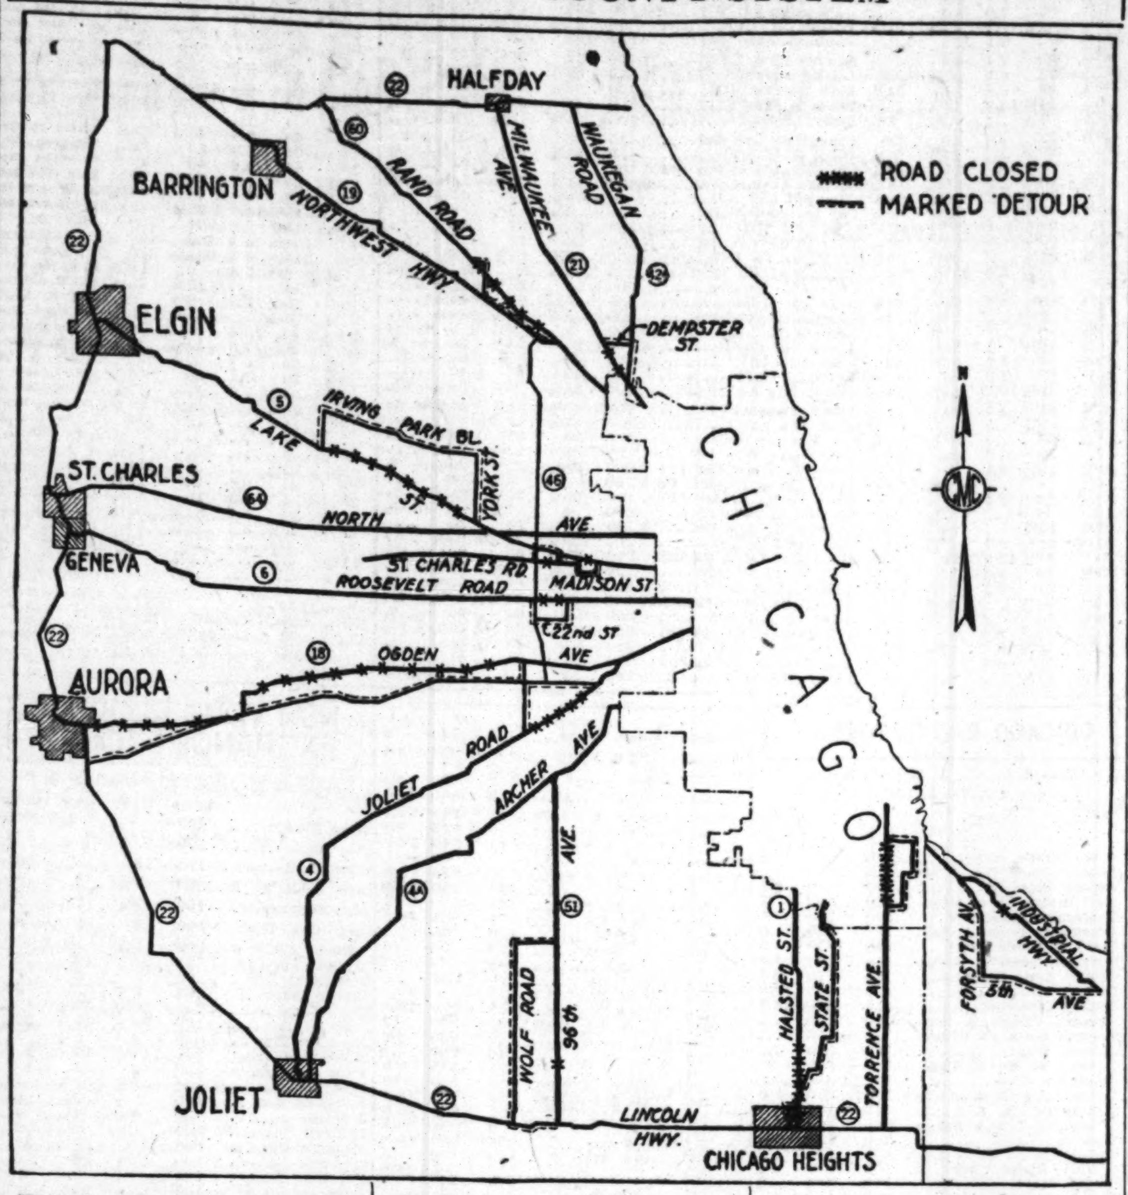
The Chicago Motor club, in an independent survey of car storage facilities in the central business district, also reported on the fees charged. Its survey, covering an area bounded by Lake Michigan, Grand avenue, Des Plaines street, and Roosevelt road, reported parking space for 19,303 cars, with free space for 3,700 automobiles.

The club reported that Grant park will store 2,000 cars in free space and that the loop proper, with the park, has pay stations for 5,438 automobiles with the average fee of 62 cents for one hour, 63 cents for two hours, 85 cents for eight hours, and $1.32 for 24 hours.

Outside of the loop and south of Grand avenue, east of Canal street and north of Harrison street, the motor club found free space for 1,700 machines and rented stalls for 7,013 vehicles, with an average fee of 50 cents for one hour, 53 cents for two hours, 70 cents for eight hours, and $1.22 for 24 hours. The lower level of Wacker drive is the main free space in this area.

In a zone still farther from the loop but within Chicago avenue, Des Plaines street, and Roosevelt road area, the club found storage facilities for 3,152 cars at an average fee of 45 cents for one or two hours.

DETOURS IN COUNTY SYSTEM



With highway construction closing many of the important roads into the city, the Chicago Motor club yesterday called attention to the need for better routing of some of the detours. A summary of a bulletin from the club follows:

U. S. 12 and 20—Standard Dickey Road.

The bridge is closed over the U. S. canal at East Chicago. The detour is marked south over Forsyth avenue to Michigan avenue and east over Michigan avenue and 5th avenue to U. S. 12 and 20 in Gary. The Chicago Motor club suggests that a better route would be south over U. S. 41 [Calumet avenue] to Michigan avenue and so east.

Torrence Avenue.

Torrence avenue is closed between 106th street and 130th street for repairing along the Ford plant. The detour is marked east over 106th street to Avenue O and south over Avenue O, Burley avenue and Carondelet avenue to 130th street and west on 130th street to Torrence avenue.

Illinois 1—Halsted Street.

Route 1 is closed between the Homewood-Lansing road and Chicago Heights for widening. The marked detour is southeast over Michigan City road to State street and south on State street to Joe Orr road at Halsted street. The Chicago Motor club suggests that a better detour might be had by routing traffic south on Halsted street and west over the Homewood-Lansing road to the Dixie highway and south on the Dixie highway.

Illinois 51—Kean Avenue.

This highway is closed between 143d street and route 22 [Lincoln highway] to permit the construction of a grade seperation at the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railroad. The detour follows 143d street west to Wolf road and Wolf road to the Lincoln highway and the Lincoln highway east to route 51.

Illinois 4—Joliet Road.

Route 4 is closed for widening between Willow Springs road and Lawndale avenue. The marked detour is 47th street from route 4 west to Willow Springs road and south on Willow Springs road again to route 4.

Illinois 18—Ogden Avenue.

Closed between Hinsdale and Aurora for widening. The detour is marked south over Willow Springs road to 47th street, west on 47th street and Naperville road to Naperville and west from Naperville over the Oswego road to route 22 and north on route 22 to Aurora.

Illinois 55—22d Street.

Closed at the Des Plaines river. The detour is south over Des Plaines avenue to 31st street, west on 31st street to 1st avenue and north on 1st avenue to 22d street.

Illinois 6—Roosevelt Road.

Closed for reconstruction between 17th avenue and Mannheim road. Motorists are routed south over 17th avenue to 22d street, west on 22d street to Mannheim road and north on Mannheim road to Roosevelt road.

St. Charles Road.

Closed for widening between 25th avenue and Mannheim road. The detour is marked north over 25th avenue to Lake street, west on Lake street to Mannheim road and south on Mannheim road to St. Charles road.

Illinois 5—Lake Street.

Closed from the Des Plaines river to Ninth avenue in Maywood for reconstruction. Traffic is routed south on Thatcher avenue to Madison street, west on Madison street to Ninth avenue and north on Ninth avenue to Lake street. Lake street is also closed for widening between York road and Roselle road in Bloomingdale. The detour is marked north over York road to Irving Park boulevard and west on Irving Park boulevard to Roselle road, south on Roselle road to Lake street. The Chicago Motor club suggests that motorists go north on Harlem avenue to North avenue and west on North avenue and St. Charles road [Illinois 64] to St. Charles and north on route 22 from St. Charles to Elgin. This route is slightly longer but permits much faster travel.

Illinois 60—Rand Road.

Closed for widening and reconstruction from River road to Euclid avenue, Arlington Heights. The detour is marked northwest on route 19 to the Elmhurst road, north on Elmhurst road to Euclid avenue and west on Euclid avenue to Rand road.

Illinois 21—Milwaukee Avenue.

Closed for widening between Waukegan road and Dempster street. The detour follows Waukegan road north to Dempster street and Dempster street west to Milwaukee avenue.

In addition to these major detours, 95th street is closed between Colfax and Ewing avenues; 123d street is closed between Harlem avenue and 96th avenue; Ridgeland avenue is closed between North avenue and Grand avenue and at the Chicago and North Western railroad just south of the Northwest highway; Lincoln avenue is closed between Kedzie and Peterson, and Railroad avenue in Evanston is closed between McCormick boulevard and Isabella street.

SPEED TRAP AT LAKE VILLA, SAYS WISCONSIN MAN

Milwaukee, Wis., July 26.—[Special.]—Belief that a speed trap is operating at Lake Villa, Ill., on Illinois highway 21 was expressed here today by S. H. Harris of Waterford and Milwaukee, as a result of his experiences there Saturday, July 19. Mr. Harris charges that he was stopped by F. Valenta, Illinois state highway policeman, as he drove into Lake Villa and forced to return with him to Justice of the Peace C. H. Keller, where he paid a fine of $10 and $5 costs as an alternative to posting a $10 bond and returning for trial.

Valenta had been following another motorist, Clifford P. Owen, 5946 Race avenue, Chicago, Harris said, and had stopped him before Harris drove up. He ordered him to wait and a second highway policeman, T. Tetwiler, appeared. Owen and Harris both were taken before the justice of the peace. Owen was offered the alternative of a fine and $10 and costs or putting up a $25 bond, Harris said.

The two policmen first charged Harris with speeding, he said, but when he pointed out that neither had seen him driving they changed the charge to reckless driving, for which he paid a fine rather than be delayed in his trip.

CITY'S STREETS WEAKEST LINK IN ROAD PLAN

Superhighways Needed to Relieve Congestion.

The widening of Chicago's arterial highways, valuable as it is, does not constitute the completion of a satisfactory metropolitan road system. The delays and hazards of the city streets will remain as an obstacle to efficient motor transportation, both passenger and freight, suburban, interurban, and interstate, as well as intra-urban.

The weakest link in the nation's most important farm to market roads—the pavements connecting the world's richest farm country with the world's greatest agricultural mart—will be Chicago's streets.

"The city streets connecting with the rural highways can not carry their present loads," said Eugene Taylor, manager of the Chicago plan commission. "With the capacity of the country roads more than doubled by widening, the economic loss from delays and hazards within Chicago will be multiplied.

Increased Traffic Seen.

"Furthermore, the bus and truck business, growing by leaps and bounds, is becoming so important that a community's commercial future depends upon its facilities for vehicular transportation. Chicago gained its present position by being the world's greatest railroad center. To retain this position, it must be alert to its need for modern pavements."

A substantial increase in Chicago traffic through the widening of the rural roads is an obvious forecast. The average daily traffic at the city limits today is 250,800 vehicles. Gov. Emmerson is widening the radial highways from the city limits to thirty or forty miles from Chicago during 1930 and 1931. Each of the eleven radials on the program will be able to carry more than twice its present load.

The Chicago Motor club is gaining public support for a program for the state to extend the widening in 1932 and 1933 to approximately 150 miles from the city. This will draw traffic from a larger area.

Two Highways Defeated.

The Chicago plan commission would tap these rural roads at eleven places with broad pavements with continuous grade separation leading into and through the city. Progress is being made on only two of these superhighways, the outer drive to the north and the one to the south. Bond issues for two others, the Austin-Kinzie and the Avondale projects, were defeated at the polls.

The complete system proposed for Chicago is shown in the map accompanying this article.

"These express roads," said Mr. Taylor, "should be extended to the perimeter of the metropolitan district with continuous grade separation. By removing all cross traffic and pedestrians from the pavements, automobiles could travel practically to the lake front at the speeds they now enjoy on the open road.

"The pavements must be broad enough to furnish separate lanes for the freight traffic and for the fast passenger cars. Their alignments must permit the 45, 50, and 60 miles an hour that are common speeds on the open road today.

"Access to these express roads would be at specific points, somewhat analogous to stations on the railroad. These would be at intersections with important routes, at villages, and at convenient intervals in Chicago. But there should be no cross traffic, access being by means of ramps at grade separations, as on the outer drive at 23d and 39th streets.

"The superhighways should be extended into the country, but the construction should start in the city. In the last ten years highway construction has been concentrated upon the building of country roads. Today the weakest point of our highway system is within municipalities.

"Let's start building where congestion is greatest. Let's be prepared to handle the traffic increases as we draw more vehicles into the city with improved country roads."

Financing Big Problem.

Finances rather than engineering is the big problem. Authorities agree that the costs should be distributed in proportion to benefits. The express routes from the perimeter of the metropolitan area virtually to the lake front would benefit half the state, making suburban residential property of farms within a hundred miles of the city by bringing them within easy driving distance of places of employment in Chicago.

Most experts agree that an equitable apportioning of the cost would be distributed among the state, the county, the city, and special assessment for abutting property. Since interstate traffic would also benefit, the government should contribute, just as it now spends millions of road money on projects of secondary importance.

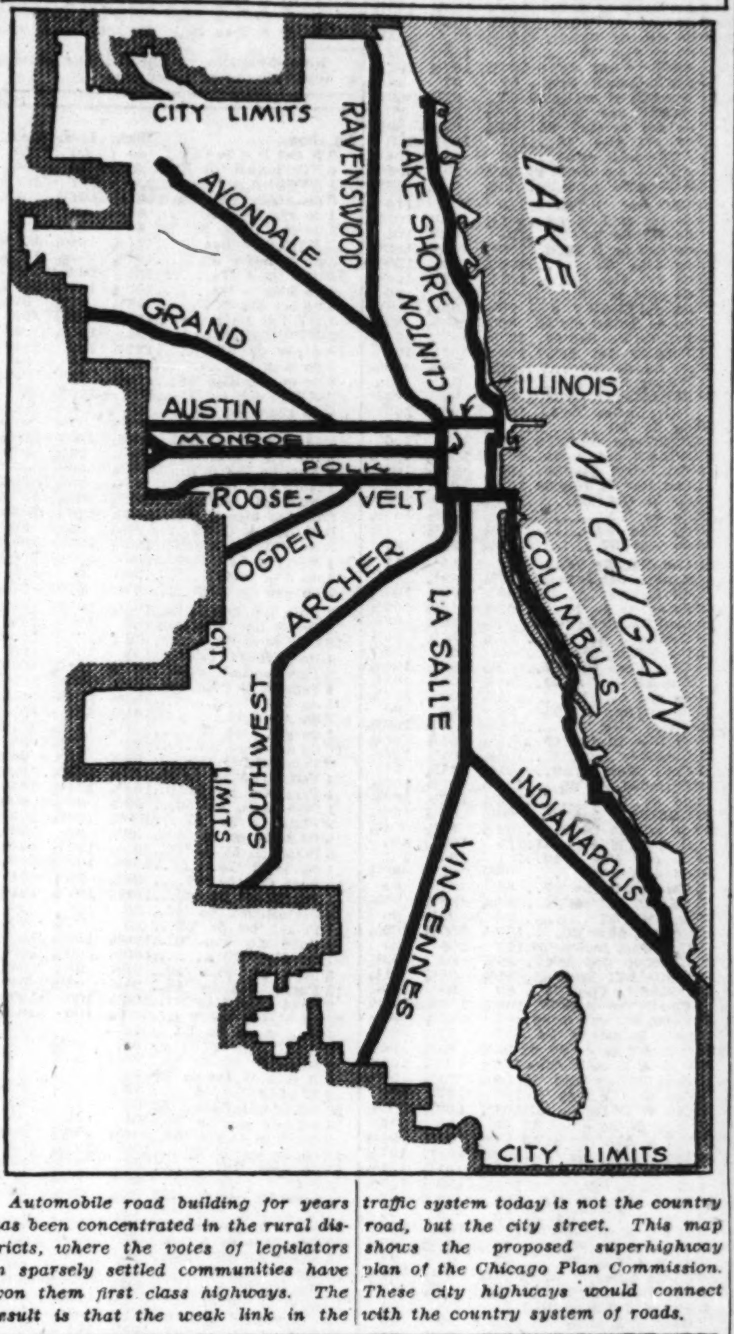
Detroit has a comprehensive plan for the future of its streets. The state of Michigan has promised to pay half the cost for widening state highways into and through the city. Wayne county this fall will vote on an $80,000,000 bond issue, to be supplemented by $20,000,000 in special assessment, for the purchase of 204 foot rights of way for the extension of the county's superhighways.

THREE MEETINGS ON ROAD PLAN ARE SCHEDULED

Three meetings will be held this week in behalf of the road widening plan of the Chicago Motor club. The first meeting of the week will be held in Danville on Wednesday, the second in Milwaukee Thursday, and the third in Madison Friday.

Automobile clubs affiliated with the American Automobile association will foster the meetings in Wisconsin, which will be held for the purpose of enlisting the aid of Wisconsin road building officials in tying on to the forty foot roads which Illinois is expected to build.

PROPOSED SUPERHIGHWAYS



Automobile road building for years has been concentrated in the rural districts, where the votes of legislators in sparsely settled communities have won them first class highways. The result is that the weak link in the traffic system today is not the country road, but the city street. This map shows the proposed superhighway plan of the Chicago Plan Commission. These city highways would connect with the country system of roads.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

WANTS LOOP PARKING.

Chicago, July 24.—Why not try to change traffic rules in Chicago's loop and stimulate business by giving the customer owning a car the chance to park for a few minutes to make a purchase? Are the State street merchants awake or not? WORRIED.

ALL NIGHT PARKING.

Chicago, July 23.—I see that the racketeers have won, as usual. The other morning the officers were waiting on a great number of streets on the north side giving tickets to any automobilist that had parked along the curb all night.

So the garage association is having the city policemen work for it. I do not presume there are over 2,000 garages in Chicago, and there must be 30,000 to 40,000 automobilists who have cars, and who park them in front of their homes all night. And these 2,000 garage owners, with the aid of city authorities, are penalizing the automobilists and using the city force to levy on them.

If the number of police who are assigned to sit all day and catch these automobilists as they drive away in their cars would be assigned to catch thieves, pickpockets, gunmen, etc., there would be less murders and criminal rascality going on in the city. S. S. BERRY.

COUNTY'S ROUTE MARKERS.

Hammond, Ind., July 21.—Please inform the undersigned the meaning of your recent concrete road markers, such as PI, PK, PE, and others. Every one I inquired was unable to give me the desired information. PAUL B. LIPINSKI.

YOU TELL 'EM.

Chicago, July 22.—I am a very interested reader of your articles appearing each Sunday. Here is a subject I think should be looked into. It's wonderful all the roads and streets we have around dear old Chicago, and the way the motor clubs and road authorities are plugging for wider ones, but not a word is said about fixing some of the old ones. For example, drive west on Marquette road [67th] from California to Kedzie and back to California at 20 miles per hour [I don't believe any one could drive faster and have his means of transportation hold together] and it's one sweet mile. Some of the excavations are 14 inches deep in some spots, and after dropping a car into one of these it's a wonder how they come out with four wheels.

Here's hoping some big shot from the bureau of streets cracks a spring or blows a few tires on this street and then perhaps they'll probably fix it, maybe. "KID" HOWARD.

AT CLARENDON BEACH.

Chicago, July 14.—For the last 14 years I, along with other motorists, have been in the custom of parking our cars in a plot of ground adjacent to the Clarendon beach, on the south. Up to Saturday we found no objection, but on arriving there Saturday we were met by two young boys who demanded a fee of 25 cents as a charge for parking our cars on this property for every two hours. Upon inquiring we were informed that it was for the benefit of the junior life guards and on refusal to pay this fee they threatened to call the police, but never appeared with an officer.

Upon arriving at the beach today the gates to this alley were locked, and we presume as a sort of contempt for not having met with their demands.

This appears to be a new racket—to charge a fee for parking on city property—which I am sure was reserved for the purpose of the automobilist who, not being desirous of waiting in line for a locker, dresses at home and then drives to the beach.

If a benefit of any kind is desired for the junior life guards, a more suitable procedure could be followed than the one mentioned. And I believe this matter should be brought before the eyes of the officials for rectification. J. R. JENKINS.

ARRESTED AT LOCKPORT.

Chicago, July 25.—Just a warning to motorists not to exceed Lockport's 20 mile per hour speed limit.

I was traveling at a rate of 35 miles per hour on route 4A. A motorcycle cop stopped me and said I was doing 39. I was taken to an old attic, where a judge came in in a couple of minutes and fined me $10. J. KRIVICKAS.

NEWS AND VIEWS

The Buick 1931 line was presented to the public yesterday. The sixes have been discontinued and all new models have straight eight, valve in head motors. A syncromesh transmission has been adopted, permitting easy and quiet shift from high to second at twenty or thirty miles an hour. Other mechanical improvements include an engine oil temperature regulator, dual carburetion, and a combined intake silencer and air cleaner. There is little change in appearance from the 1930 models and little change in prices.

A new two door sedan at the lowest price ever placed on a Chrysler motors product is announced by Plymouth. It has an all steel body and an improved Plymouth silver dome engine.

The Mansfield Tire and Rubber company of Mansfield, O., has purchased the name, good will and equipment of the Century Tire and Rubber company of Chicago. The Mansfield plant will manufacture the Century tires and tubes.

C. A. Tilt, president of the Diamond T Motor Car company, announces that June registrations of his truck in Cook county show an increase over the record for the same month of last year.

Two well known Chicago automobile men are taking a leading part in marketing the new Ruxton. They are Helm Walker, as vice president and general manager of the corporation, and J. Edward Mahoney, as district sales manager for seven states, with headquarters at the Whitney-Ruxton Motors, Inc., 2412 South Michigan avenue.

Price reductions of $100 and $150 were announced last week on the Chrysler 70s.

Hourly charges have been discontinued by the Hertz Drivurself stations, according to announcement by Walter L. Jacobs, vice president and general manager. Rates are now on the mileage basis only.

An automatic gear shift will soon make its appearance on one of the low priced lines of automobiles. The device is automatic in 90 per cent of its operations, shifting simply by operating the clutch pedal, it being necessary to use the shift lever only in starting and reversing. A row of tiny colored lights on the dash shows which gear is engaged.

TRIBUNE HAS COUNTY MAPS TO GIVE AWAY

The Tribune public service last week received a supply of 5,000 maps from the county highway department showing the secondary system of through routes in the Chicago area marked by the county with letter combinations such as "BG," "PT," or "QL." The maps are for free distribution and may be obtained at The Tribune public service offices at 1 South Dearborn street, The Tribune tower, 4152 West Madison street, or 1101 East 63d street.

DEER PARK TO BE OPENED AGAIN AFTER 8 YEARS

Preserve 100 Miles from Chicago.

Deer park, one of the most scenic areas in the middle west, will be opened to the public next Friday after being closed for eight years, according to the touring bureau of the Chicago Motor club. The area, rich in historical lore as well as natural beauty, is 103 miles by automobile from Michigan and Jackson boulevards. The entrance is on the Lowell road a mile south of its intersection with Ill.-7A between Ottawa and La Salle.

The park, which is owned by the Matthiessen estate, was closed in 1922 for an indefinite period. The reason given was that thoughtless car owners had virtually depleted the area of the wild flowers and ferns which grew profusely in that section. Lack of parking space at that time was also a factor in the closing.

In the eight year interim, the plant life has been fully restored, and driveways and parking spaces have been improved. The officials of the estate, in announcing the reopening, sounded a plea for the public to refrain from destroying the natural beauty of the region in any way.

Similar to Starved Rock.

The landscape of the park is quite similar to that of Starved Rock State park, located approximately two miles to the north. Deer park is distinguished by a hill rising some 250 feet above the summit of cliffs which themselves tower 125 feet above the floor of the canyon below. At one end of the canyon a stream drops eighty-five feet, comprising one of the most charming waterfalls in the entire state.

The walls of the canyon have long been the marvel of visitors. They exude mineral waters, which have colored the St. Peter sandstone with bright splotches of red and brown. Strange rock formations are of extreme interest to geologist and layman alike. Connecting caves honeycomb the walls, which are said to have been created by Indians several centuries ago.

The park derived its name by virtue of a legend to the effect that the Indians, before the arrival of the white race, corraled deer in the canyon until such time as they were needed for food. The first white men to visit the region, so far as is known, were Marquette and Joliet, in 1673.

Park Acquired in 1892.

Six years later the great La Salle came that way. Forts were erected in the vicinity, occupied for some years and still later abandoned. The park was part of the vast dominion held by the Illinois tribe of Indians until the memorable massacre of the remnants of that group on Starved Rock.

The park was acquired in 1892 by F. W. Matthiessen, La Salle, who directed that it should be made a public area. Mr. Matthiessen died in 1918. The park remained open until four years later.

Among the improvements scheduled in the park in the near future are a number of buildings, made of native logs, which will be replicas of the old fort and stockade enclosure of frontier days.

The park will be open every day from 8 a. m. to sunset.

AVIATION

PLANS FOR AIR RACES HERE ARE BEING RUSHED

BY ROBERT WOOD.

The business of staging an air spectacle to entertain a million people in Chicago next month is going rapidly forward under the direction of a score of experts who are planning the National Air races at Curtiss-Wright field.

Contracts have been let and work is now under way on the main section of the grand stands, which will be set up in front of the long row of hangars at Curtiss field. The main section will seat 45,000 spectators. Seating accommodations for thousands of others will be provided in wing bleachers at either end of the center section.

The main grand stand is directly opposite the center of the field and fronts on the starting and finishing line of the race events. At either end will be two cafés, seating 200 each, for the use of the box holders. Behind the section and adjacent to the first balcony will be clubs for men and women flyers.

Cafeteria Is Planned.

A relief to those who have existed on hot dogs and pop during the past air races is the news that a cafeteria with accommodations for 1,500 persons will be constructed on the grounds. During the noon hour famous flyers taking part in the races will gather there for service meetings.

While Al Williams, former speed ace of the navy, is touring Europe signing up foreign flyers for participation in the races here from Aug. 23 to Sept. 1, the number of American entries in the various speed events continues to grow. Most of the famous flyers who have figured in aviation history in the last decade have already sent in their entrance qualifications.

Among them is "Casey" Jones, regarded in the pre-Lindbergh days as the country's best known commercial flyer. After four years' serving as an executive of the Curtiss-Wright Flying Service he is coming back to match his skill with his old flying mates and with that newer group of young flyers who have grown up in the flying art while Casey has been sitting at directors' conferences, too busy to fly.

Finish Here Aug. 23.

"I'm figuring on using one of our Cessna cabin monoplanes, with a seven cylinder Wright whirlwind motor," he said last week, "and between us I believe we'll be able to do some business."

The route of the Men's Athletic Derby was announced last week by Ray W. Brown of St. Louis, vice chairman of the contest committee. It is one of the seven cross-country races to inaugurate the program.

The contesting planes of the 200 horse power class will take off from Miami at noon on Aug. 20, arriving at Tampa for luncheon. From Tampa the racers will fly to Jacksonville, where they will remain overnight. The next day they will fly on to Macon, Ga., arriving in the afternoon. The last hop of that day will bring the flyers to Augusta, where they will stop for the night.

On Aug. 22 they will fly to Murfreesboro, Tenn., and to Cincinnati. On Aug. 23, the opening day of the races, the flyers will fly to Joliet, the final control point, pause for lunch, and hike on to Chicago in the afternoon, crossing the finishing line before the grand stands during the opening ceremonies.

Most of the crack eastern flyers who are not entered in the nonstop Derby will fly in this event. The distance is 1,545 miles and the prize money totals $3,500.

Seattle, Wash., has been selected as the starting point for the men's Western Derby. El Paso, Tex., will be the take-off point from the southwest for men flying planes of 500 cubic inch piston displacement, while easterners flying planes in the same class will leave either from Hartford, Conn., or Boston, Mass.

Women to Fly.

Washington, D. C., will be the starting point of the eastern women's Derby. Entries are limited to planes of 500 cubic inch piston displacement. From Washington the women flyers will journey to Atlanta, thence westward, skirting the Gulf of Mexico, and northward up the Mississippi valley to Chicago.

The mixed doubles race, a novelty in the annual race meet, will be a popular contest, judging from the number of entries so far received. Men contestants will pilot the racing planes to Cleveland and girl pilots will fly them back to Chicago. This is the closest the race committee was able to come to competition between the sexes, prohibited by the rules of the National Aeronautical association.

THEY'LL BE THERE

Two Chicago aviation pioneers who flew airplanes "way back when" flying was a death defying feat are here shown looking over the schedule of events for the National Air Races to be held in Chicago Aug. 23 to Sept. 1. Matty Laird, Chicago manufacturer of speed planes, is shown handing his entry papers to Maj. R. W. (Shorty) Schroeder, director of events for the races.

SHORT SELLING PREVALENT ON LONDON BOURSE

Bears Have Things Much Their Own Way.

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 26.—The bears had things very much their own way in practically every section of the stock exchange this week. The professionals had taken advantage of the lack of public support—due partly somewhat to the general adoption by the investing public of safety first tactics and the near approach of the national bank holiday period—to sell short with impunity — which was accompanied with considerable success.

As a result the prices dropped throughout all the lists with a consequent lapse of the market in an all round state of lethargy. Even occasional favorable advices from Wall street again failed to affect the sentiment which some quarters interprets as New York ceasing to be a material factor in the London markets as a whole.

Succumbs to Stagnation.

Recently the invulnerable gilt edged section has succumbed to current business stagnation and practically all of the British government stocks, with the exception of the 5 per cent loan, are failing to make a stand against the prevailing heaviness despite the continued movement of American funds to London for investment in British securities.

The latter fact is partly responsible for the outstanding strength of the sterling dollar on the exchange in New York at this time of the year when grain and other produce settlements begin to adversely affect the London rate.

The persistent gold drain from London to France continued to be the dominating factor in the general money market dealings and is becoming a disconcerting influence. Apparently France still holds dollar sterling credits in New York and London of over $1,000,000,000, but the recent improvement of the sterling dollar exchange encourages city circles here, for if France is still determined to pile up gold, her requirements may be largely satisfied by America from whence a considerable amount has already been shipped.

These French withdrawals have revived nervousness concerning the continuance of London's bank rate, but although the gold demand is disquieting, the Bank of England's position at the present is of such strength that financial interests do not anticipate the necessity of a raise in the rate.

Blame Nervousness.

A great deal more gold will have to leave the country before this step will be necessary and city circles believe the present unloading of British government stocks is entirely unwarranted and the result of nervous misjudgment of the monetary position.

Another disquieting feature of the week was the general marking down of India stocks, chiefly reflecting the influence of the political situation and the announcement of the government's intention to issue a rupee loan of an unlimited amount bearing interest of six per cent.

Home rails experienced further unfriendliness with the declaration of a disappointing interim, the dividend being only one per cent for the London Midland and Scottish—the lowest interim ever paid in the 85 year's history of the company.

These dismal conditions characterize the industrial sections where trading was mostly with adverse holders. Ford made a notably good showing in the motor car section.

PARIS BOURSE FIRM

BY HENRY WALES.

PARIS, July 26.—After a dull and irregular opening with a slight volume of trading, the Paris bourse showed a better tendency and maintained a firm tone, with prices advancing in most groups, although the general condition still remains unsettled. Continuation of the cheerful tone which was developed the previous week was attributed to a stronger tone in Wall street Tuesday, which had a favorable influence on the market and further gold imports from London.

The gold influx to France continues. Although certain financial circles here believe the French demand for gold is approaching an end, it is understood that further shipments from America and Holland and Germany are due.

HIGHER CLOSE FOR COTTON

A liberal covering movement, with some new buying, advanced cotton prices yesterday, with the close around the best of the day, showing gains of 21@30 points at Chicago, while other markets were up 17@21 points. Spots gained 20 points, with New York 12.95c, New Orleans 12.70c, Galveston 12.60c, and Houston 12.50c. Liverpool closed 7 points higher, with spot sales 2,000 bales.

Scattered showers were reported at a few interior points, with moderate rains along the south Atlantic coast and showers in Tennessee. Prices follow:

NEW YORK, July 26.—Cotton goods were steady today with business moderate. Burlaps were steadier. Unsettled conditions still prevailed in rayon fabric markets following the sharp decline in yarns. Raw silk was unchanged, but closed the week lower. Silk goods were quiet. In wool goods more demand was reported for quick deliveries of dress worsteds.

Bethlehem Steel Bonuses Provide Lively Wall St. Topic

BIG PAYMENTS TO INDIVIDUALS SET NEW RECORD

Eaton Suit Reveals Huge Total.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 26.—With the disclosure that Eugene G. Grace received a bonus of $1,623,753 in 1929 as president of the Bethlehem Steel corporation, Wall street opened a lively debate on the broad question of extra compensation for executives and, specifically, the percentage of earnings which a corporation is justified in paying out in the form of bonuses.

CYRUS S. EATON.
[P. & A. Photo.]

Apparently the Bethlehem Steel corporation has set a new high record in the sums paid to individual executives. Testimony given in Youngstown, O., in the suit of Cyrus S. Eaton and associates to prevent the merger of Bethlehem and the Youngstown Sheet and Tube company showed that a group of Bethlehem executives received a total of $36,493,668 in bonuses from 1911 to 1929, inclusive.

While the amount paid to Mr. Grace topped all the others and probably was the largest in 1929 ever received by an American corporation official, it was disclosed also that three vice presidents last year received in excess of $375,000 apiece.

Claim Bonuses Excessive.

The Eaton interests are contending that the bonus payments are excessive and that they are not in the best interests of stockholders. They have sought to show, also, that the bonuses would be increased by a merger of Youngstown and Bethlehem, since the business of the consolidated unit would be much greater than that of Bethlehem as it is at present constituted.

Opinion in Wall street varies sharply as to the desirability of large bonuses such as have been paid by Bethlehem. It is pointed out by some that the high prosperity of the company last year was the result of aggressive and intelligent management and that, therefore, the principal officials are entitled to large compensation. Elsewhere the prevalent view seems to be that the bonuses are out of proportion to those paid by other large and well managed companies.

Many in Wall street drew comparisons last week between Bethlehem's bonus plan and the other two best known plans, those of the United States Steel corporation and of the General Motors corporation. Only fourteen or fifteen of the Bethlehem executives, it was revealed, participate in that company's bonus distribution, whereas under the United States Steel corporation's plans mor than 1,000 executives and manag are benefited. The steel corporation disburses a greater amount in bonuses than does Bethlehem, but the individual awards are much smaller.

U. S. Steel Bonuses.

In 1929 Bethlehem executives received in bonuses 6.2835 per cent of net earnings; the percentage has been as high as 8.16 per cent and as low as 3.89. Last year's total disbursements, however, were the largest on record.

In the U. S. Steel corporation, where officers are not compensated as generously as in Bethlehem, the most that can be paid in the form of bonuses is 2½ per cent of net profits in a single year. The plan provides that when the net profits exceed $100,000,000 but do not exceed $150,000,000 the amount set aside for the bonus plan shall be 2 per cent; when the net profits exceed $150,000,000 but do not exceed $200,000,000 the amount set aside shall be 2¼ per cent; when such profits exceed $200,000,000 the amount set aside shall be 2½ per cent.

No amount may be set aside in any year when the net profits for the preceding year do not exceed $100,000,000. The funds are distributed among the employés of the corporation and its subsidiaries and those actively engaged in the conduct of its and their business by a committee of three stockholders to be elected for that purpose at the annual meeting of stockholders, none of the members of which committee shall be eligible to share in the distribution.

General Motors Plan.

Although figures as to the sums paid to individual officials of the steel corporation are not available, it is known that they have never approached in size the bonuses paid to Mr. Grace of Bethlehem or that company's principal vice presidents. It is generally understood that the late Elbert H. Gary, who was the steel corporation's highest paid official, received in salary and bonus a total of about $500,000 in the corporation's more prosperous years. Mr. Gary was chairman and chief executive officer.

Under the bonus plan of the General Motors corporation a percentage of the net earnings after deducting 7 per cent on the capital invested in the business is turned over to a special bonus fund. Since 1923 the amount set aside under the plan has been 5 per cent. This fund is invested in common stock of the corporation. At the end of each year the stock is awarded to employés on the basis of the degree to which their services individually have contributed to the success of the corporation.

Commodities Drop Faster than Ry. Rates

BY SCRUTATOR.

Relationships between railroad freight rates and commodity prices are important, especially in view of the steady downward course taken by commodities since 1925 and the rate adjustment, which is said to mean a forty million dollar raise in freight costs, just approved by the interstate commerce commission.

Most of our indexes begin with the year 1913. Accordingly the chart on this page commences with that year to represent the changes that have taken place during the last eighteen years, both in the revenues received by the rail carriers in the eastern district for hauling a ton of freight a mile and in the United States department of labor index of wholesale commodity prices.

What Chart Shows.

This chart shows that rail transportation cost is much more a factor in the delivered price of all commodities lumped together than it was in 1913. It likewise demonstrates that while commodity prices rose faster than freight rates from 1915 to 1920, there has been a complete reverse tendency since 1921. About 1920 the lines crossed; then rail rates were as much higher than those of 1913 to balance the total increase that has occurred in commodities.

At that time it was no more expensive to ship a dollar's worth of goods than it was in the first year of the index period. The showing for the economy of rail transport has never been so good since. In 1929 the eastern lines' revenue per ton of freight handled for one mile was $1.09. In 1913 it was 62.8 cents. A commodity unit that was worth $1.00 in 1913 was worth, if indexes are worth anything, about $1.46 last year. In other words the freight rate for the carriers considered has gone up 73.5 per cent while the commodity level has gone up 46 per cent.

Deflation Seen Unequal.

If it had cost $6.28 to move $100 worth of merchandise a certain distance when Woodrow Wilson first became President of the United States, it would have cost $7.46 to move $100 worth of 1929 merchandise the same distance last year. With the May, 1930, wholesale price index down to 134.5 and with a new rate raise authorized, we have two directly opposite factors that threaten to raise the cost of freight, relative to the 1913 cost, by nearly 33 per cent. Deflation in commodities is not matched by deflation in rates.

Several things may be brought forward to prove that the rail rates are still too low. One will have to be that revenues of eastern roads, which are to benefit most from the new adjustment of ass rates, were not large enough in 913. Yet it is certain that the carriers have fared better since 1921 than the producers of commodities—in price—and it would seem unfair for them and the interstate commerce commission to continue a policy of getting higher rates on continually lower priced commodities.

At Maximum in 1918.

Moreover, it may be unwise. In 1916 Mr. Woodlock, later an interstate commerce commissioner, developed what he called a "thing quotient," meaning a representation of the growth in the number of tons of freight hauled one mile a day for each person in the country. In 1894 it was about four tons and in 1913 it was ten and a half tons.

In 1918 it reached its maximum of about thirteen tons. While the growth was fairly steady up until 1913, with few sharp changes, and while the per capita amount of freight took a great upward swing from 1913 to 1918, when commodity prices rose faster than the rates, the later period found great fluctuations of the "thing quotient."

Brings Improved Volume.

Fifteen and 25 per cent rate raises halted it and in 1921, with a still further 40 per cent increase in effect, it fell from twelve and a half tons to nine and a half. A 10 per cent reduction in rates brought an improvement in volume.

The broad general conclusion that a railroad can get more gross revenues by raising the rates has not been proved. It can be fairly well proved that a raise in rates means a loss in traffic, either because it is killed or driven to waterways or other forms of transport.

A proper balance, it seems, would require that the cost to transport $100 worth of commodities should be made nearer to the 1913 cost instead of farther away.

FINNISH CREDIT BALANCES SHOW GAIN FOR YEAR

BY B. VON ALFTHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

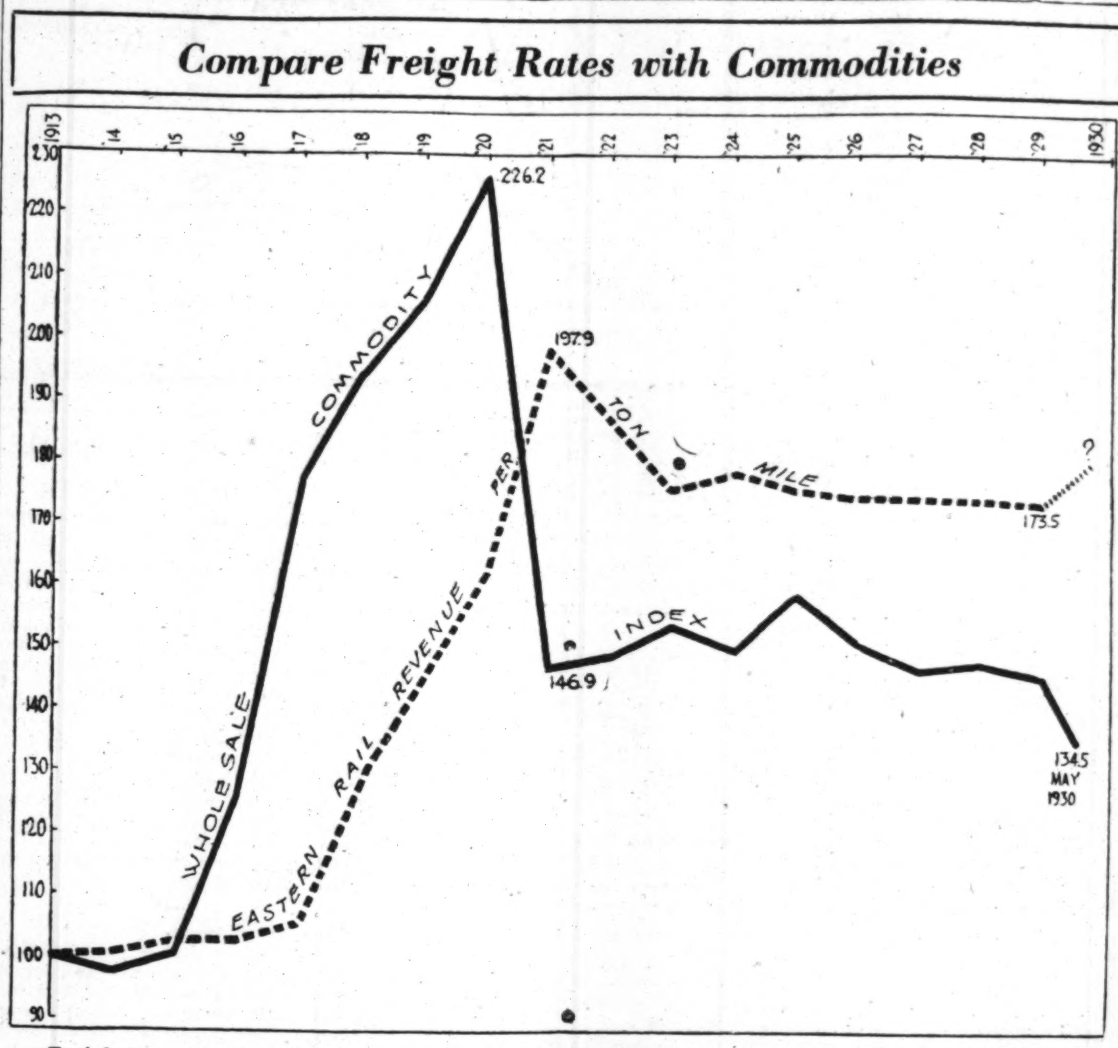
HELSINGFORS, July 26.—The banking situation in Finland continues to gain strength and is uninfluenced by the recent political developments.

The total foreign credit balances of Finnish banks, including the state bank, at the end of May represented 1,087,000,000 marks, as against only 111 million marks a year ago. Bills, rediscounted by the state bank, were 53 million, as against 581 million this time last year. The state bank holdings of foreign currency were 848 million, as against 342 million and the cover percentage rose in the same time from 51.6 to 81.8.

The import surplus for the first five months of this year was only 268 million marks, as against 1,164,000,000 last year, and 1,586,000,000 two years ago.

Richfield Oil Receives U. S. Navy Dept. Contract

The United States navy department has awarded the Richfield Oil company of California a contract for 1,050,000 brls of fuel oil, officials of the company announce. The oil will be for navy requirements at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii.



Freight rates per ton mile on eastern roads have had a very slight drop in recent years while the prices of commodities hauled have been on the toboggan. The chart demonstrates the commodity deflation since 1920 and the changing relationship to freight costs. It costs more on any basis of comparison to ship $100 worth of freight than it did in 1913.

CHICAGO STOCKS ARE STRONG IN SHORT SESSION

Public Service Soars 18 Points.

Yesterday proved to be one of the best Saturday short sessions on the Chicago stock exchange in many moons. When the close came the volume of trading was fairly comfortable and recessions from Friday's finish were difficult to find. On the other hand, there wer a number of substantial gains, with stocks bearing the Insull influence providing the feature.

Public Service of Northern Illinois, no par, took a skyrocket flight of 18 points to close at 296 on sales of 370 shares. The $100 par value stock of the same company advanced 11 points to 295. Then Commonwealth Edison shook itself and jumped up 6¾ points to 311¾. And the big demand of the day, as on Friday, was for Insull Utility Investment. The close was 62⅞, a gain of 1 point, on a turnover of 19,500 shares.

Bastian Blessing Up 6.

Middle West remained steady at 30⅜ on sales of 13,350 shares. American Public Utility, prior preferred, was up 2½ points at 100. Cities Service advanced fractionally to 29¼.

In the general list Bastian Blessing took a 6 point jump to close at 42. Reports are current that negotiations are in progress for the consolidation of a number of soda fountain manufacturers which would give Bastian Blessing a commanding position in this field. Noblitt Sparks advanced 2¼ points to 46½ on light trading. Marshall Field had a fairly active day again and closed at 38⅞, ⅜ to the good. American Equities gained 1½ at 17, and Kalamazoo Stove was up 1¾ at 54¾. Fractional gains were recorded by Abbott Laboratories, Gleaner, and Libby-McNeil among others.

In the automotives Auburn took a 3 point gain to close at 130, and National Standard likewise gained 3 points, closing at 36½. Houdaille at 20 was off 1½. Bendix and Borg-Warner both took fractional gains.

Investment trusts were fairly steady. Chicago Corporation was up fractionally at 11⅞. Corporation Securities gained ¼ at 25 and Corporation Securities certificates in closing at 68 gained 2 points. Manhattan Dearborn at 30 was up ½.

Radio List Quiet.

Trading in Grigsby-Grunow and Majestic Household was less active than customary. Majestic finished at 36¾, off ¼, and Grigsby remained at 15. Only fractional changes were noted in the general radio list.

Otis & Co. reported that the fifty most active stocks on the Chicago exchange during the week closing July 26 had a market value of $3,046,920,050 at the close yesterday, as compared with $3,136,659,013 for the previous week. This was a decrease of $89,738,963, or 2.86 per cent. Of these stocks, twenty-nine were traded in during the same period last year. These stocks had a market value of $1,110,810,635 yesterday, as compared with $1,529,379,678 on July 27, 1929, a decrease of $418,569,043, or 27.37 per cent.

SAVINGS DEPOSITS INCREASE WHILE EMPLOYMENT LAGS

The anomaly of increasing savings deposits and declining employment again is presented in the monthly review of the Chicago Federal Reserve bank. It would appear that wage earners have effected greater curtailment in living expenses than necessitated by reduced income, which may be one of the reasons for slack business.

"The declines in industrial employment and pay rolls during June were larger than in previous months of 1930," the bank says. "In contrast to recent months nonmanufacturing employment, as well as the total of ten manufacturing groups, shows a decline, the change being partially accounted for by a much smaller increase in construction employment during June than in the two preceding months.

"Oversupply of farm labor, while partially due to a flow of unemployed from cities to rural sections, also indicates the same reluctance on the part of the farmer toward expenditures for labor when the market for his produce is unpromising, as has characterized industry since the business recession began.

"Savings deposits on July 1 again showed a slight increase over the preceding month. This was the result, however, of only two states—Illinois and Iowa—registering gains in the amount of deposits."

Commercial Failures for Week Reported Higher

Commercial failures for the week totaled 510, as tabulated by R. G. Dun & Co., an increase of fifty-eight over last week's results and compared with 400 in the corresponding week a year ago. No change appeared in the south this week, but the other geographical sections revealed increases.

Climax Engineering Co. Experiences Sales Gain

An increase of 32 per cent in sales during the first half of July over the comparable period in June is reported by the Climax Engineering company of Chicago and Clinton, Iowa, according to Allen C. Staley, director of sales and engineering.

REVIEW NOTES BETTER TONE IN NATION'S TRADE

Sentiment Is Based on Future Outlook.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 26.—"A broad survey of the commercial situation makes it plain that adjustments to new conditions are continuing, yet a better tone in some quarters has been an encouraging feature of late," says Dun's review of the week.

"The stronger sentiment, which also prevails in financial circles, is predicted chiefly upon prospective gains in business, evidences of actual expansion still being scattered. No widespread increase of activity, however, was to be expected during what is traditionally one of the quietest periods, and there are special reasons at this time for more than the usual seasonal curtailment in operations.

"The basis for the more hopeful feeling now disclosed is the fact that the change from summer to autumn is accompanied by a natural quickening of trade, and at least some manifestation of this trend is to be looked for this year.

Stabilization Nearer.

"Moreover, the economic transition, although not yet completed, has progressed to a point where stabilization has been brought nearer, with the restriction of outputs, the reduction of available stocks of various goods, and the lowering of prices to levels that are more attractive to buyers being among the elements which ultimately should be stimulating. Such phases invariably follow an acute disturbance, but their far reaching scope may be regarded as foreshadowing eventual revival.

"The intense heat wave over much of the country, while causing great discomfort, has been secondary in its influence on business to fundamental forces, which are laying the foundation for future movements, the factors of deepest significance being found elsewhere than in the weather reports.

Now Marking Time.

"In the combination of high temperatures, mid-summer dullness, and low activity in most lines it is hard to clearly ascertain new trends or define the significance of movements that are visible," says Bradstreet's. "It seems certain, however, that the more cheerful sentiment visible in recent weeks is still holding, pending the further progress of events.

"What apparently are new visible basic developments have to do largely with the effect of the long continued heat and drought upon the country's crops, which, so far as can be judged at the present moment, point to less abundant yields than earlier expected, this being backed up by higher prices for the leading grains, especially wheat, corn, and some dairy products."

Utilities Take Lead in New Bond Issues

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 26.—Offerings of public utility bonds eclipsed new financing in all other fields this week. Of the total of $76,846,000 of new bond issues placed on the market this week, $64,730,000 consisted of public utility issues. This represents the largest amount of utility financing since the final week in Ju . This week's total of new bond financing compared with $90,960,000 last week and with $62,433,000 during the corresponding week last year.

The principal piece of public utility financing was that of $33,730,000 Texas Electric Service company first mortgage 5s, priced at 97¾, to yield 5.14 per cent. The next issue in size was that of $17,000,000 Pacific Power and Light company 5s of 1955, which was offered on a 5.29 per cent basis.

Continues Light.

As was the case last week, new state and municipal financing was comparatively light. Only six new issues were marketed, the largest of which were $3,877,000 Essex county [New Jersey] 4¼s, $2,000,000 city of Cleveland [Ohio] 4¼s and $1,200,000 Schuylkill county [Pennsylvania] 4¼s. During the week the city of New York obtained short term bank loans aggregating $130,000,000 which involved no public offering.

Despite the fact that the demand for high grade railroad bonds this week has been more active than at any time since mid-March, no new railroad financing was done. Most of the rail issues brought out during recent weeks are now selling at levels substantially above those at which they were brought out.

This week's foreign financing consisted of two issues, one an issue of $2,500,000 government of New Foundland 5s of 1955, priced at 100¾, and the other an issue of $500,000 Montreal Harbor Commissioners 5s, priced to yield 4.75 per cent. Both of these issues met a quick response.

Offerings by Groups.

The new offerings of bonds by groups, of this and last week, follow:

	This week.	Last week.
Public Utility	$64,730,000	$ 9,500,000
State and Municipal	8,486,000	8,010,000
Foreign	3,000,000	25,000,000
Industrial	630,000	32,450,000
U S Government	....	15,000,000
Railroad	....	1,000,000
Totals	$76,846,000	$90,960,000

Most of the new financing that is being discussed at present is in the public utility field. Not much new foreign financing is considered at present, despite the fact that the foreign bond averages were pushed appreciably higher this week. The feature of the week in foreign loans has been the steady advance in French government and municipal loans to new peaks.

WHEAT SELLS IN PARIS ON $1.71 A BUSHEL BASIS

PARIS, July 26.—(AP)—The cabinet today approved a plan of the minister of agriculture to advise French farmers to sell wheat at present high prices and also took measures to reduce the cost of living.

The percentage of foreign wheat that may be used in flour was increased from 3 per cent to 10 per cent and a general investigation of middlemen's profits was ordered.

Wheat sold yesterday in the Paris market at 160 francs a quintal of 220 pounds, which is the equivalent of $1.71 a bushel. Wheat sold at two-thirds of that price two months ago, according to Deputy Leon Meyer, mayor of Havre, who had been protesting publicly against the rising cost of living. Meyer informed Premier Tardieu that he intended to take the matter into parliament when that body reassembled.

Minister of Commerce Etienne Flandin has ordered a study of the prices of flour and other necessities throughout France and will seek measures to reduce middlemen's expense.

Propose New Construction Aggregating $43,883,000

New construction of all classes, except highways, proposed throughout the country during the past week aggregated $43,883,000, compared with $45,042,000 in the preceding week and $55,400,000 in the corresponding week last year, Construction Daily reports. School building plans totaling $7,547,000 was well ahead of the previous week and last year.

ARGENTINE TRADE FOR FIVE MONTHS SHOWS BIG LOSS

Exports Drop Down $149,221,756.

[Copyright: 1930: By the New York Times.]

BUENOS AIRES, July 26.—Argentina's exports for the first five months of this year suffered a heavy decline compared with the same period of last year, according to a report from the statistical bureau of the ministry of finance. This report shows the exports for the above period this year as amounting to 300,526,000 gold pesos ($289,947,484 at par), as compared with 455,192,000 gold pesos ($439,169,241) for the first five months of last year. This is a decline of 154,666,000 gold pesos ($149,221,756) for this year, or 34 per cent.

While shipments during the first five months of 1929 reached 7,685,000 tons, the total for the present year was only 4,556,000 tons, a decrease of 3,129,000 tons, or 40 per cent.

Cereal Exports Drop.

Referring to grain and flaxseed, the report says the figures show a decrease of 3,067 tons, or 46.5 per cent, the exports for the first five months of this year reaching 3,530 tons, against 6,597 tons for last year.

Owing to the smaller shipments this year the value of the cereal exports decreased from 281,331,000 gold pesos ($271,428,148) for the first five months of 1929 to 154,043,000 gold pesos ($148,619,686) for the same period this year, showing a decrease of 127,288,000 gold pesos ($122,807,462), or 45.2 per cent.

Wheat exports fell from 3,358,000 tons for the first five months of 1929 to 1,390,000 tons this year. Flaxseed exports dropped from 1,025,000 tons in the 1929 period to 630,000 tons this year. Barley exports dropped from 155,000 tons in 1929 to 57,000 tons this year and the exports of oats this year fell from 307,000 tons to 177,000 tons.

Cattle Products Decline.

The report says the exports of cattle products, despite the better prices obtained for meat exports, declined the first five months of this year, the total value reaching 58,470,000 gold pesos ($56,411,856), compared with 58,594,000 gold pesos ($56,531,491) for the same period last year.

The tonnages of meat exports for the same periods were 305,000 tons in 1929 and 288,000 tons in 1930, or a decrease of 17,000 tons, or 5.7 per cent.

Exports of cattle hides reached 47,006 tons for the first five months of 1929 and 53,000 tons for the same period in 1930.

BY FRED HARVEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 26.—By way of providing an example of "die hard" pessimists to mull over on their week-end outings, the bull crowd unsnapped the old rubber band and did a little plain and fancy buying all around the board in today's stock exchange session.

Pivotal issues were favored as a matter of course and a whole stickful of them were marked up to new high price levels for the current recovery.

U. S. Steel rose to within a small fraction of 170, scoring a net gain of more than 2 points on the day. The old bellwether had the benefit of optimistic anticipations on the subject of the corporation's quarterly earnings statement due next Tuesday, but it was apparent that it was being used by the constructive element for purpose of demonstration.

Attitude of Traders.

A growing number of traders are thoroughly "sold" on the contention that the market is in a strong technical position and some of the big professionals of this view are capitalizing the sentiment to teach troublemakers and would-bes a lesson. They say they are completely tired of all the talk of an "inevitable reaction" which has been so effective in keeping the public at bay in spite of improving conditions and they have been out of the last week or so to say it in a way that will count most—with buying orders.

Other leaders followed in the wake of Steel: American Can, Westinghouse and Johns-Manville were an able trio of first lieutenants for the advance, rising each about 2 points.

Radio was another favorite and was turned over in fairly large volume for a Saturday session, but profit taking slowed it up toward the last. Still another feature of the session was brisk buying of General Motors. It gained more than a point and closed at about its best levels of the day.

Motor access y issues were active and higher, not bly Briggs and Budd Wheel.

N. Y. Central Strong.

In the carrier division the strength of New York Central was a feature. New Haven and some of the lesser issues also improved a trifle. The turnover in Kennecott Copper was large and its market fairly strong. Other red metal shares, however, did little. American Telephone and Telegraph forged ahead in anticipation of the expiration of rights next Friday. The final transaction in this stock registered a net gain of 2 points on the day.

It has been many a week since the weather man thrust himself in the financial limelight as he did in the period just past. Ordinarily Wall street is not much concerned whether it rains or snows, except for those who deal in cotton and wheat. But this week bankers, stock brokers and bond men turned en masse to the weather reports, and many retreated to the beaches and the mountains. Their absence contributed in no small manner to the dullness of trading on several days.

Will the June Lows Be Broken?

STOCKS have rallied halfway back from the June lows to the May highs.

Is the Bear Market definitely over, or has the rally carried as far as may, under the circumstances, reasonably be expected?

Many brokers and financial observers have recently become highly optimistic. They assert that business will soon begin to reveal definite evidences of an early improvement—and that the Market should now begin to discount the approaching industrial revival.

Other commentators are not quite so cocksure. They state that the market has enjoyed about all the rally to which it is entitled—that business will not pick up quickly and substantially—that the June lows will again be severely tested by the professional bears.

If there is a probability that the June lows in many securities will be pierced, then it would appear wise to sell all securities not held outright for the long pull.

Our estimate of the current and prospective market situation is outlined in current Bulletins, copies of which will be sent to you free of charge upon request. Address all communications to:

CORN RISES TO HIGH LEVEL ON DROUGHT NEWS

Wheat Prices Close Lower Despite Rally.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Continued hot and dry weather over the corn belt, with the weekly government forecast holding out no hope of any relief in the way of moisture, resulted in a general broadening of speculative interest yesterday, with houses having eastern connections on the buying side, as well as local professionals.

All deliveries advanced to a new high on the present movement, with the December touching 82½c, or only 8c under the best price of the season, and 16¼c above the low of July 8. Offerings were light on the way up, with the bulge finally checked by selling against daily and weekly offers, with net gains of 1½@2⅛c. July finished at 87@87⅛c; September, 86¾@86⅞c, and December, 82⅛@82¼c.

Damage reports on corn are coming from an extremely wide area and one of the leading statisticians pointed out that as the amount of rainfall during the month of July was the main influence in determining the size of the crop, it was apparent that there had been a great deal of deterioration. The crop scare embraces the greater part of the country, including the east.

Foreign Countries Offer Corn.

As the result of the extremely high price of corn foreign countries are said to be offering cash grain to the United States, Argentine being quoted at 93c per bu, duty paid, at Boston, but no sales were claimed. The price was about 6c above what was paid for No. 2 yellow in the Chicago sample market.

There was some selling of corn futures early on reports of rain in parts of Iowa, and showers at a few points in Illinois, but the break which followed was short lived, and stop loss orders were uncovered on the way up. The country sold 115,000 bu to arrive while shipping sales were 135,000 bu. Kansas City showed more strength than Chicago despite the recent rains in Kansas.

Hedging Sales in Wheat.

Action of the wheat market demonstrated that it was in no condition to withstand any material hedging pressure, and while the finish was on a good rally from the inside figures in sympathy with corn, final trades were ⅝c higher to ⅛c lower, the former on July which was 89¼c at the last. September closed at 91¼@91⅜c and December 96⅞c.

Taking everything into consideration the trade expressed the belief that the wheat market had given a poor account of itself for the week, as final sales yesterday were ⅞@2½c lower than the finish of the previous week, while corn advanced 4@6⅞c during the same period. Oats were ½c lower to ¼c higher for the week, and rye, ¼c higher to ¾c lower.

Liverpool was strong and ½@1d higher on short covering induced by the sale of a cargo of Australian wheat to India which has been exporting moderate quantities of late, and on wet weather in Germany. Foreign demand for North American grain shows no signs of letting up, with sales of around 1,000,000 bu in all positions. The basis on hard winter at the gulf was firm.

Use as Cattle Feed.

According to London advices Russia recently offered around 4,000,000 bu to continental countries, leading to reports that they were trying to sell much larger amounts. It was the supposition that the wheat was offered in an effort to secure credit accommodations.

There will probably be around 70,000,000 bu wheat used for cattle feed in the United States this season owing to the low price as compared with corn, according to a Murray-Clement-Curtis estimate. This will compare with normal consumption of 30,000,000 to 40,000,000 bu as feed. Beneficial rains fell in parts of Canada, and Winnipeg was off ⅝@¾c for the day. France now permits millers there to use 10 per cent of foreign wheat in their grind, compared with 3 per cent recently.

Short covering on the strength in corn and commission house buying attracted by the big discount under that grain led to fair activity in oats. The close was ¼c lower to ½c higher with July 34⅞c and September 37⅝@37¾c. Hedgers were the best sellers. Rye was quiet and finished 1⅛@1½c higher in sympathy with wheat. July closed at 56¼c, and September, 58⅜c.

PROVISION TRADE SLOW

Interest i nthe provision trade yesterday was light, but operators thought they see prospects of a better foreign demand for lard, which created steadiness, but closing prices were 2½@5c lower. Liverpool was unchanged. Export clearances were 441,300 lbs. There was no trade in bellies. Hog prices were steady, with prospects of a good run this week. Prices follow:

FINANCIAL NOTES

St. Louis Southwestern railway has been authorized to issue $7,000,000 in promissory notes and $7,700,000 of first terminal and unifying mortgage bonds as collateral for the notes. The proceeds will be used in paying the road's existing debt. The Cotton Belt also was authorized to issue $810,000 in equipment trust certificates and to sell them at not less than 99.344 per cent of par and accrued dividends in connection with the purchase of ten locomotives.

A group headed by Otis & Co. and including Wallace Sanderson & Co., New York, and Stern Brothers, Kansas City, were the successful bidders for an issue of $2,000,000 city of Cleveland 4½ per cent sewage disposal bonds.

Weekly Debits Decrease, Reserve Bank Reports

Debits to individual deposit account reported to the federal reserve bank of Chicago for the week ended July 23, 1930, by 238 banks in eight leading clearing house cities in the seventh federal reserve district, aggregate $1,497,606,000, decrease of 1.7 per cent compared with a week ago [$1,523,368,000]. Compared with the corresponding week of last year [$1,804,023,000], a decrease of 17.0 per cent was shown.

N.Y. Clearing House Banks Show Increase in Deposits

News and Gossip of Stock Marts

Scattered Selling.

Uncertainty over earnings for the remainder of the year is probably responsible for the scattered selling in Deere & Co. This stock has moved contrary to general trend and established a new low for the year in current dealings. Deere has lost some of its popularity as a speculative medium in the last few months.

More Stabilized.

A more stable market seems to have been created in Noranda Mines in the low twenties, though there is still a little uneasiness regarding future dividend disbursements.

Has New Product.

Canada Dry's new product, Sparkling orange juice, is said to be going over well. Those who should be in a position to know say that orders are running ahead of the company's production facilities. The current hot weather no doubt has had a favorable effect on the concern's business, and Wall street is expecting it to show earnings in 1930 fully as large as those in 1929.

Radio Sentiment.

It seems that market sentiment toward stocks of radio companies which have been able to weather the recent upheaval in the industry, is better than it has been in several months. Excessive stocks of sets on hand at the beginning of 1930 have been greatly reduced by drastic curtailment of production and disposal of accumulate inventories through price cutting sales.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Failure of the wheat market to hold early gains and the steady increase in hedging pressure, combined with expectations of another large increase in the visible supply statement on Monday made wheat traders more bearish. The market, however, was said to have shown rather surprising resistance to the bearish news which was attributable to the strength in corn.

Sir Henry Thornton, president of the Canadian National railway, estimates the wheat crop of the three western provinces at 400,000,000 bu. Last year they raised 275,000,000 bu.

Weekly privileges on corn were 5c over the closing market on offers and 4c under on bids. There was buying in anticipation of continued bull news, and a point was made that crop reports were beginning to show burned tassels in many sections of the west and southwest.

Bartlett Frazier's Liverpool cable says: "Sentiment is bearish in anticipation of cheap offers from Russia. Market closed firm, some shorts covering."

A Property Owner's Problem.

"I have been a hard working man all my life, but for two years my health has not been so good. We have a family of four to support.

"Three years ago I put all my life savings into a piece of property and at the beginning of 1931 the mortgage on the property should be paid. The amount still to pay is $5,000, and if I can't pay I will lose it.

"I have $1,000 in cash. What can I do to make enough money out of the thousand to pay the $5,000 which is due on the property?"

The writer of this letter failed to enclose the customary self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply and signed it only with his initials, "H. H." He shall, however, have his answer.

The real problem here is not how to increase a one thousand dollar savings account to five times that amount in five months. Any attempt to do so would almost certainly result disastrously.

The $1,000 by all means should not be jeopardized in any speculative venture. It should be guarded with utmost care.

If the property mentioned in the letter was worth a $5,000 risk three years ago and has been kept in good repair, it should be worth a $4,000 risk when the existing mortgage falls due at the beginning of next year. One thing to do in a case of this kind is to go to the holder of the mortgage and try to arrange an extension for another period by paying off $1,000 of the principal amount when due. These arrangements should be made now. If, for any reason, such a plan will not work the writer should go immediately to a good bank and explain the situation in full. Given full particulars a banker will be able to map out the best program for protecting the investment.

Too frequently persons of modest means are misled into speculating unwisely because of a pressing need for funds. When an investor sets out to multiply his capital in a short time he becomes fair game for the first promoter who comes along with a promise of a quick cleanup. Ordinarily the degree of risk increases in proportion to the size of the promised profits.

Top yesterday, $9.35; average, $8.75.

Receipts at Chicago today, 15,000 cattle, 46,000 hogs, and 20,000 sheep.

The hog market yesterday declined 15@25c generally. The top price showed more decline, but it was due to the lack of strictly top quality light weight butchers. Some good 210 lb hogs sold at $9.75, but strictly choice light butchers were considered to be worth around $9.50 if they had been on sale. Bulk of the day's offerings sold at $7.90@9.15 and packing sows went mostly at $7.00@7.75.

Shipping demand for hogs Saturday was light and only around 500 head were taken. Other buying interests were slow bidders and at the close approximately 2,000 hogs remained unsold.

Receipts Saturday were estimated at 4,500 head and total for the week at 128,000 head showed a falling off of 8,744, compared with the previous week's total. A year ago last week 136,176 hogs were on sale.

Around 60c lower.

Closing prices last week were around 60c lower on the average than the previous week's close, although the top price showed 75c decline. A year ago the average was around $11.30, compared with a weekly average of $8.75 for hogs last week.

Packers took another rap at cattle prices this week and cut values to new low levels for the season and top price was lowest since the low time in 1926 and average for all steers and yearlings was lowest since late in 1924. Demand for beef was curtailed largely by extremely hot weather which has prevailed over most of the country. While there have been some price cuts in retail markets the reduction has not been great enough to stimulate consumption materially.

The average price for beef steers during the week was $8.75, prime steers bringing $10.85 and common steers going at $5.00. Butcher cows and heifers of good quality sold around $5.00@6.00 and thin she stock sold down to $2.75.

The supply of cattle at Chicago during the week at 37,500 head was smaller than the previous week but as compared with the limited demand the supply was liberal. Prices dropped mostly $1.00 during the week on all but best grades of steers, which were around 50c lower.

Shows Sharp Losses.

Butcher stock values declines $1.00 or more and compared with two weeks ago heifers sold $3.00 or more lower. Bulls declined 50c during the week, and while best vealers were steady with the previous week's close the market showed sharp losses of $2.00 or more compared with two weeks ago.

Lamb values followed the same downward trend that was evident in the general live stock market this week. Best fat lambs closed the week mostly $1.00 lower and some of the less desirable grades were $1.50 lower than a week ago.

Supplies Saturday were estimated at 4,000 head but most of them were directs to packers from other points. The week's supply of lambs at 72,000 head was about the same as last week but the run for both weeks was liberal and in excess of the demand. Hot weather curtailed consumption of dressed lamb as well as other meats and prices declined at most of the wholesale prices.

Fat Sheep Scarce.

The week's top for fat lambs was $10.00 and late in the week the best price was $9.85. Bulk of fat lambs during the period sold at $8.00 to $10.00 and culls ranged down to $5.00 and below. Some light weight, inferior culls went as low as $3.50.

Fat sheep were comparatively scarce and prices showed little change during the period. Best fat ewes sold around $4.00 and $4.25 with $2.50 to $3.75 taking most offerings. Thin canner ewes ranged down to $1.00.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 15,000 cattle, 45,000 hogs, and 20,000 sheep, against 12,845 cattle, 47,740 hogs, and 13,682 sheep a week ago, and 18,197 cattle, 53,296 hogs and 14,746 sheep, the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 43,000 cattle, 129,000 hogs, and 70,000 sheep, against 40,438 cattle, 125,196 hogs, and 62,886 sheep a year ago.

FARM AND GARDEN

FAMILY RAISES CELERY AS MAIN CROP 15 YEARS

BY PAUL POTTER.

Cultivation of the same crop for 15 years on farms in Michigan, then in Wisconsin and along the Rio Grande in Texas has made success almost a hobby for the Nick Ketelaar family in growing celery.

The start was made fifteen years ago at Kalamazoo, Mich., which then was leading the state as a celery center although Holland, Mich., now threatens this title. Later the Ketelaar family moved to Holland, but found market competition too keen. The farm at Delavan was started and this year fifteen acres of it are planted to the crop which is one requiring intense cultivation and a large amount of hand labor per acre.

Within another week there will be celery for sale by the Ketelaars from their Delavan farm, while in another part of Walworth county, near Elkhorn, Wis., five additional acres of fluffy peat soil that once was the bottom of Turtle creek have been planted out and will be near maturity in three to four weeks.

Ketelaars First in Texas.

Several seasons ago the Ketelaars tried celery on a farm which they own along the Rio Grande river valley in Texas. They say it was the first attempt to grow celery there but that it has been a success.

Low but rich soil, with a large percentage of organic material has proven the best for growing celery on a large commercial scale. The five-acre tract five miles north of Elkhorn, Wis., contains peat that is slowly turning to rich black soil. Because it is so low, tile has been laid in two directions to provide sufficient drainage.

Plants are grown in the spring in hotbeds and set out usually in June in rows ranging from six feet apart on new land to two or three feet apart on the fields longer under cultivation. Plants in the row are six to eight inches apart. Fertilizers are used according to recommendations of the state university after soil samples are analyzed each year.

Son Also Stars in Football.

William Ketelaar, the son of Nick, believes in combining a strong mind with a strong back. He has played football at the University of Wisconsin for three seasons while he studies business procedures in the school of commerce. During the summer he works on the Delavan farm and the one near Elkhorn to keep in condition and to learn more about the growing of celery which he expects will be his life work.

Celery blight caused by hot damp weather often ruins a crop, but the blight has not appeared in the Ketelaar celery so far this year. Rows have been boarded up on the Delavan farm to blanch and lengthen the stalks and the same procedure will be followed on the largest of the plants on the tract near Elkhorn within two weeks.

Roadside sales provide a market for some of the crop, but most of it is sold to wholesale dealers. The grower gets up at 4 a. m. to load his truck and get it to the wholesale house where it is distributed to retail merchants. Cleaning and bunching constitute a major operation during the harvest, requiring large tanks of water in which to wash off the black dirt in which the celery was grown.

Some growers bank up the rows with dirt in order to complete the blanching process, but the Ketelaars use boards as they have found that the dirt tends to "rust" the white celery stems.

FLOWER GARDENS ARE DESCRIBED IN NEW 64 PAGE TRIBUNE BOOK

Every amateur gardener with an interest in flowers will find The Tribune's new booklet on "Flower Gardening," a valuable addition to his library of lore on the subject. Experiences of others are described and their gardens are pictured inside the covers bearing an attractive tulip design. Copies will be mailed on receipt of 13 cents in stamps, or may be had for 10 cents at any Tribune public service office.

GOOD RAINS IN SUMMER BRING FARMS MILLIONS

Records of 10 Years Reveal Values.

Fargo, N. D.—Just how much is a good rain worth to the farmer? Are these so-called "million dollar" rains over rated?

J. B. Kincer, weather man for the federal department of agriculture, has been working his adding machine lately on the records of average prices for the last ten years of North Dakota crops. He has decided that one good rain any time between May and August has not been a million dollar gift, but nearer seventeen millions in value to the state.

The weather bureau has the records of rainfall for the state month by month during the growing season, and the records of crop yields are also available. With this information Mr. Kincer is able to figure out just how much one inch of rainfall means toward bigger crops.

Using the rainfall records from May to July, he found that one inch of rainfall in North Dakota produces about six million bushels of oats, nearly three million bushels of barley, nearly one million bushels of potatoes, more than a half million bushels of flaxseed, about nine million bushels of wheat and more than 125,000 tons of hay, to say nothing of truck, garden and other crops.

Mr. Kincer says it is comparatively easy for him to figure out just how much one inch of rainfall means toward bigger crops, especially for crops that demand plenty of moisture during critical periods of growth. His statistics show that papers are more often under estimating the situation when their headlines proclaim a "million dollar" rain when there has been a severe drought and rain comes just in time to save the crops.

Advises Keeping of House Plants in Pots Outdoors

House plants which have been set out of doors for the summer will do better if left in the pots, but sunk to the rims in the ground in a shaded place, Walter B. Balch, Kansas State college florist, advises. It is better to put a few inches of cinders under the pot and be insured of good drainage, keeping the roots within bounds and having soil free from earthworms when the plants are brought into the house for the winter.

QUESTIONS

Farm and garden questions of general interest will be answered to the limit of space in this department. Individual replies will be made to specific questions if stamped, self-addressed envelope is inclosed. Address letter to Agricultural Editor, Chicago Tribune.

DANDELION BLOSSOMS.

Will a dandelion blossom cut by a lawn mower immediately after its appearance and left to wither on the ground reproduce or does the plant need to keep its blossom until the top is white and fluffy before the seeds are large enough? W. H. C.

Reply.

Some of the seeds of a dandelion blossom cut in the middle of bloom will be able to mature enough to reproduce, with more of them, naturally, growing a new crop of dandelions if the blossom is allowed to grow until the top turns white.

MICHIGAN, IOWA LEAD NATION IN FORESTATED LAND

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Michigan, with 27,820 acres restored to tree growth, led all states last year in the total amount of land planted to forests by the federal forest service, department of agriculture officials announce.

Planting by all the principal agencies engaged in the work of reforestation in the United States restored to tree growth a total of 111,175 acres. New York was second with 21,135 acres and Louisiana third with 10,583 acres. Other states next in rank were Pennsylvania, Washington, Massachusetts, Ohio, and California.

Industrial forest plantings last year included 10,060 acres planted by pulp and paper companies; 8,732 acres by lumber companies; 3,189 acres by water and power companies; 1,561 acres by mining companies; 100 acres by railroad companies, and 1,446 acres by other industrial organizations.

To the end of the calendar year 1929 the cumulative total of all forest planting in the United States of which forest service has record was 1,653,308 acres. This included 274,385 acres of national forest land planted by the federal government; 200,553 acres by states; 46,282 acres by municipalities; 193,262 acres by industrial organizations; 16,335 acres by other organizations; 5,215 by schools and colleges, and 917,276 acres by farmers and other individuals.

In cumulative acreage planted, Iowa led with 242,260 acres; Nebraska was second with 219,088 acres; Kansas was third with 201,190 acres, and New York fourth with 183,369 acres.

MANGANESE ORE PRODUCERS ASK AID AGAINST REDS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 26.—Paralysis of the American manganese ore industry through dumping of huge quantities of Russian manganese in this country was revealed today when the American Manganese Producers' association, through J. Carson Adkerson, the president, let it be known that it was planning an appeal to Washington for an embargo on Russian manganese similar to the one recently placed by the treasury department on soviet paper pulpwood. A similar embargo was ordered recently on soviet matches.

Mr. Adkerson urged also the advisability of joint action by manganese ore producers and other industries alleged to be suffering from soviet dumping, such as the anthracite and lumber industries, in an effort to force an American embargo on all objectionable soviet exports.

Mr. Adkerson declared that as a result of the Russian competition at prices which cannot be met by American producers because of what he termed "the slave labor" used in the production of the soviet ore, all American manganese mines have been closed, an industry with an investment of $20,000,000 is being threatened with ruin, and more than 3,000 workers have been thrown out of employment.

Asks an Investigation.

Pending the appeal of the producers' association to the authorities in Washington, Mr. Adkerson addressed a letter yesterday to Representative Hamilton Fish Jr., chairman of the congressional committee investigating communism, asking that the committee investigate and establish the facts concerning soviet dumping of manganese ore. The committee concluded its hearings here on Thursday and proceeded to Detroit.

During the sessions in this city Representative John E. Nelson of Maine, a member of the committee, emphasized the eventual danger to America in trade with soviet Russia because of what he, too, characterized as the system of indentured, cheap labor employed under the soviet system. Speaking of the dumping by soviet Russia of hundreds of millions of bushels of wheat and of coal and lumber, Mr. Nelson pointed out what he considered a grave danger to American prosperity should the five year plan of industrialization pursued by the soviet government prove successful.

Defeat Tariff, Is Charge.

In his letter to Representative Fish Mr. Adkerson said that "soviet producers are dumping manganese ore on the American market at prices regardless of the cost of production, thereby defeating the purposes of the recent action of congress with respect to a tariff on manganese ore."

"The Russian policy of dumping manganese ore in the American market and sold without regard to price and cost of production," Mr. Adkerson wrote, "is wrecking the American manganese industry and has just recently caused the major producers of this country to close their mines and plants, throwing thousands of men out of employment. This situation is due entirely to the Russian program as it applies to manganese."

SALVATION ARMY ANNOUNCES BIG BUILDING PLAN

Will Spend Millions in New Construction.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

A building program which will involve several millions of dollars in land and buildings is now being considered by the Salvation Army for the eleven midwestern states under the control of the army's territorial headquarters in Chicago. Meanwhile the first step in this imposing construction development, involving $500,000, most of which is in the Chicago area, was announced yesterday by Commissioner William A. McIntyre, recently appointed territorial commander for the central states.

WILLIAM A. McINTYRE.

The most important of the trio of new buildings, plans for which have just been completed by Albert C. Fehlow, architect for the Salvation Army for many years, is an industrial home and warehouse which is to be erected at 2250 Clybourn avenue. It will extend back to Dominick street and along that thoroughfare for one block south to Webster avenue.

Work for 150 Men.

The first unit of what eventually will be a huge structure is to be 107x100, two stories in height, and will represent a total investment in land and building of approximately $230,000. When completed next January or February this new industrial home will give employment to 100 or 150 men in furniture repair work, paper sorting, clothing repairing, etc.

This building will be of fireproof construction, with exterior walls of brick, with stone trim. Mr. Fehlow's design is modernistic. Bids will be asked for within a week with the expectation of having it under way in a month.

The second structure in the $500,000 program is a corps building now under construction at the southeast corner of Grove avenue and Spring street. This will represent a total investment in land and building of $120,000. It will contain an auditorium seating 200, a Home league room, Boy Scout and Girl Guard rooms, and a band room. The building will be of fireproof construction, with stone and granite exterior. It is to be completed about Nov. 1.

Service Ever Increasing.

The third building of the $500,000 trio will be a $150,000 structure to be erected in St. Paul, Minn., on 3d street, overlooking the new civic center of that city.

According to Col. John R. Wiseman, head of the property department of the Chicago territorial headquarters, the Salvation Army's growing needs for buildings and equipment to care for the ever increasing service it is rendering the community has necessitated consideration of the before mentioned building program. This eventually will involve an outlay of several millions of dollars. Details of all of this big development program are not yet available.

"Commissioner McIntyre recently returned from a flying trip over the eleven states in this territory," said Col. Wiseman, "and since then this tentative expansion program has been under consideration to care for demanded extensions of our work."

Known as a Builder.

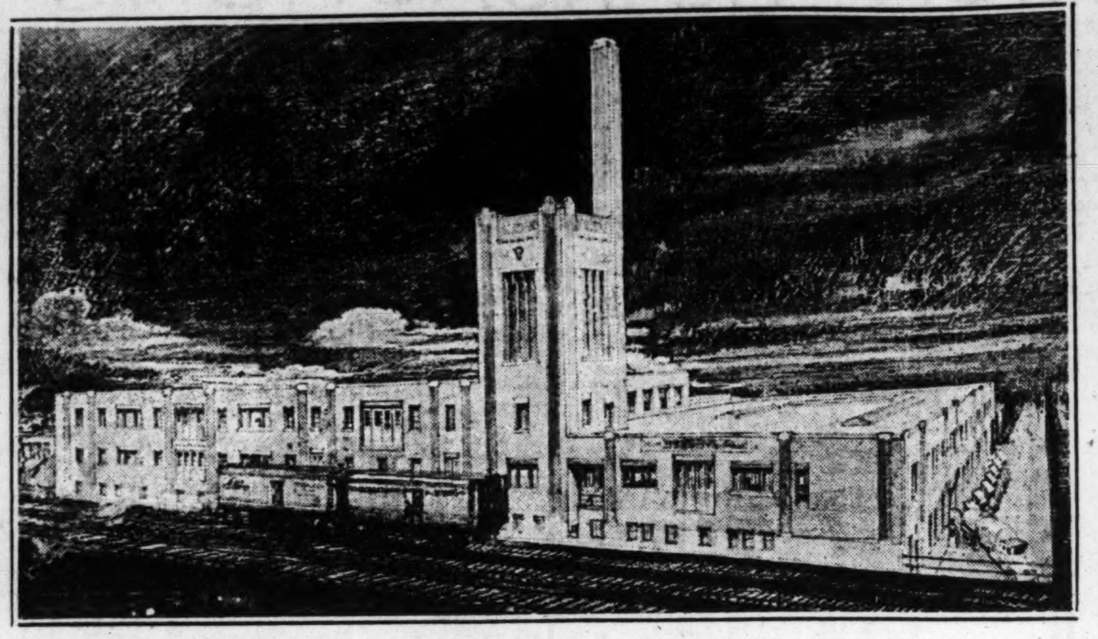
Commissioner McIntyre, according to Mr. Fehlow, is known as a builder. He has been active in housing the Salvation Army in the east and south. He was recently transferred from the south to this territory.

The Salvation Army maintains three industrial homes in Chicago, one on the north side, one on the west, and a third on the south side. These are all self-supporting. The west side home is at 1325 West Congress street, the south side unit is at 62d and Wentworth, and the third is a temporary home, which will be replaced by the new one told about, on Clybourn avenue. The army also maintains an auxiliary warehouse at 42d street and Drexel boulevard, which was used all last winter both for a dormitory and for work.

The Salvation Army also maintains the Palace hotel, a six story hostelry for men, at 623 West Madison street. It has accommodations for 650. It also has one or two maternity hospitals in each of the eleven states in this territory, accommodating fifty or sixty girls.

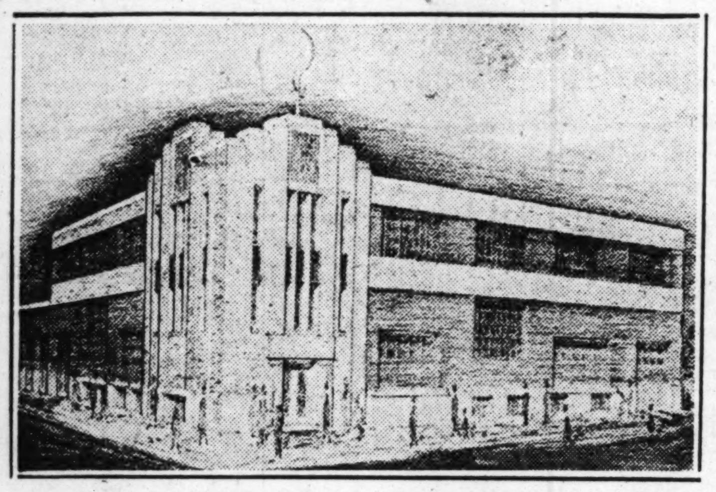
The states supervised from the territorial headquarters at 719 North State street are Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana, Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska, South Dakota, North Dakota, Missouri, and Kansas. Lewis E. Myers, new president of the Chicago board of education, is chairman of the Salvation Army Chicago board.

$950,000 BORDEN PASTEURIZING PLANT



E. E. Roberts and Elmer C. Roberts designed the above $950,000 Hamilton Park pasteurizing plant for Borden's Farm Products company of Illinois. It will occupy a site bounded on the north by 70th place, by 70th street on the south and by the Rock Island railroad on the west. The 100 foot tower will contain an auxiliary water supply with a 20,000 gallon tank.

FOR THE JOBLESS MAN



Albert C. Fehlow, architect for the Salvation Army, designed the above structure, the first unit of a huge industrial home to be erected by the Salavation Army at 2250 Clybourn avenue. Details are given in another column of this page.

STEAMFITTERS START MOVE TO REBUILD PLANTS

Establish Bureau for Repair Work.

BY THOMAS WREN.

To stimulate business and reduce unemployment among the building artisans, the officials of the Chicago Master Steamfitters' association have established a service bureau to promote the rehabilitation of heating plants in buildings throughout the Chicago territory.

Supervision of the new service bureau is under direction of John McDonald, an engineer who has been identified with the heating business in the city since 1899. Field men visit the owners of old buildings and stress the importance of doing repair work now, with material prices low and a large surplus of efficient labor prevalent.

Mr. McDonald has mapped out a program for the bureau which includes addresses on the rehabilitation plan before meetings of real estate boards, associations of manufacturers, and civic organizations.

It was announced that the Chicago Master Steamfitters' association is forty-two years old. Several years ago the association instituted a plan to protect home builders from being the victims of poor heating plant installation.

The work done by association members is guaranteed by the association officials. Engineers employed by the organization visit the construction of homes and test the heating installation several times before actual completion of the heating system. It was said in the event there should be any flaw in the operation that may curtail efficient heating service, the complaint of the home owner is forwarded to the Chicago Master Steam Fitters' association. Examination is again made by association engineers and the defect remedied at the expense of the master steamfitter who installed the plant.

While the Master Steam Fitters' association concentrates on this service for small home builders, the guarantee includes all types of construction on which are engaged the members of the employers' organization, it was said.

This year the American Federation of Labor will meet early in October at Boston for its annual convention. The labor federation last year met at Toronto, and the principal discussion centered about a newspaper editorial that charged the officialdom of the federation with inactivity regarding the organization of the wage earners below the Mason-Dixie line. The Boston convention is expected to develop into a spirited meeting.

20,000 PEOPLE LIVE IN CHICAGO'S 100% CO-OPS, SURVEY SAYS

More than 20,000 people in Chicago and the metropolitan area now live in 100 per cent coöperative apartment homes that have a value of over $80,000,000, according to a survey just published in the form of a booklet by the coöperative apartment division of the Chicago Real Estate board, of which James J. Carroll is chairman. These figures look even larger when it is remembered that in 1919 there were no coöps of this character in Chicagoland.

JAMES J. CARROLL.

In 1920 there were two coöperative apartment building containing forty-five suites, with 207 rooms.

Year by year the number of coöperative apartment buildings erected increased until in 1927, the record year for this class of structure, there were twenty-three buildings constructed with a total of 1,158 apartments containing 6,357 rooms. In 1928 only ten coöps were erected, containing 393 apartments with a total of 2,673 rooms. Last year five coöperative apartment buildings were erected containing 225 apartments with 1,725 rooms.

Chicago now has a grand total of 100 coöperative apartment buildings of the 100 per cent variety, containing a total of 3,414 suites and 18,831 rooms.

"No bond, insurance company loan or any other mortgage on a 100 per cent coöperative apartment has ever gone into receivership to the knowledge of the Chicago Real Estate board," the survey states. P. S. Gilbertson of the Prudential Securities company, is the author of the survey for the realty board.

OLCOTT LOWERS REALTY VALUES IN BLUE BOOK

Sees World's Fair as Aid to Market.

With the publication of the annual edition of Olcott's Land Values Blue Book of Chicago for 1930, George C. Olcott issued his annual review and for the first time in many years lower realty values were announced. At the same time, however, he sounded an optimistic note by calling attention to the probability that the coming World's Fair would help bring about a better real estate market in a shorter time than it usually took after a depression. He also thought the traffic ordinance would help the realty situation.

"In conformity with the conservative policy which the publishers of the blue book have pursued in the past," Mr. Olcott stated, "values were reduced only about 10 per cent where known offerings would dictate a 20 or 30 per cent cut. The same policy was pursued while values were advancing. The theory is that, as a few sales at a higher price do not determine the value for half a mile or more around, so a few offerings at a lower price do not make the value for the whole neighborhood.

"The real estate market during the last year was dull and featureless. Apparently the peak prices had been reached in 1928. The year 1929 was characterized by a tendency on the part of owners to hold fast to previous quotations. This tendency developed later into a period of weakness as the transfers fell off in number. Most holders, however, refused to make concessions, and only those forced by the stress of financial needs, as well as a few who considered the time opportune to sell, yielded in their asking prices.

"If there is a regular cycle of commercial depressions, we are due for a period of slow recovery which will take a number of years to run its course. However, the parallel between past depressions and the present is not complete. The number of savings depositors in the United States was 1,630,000 in 1870, with an average deposit of $333. In 1890 there were 4,258,000, with an average credit of $358 each. In 1928 the number of depositors had increased to 15,004,000, with an average savings of $682.

"These figures would seem to indicate that there is a silver lining to the cloud. Not only that, but the prospective World's Fair of 1933 still further gives hope of a return of prosperity in a fewer number of years than in previous depressions."

SELLS FOUR FLAT BUILDING.

The four flats at the northeast corner of 89th place and St. Lawrence avenue have been sold by William and Margaret Browne to George and Margaret Rapp for a reported $26,000. W. A. Welches of the Chatham office of Carroll, Schendorf & Boenicke was broker.

AN ARCHITECT BUILDS RETREAT TO PLEASE SELF

Result Is Attractive Log Cabin in Duneland.

[Booklets on the following subjects may be obtained by sending a self addressed, stamped envelope to Louise Bargelt, Home Builder's editor, The Chicago Tribune. "Choosing the Home Site" and "101 Ways of Remodeling the Home"]

BY LOUISE BARGELT.
[Home Builders Editor.]

It is always interesting to see a house which an architect builds for himself, and this vacation cottage of stripped cedar logs on Lake Michigan at Dune Acres, Ind., was designed by William B. Ittner, a well known St. Louis architect.

LOUISE BARGELT.
[Hutchinson Photo.]

Mr. Ittner chose this spot amid the Dunes as a location fulfilling ideal requirements for the summer home. The cottage is so built that it can be occupied during cold weather months.

It stands on a slope of ground, as can be seen from the photograph. Rustic stone steps lead up to the front entrance. Rustic and remote though the dwelling appears, the attached garage, under the upper bedroom, is visible evidence that after all the dwellers within are in close touch—when they wish to be—with the outside world.

Built of Cedar Logs.

Of stripped cedar logs is the exterior, on a concrete foundation. The logs are notched and spiked together in the same way that our forefathers built. The space between the logs is caulked with oakum. Unlike the pioneer houses of old, the architect has employed steel sash for maximum air and weather protection.

Across the front of the house is a large porch, which is used for dining in pleasant weather. The living room is a story and a half in height and its floor is of linestome flagging laid in random.

The roof trusses and rafters are made of cedar logs split in two. The inside of the walls and the partitions as well as the logs are unplastered.

Effect Is Pleasing.

With a large open fireplace and early American furniture the effect is pleasing.

There are 5 rooms in all—living room, kitchen, and 2 master bedrooms, and servants' quarters, which occupy the space directly over the garage. The house can be heated in cold weather with pipeless furnace.

It is easy to imagine the pleasure to be had from such a rustic cottage as this in the dunes, and its sturdiness is a big asset in its favor during the colder months that it may be occupied.

ELMORE BUYS 120 ACRES FOR SUB IN TINLEY PARK

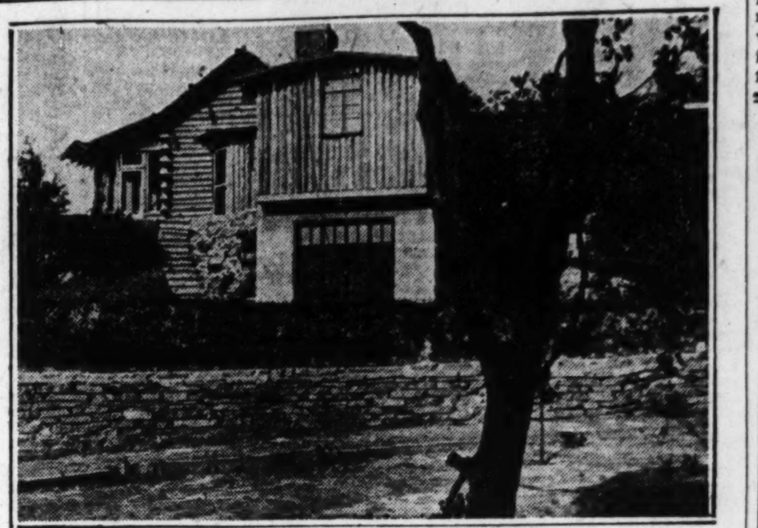
The Elmore Real Estate Improvement company has purchased from William Mauhoff the 120 acre tract of land at the southeast corner of 175th street and Ridgeland avenue, Tinley Park, for an undisclosed consideration. Franklin Eulette and Paul Rauhoff were brokers.

This property, which had been in the possession of Mr. Mauhoff for the last sixty years, is to be subdivided into one and two acre estates, according to Grover C. Elmore, president of the Elmore organization. The construction of ten dwellings of five and six rooms each, having a total value of $75,000, already has been started.

SHOE COMPANY LEASES STORE.

Nelson Thomasson has leased the store at 3208 Lawrence avenue to the Novelty Shoe company for a five year term. Kaplan & Co. were brokers.

AS IN DAYS OF OLD



Everyone is interested when an architect builds his own house and this rustic cottage on Lake Michigan at Dune Acres, Ind., of stripped cedar logs, the logs notched and spiked together in the fashion our forefathers built, has a strong and unusual appeal. William B. Ittner, architect, St. Louis, Mo.

GRANT OUTLINES ESSENTIALS FOR IDEAL BEDROOM

Proper Light, Fresh Air Are First.

BY HOMER GRANT.

Since the up to date bedroom and bathroom are so closely related, it is only appropriate to include with a discussion of baths a summary of bedroom fundamentals to be considered in the building or remodeling of a home.

In the bedroom the individual holds sway, his taste dominates its comforts, conveniences, and furnishings, and any eccentricities he may possess can be indulged to the full.

Adequate ventilation is one of the first essentials. Cross drafts should be provided for if possible, and the curtaining of the windows so designed as to allow a maximum of sunlight.

For the dark hours of the day pleasing and sufficient artificial illumination is vitally necessary.

As decorative colors in a bedroom are usually confined to the more restful and non-exciting shades, so the ceiling luminaire which is to light the room should be of low brightness—soothing to the person in bed.

Well Lighted Mirror.

That the mirror of the dressing table should be well lighted goes without saying, and this can be secured by brackets on either side of the dressing table. Some favor attachable brackets clamped to each side of the mirror so that the dressing table can be moved about if desired. Where wall brackets are installed, ample space should be left between them to accommodate a wide dresser. Fifty watt lamps are usually recommended.

For the bedside table a portable lamp is extremely convenient. Convenience outlets may supply heating pad and possibly a vibrator, as well as a lamp. Often this table has convenience outlets built into it and supplied with a current by a cord which is plugged into a wall outlet.

A good reading light can be supplied by a shaded lamp attached to the head of the bed. Again a small lamp attached under the bed and controlled by a switch over the bed furnishes light on the floor, if one has to move about in the night.

Space Saving Beds.

Nor should the clothes closet be forgotten in the bedroom lighting. A bracket light inside, just over the doorway, furnishes a good light. This can be operated by a pull chain switch or by an automatic door operated switch. A small lamp of 60 watts can be used as closet illumination and used so infrequently it costs but a trifle.

Space saving roller or concealed or built in beds are always a convenience in a home. They make it possible for a bedroom to play a dual rôle—to give twenty-four hour service instead of ten or twelve hour service.

Efficiency wardrobes add to bedroom accommodations as do racks and fitments of various kinds for closet interiors and closet doors. Cedar lined closets are a joy and a protection. Radiant gas heaters give supplementary warmth many seasons of the year and make early dressing or late retiring a comfort on many occasions.

Wall safes provide a protected seclusion for one's valuables. Window ventilators solve the problem of fresh air in the room day and night without the danger of direct drafts. Window guards where the bedroom is on the first floor serve to protect the sleep from night marauders. And a mirrored door in a bedroom will always be appreciated—at least by the feminine contingent of the family.

Walls and floors of modern bedrooms are treated in many ways. The subject deserves a special article in itself. They can be as soft toned or as colorful as individual taste dictates, and as elegant as one can afford. Color, homogeneous design for fitments and accessories and a veritable elegance of appointments distinguish the modern bedroom as well as the modern bathroom.

"Villa Turicum": Glimpses of the Lake Forest Country Estate of Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick

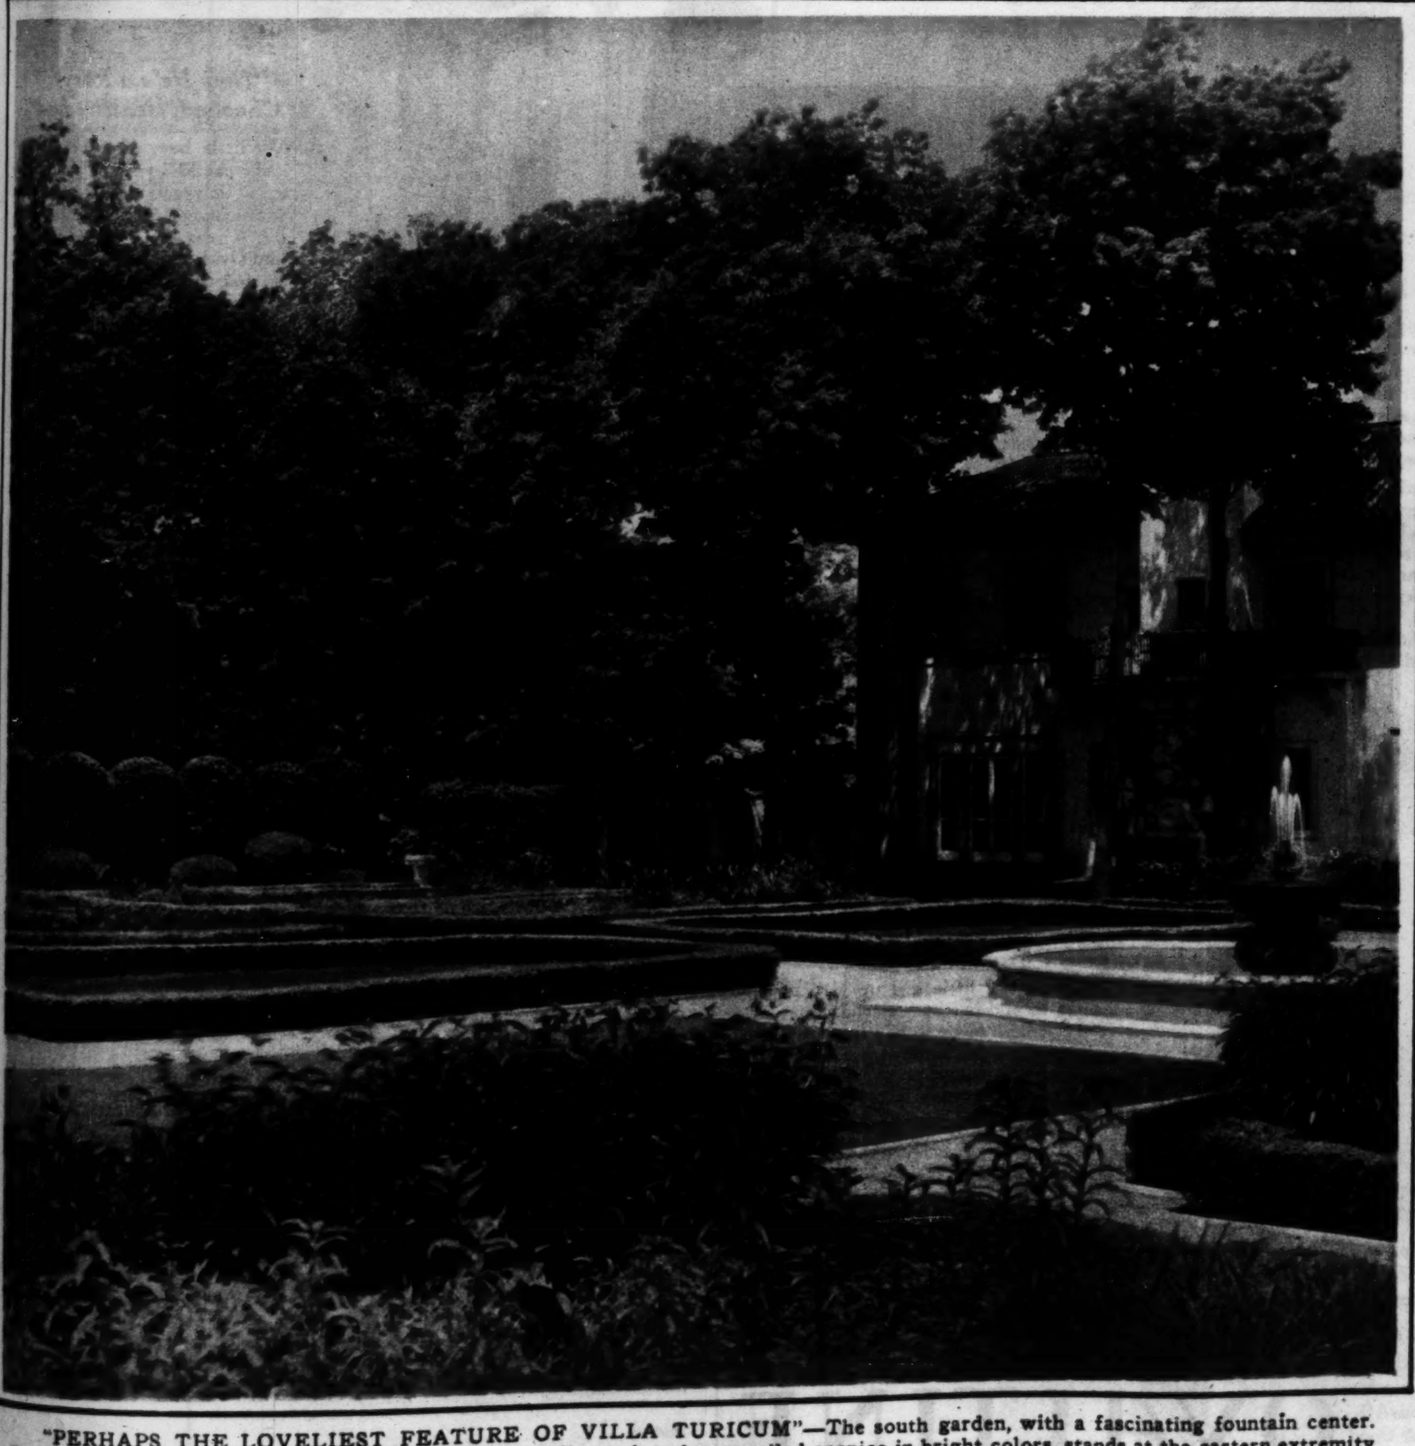
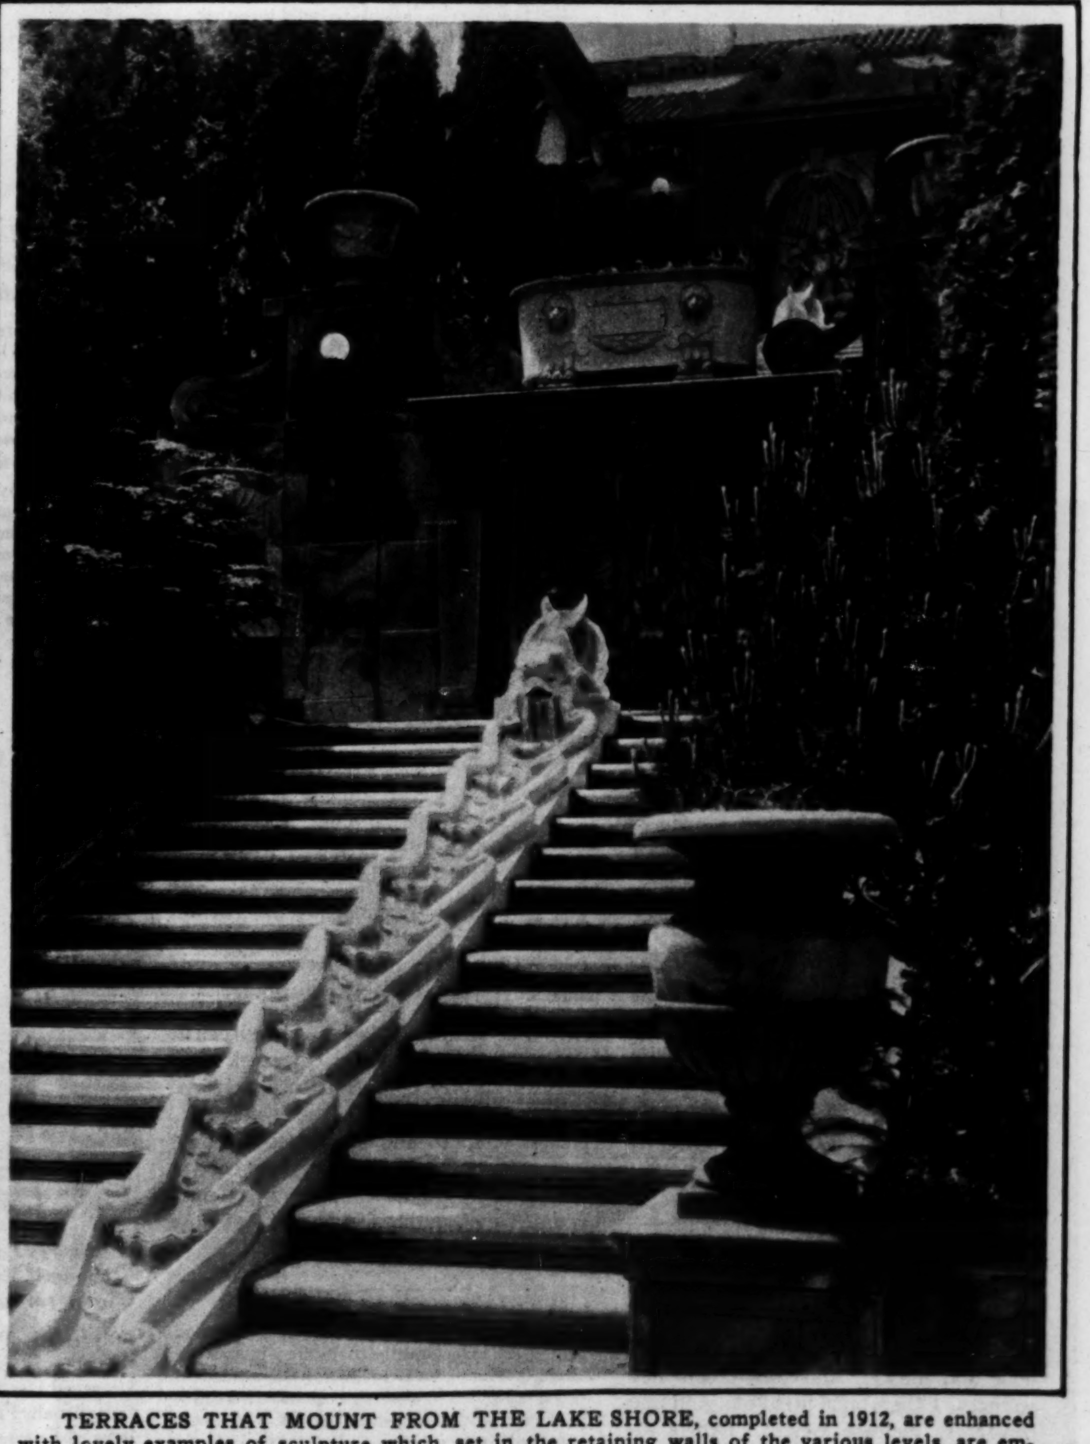
THE SUNKEN GARDEN, said to be "the finest example in America of the Italian treatment in landscape design." In the lily-pool garden two fountain groups of bronze dolphins play into a marble basin; there is a riot of floral color, at the background of which are set pillared busts of marble, silhouetted against a rare hemlock hedge. Herein, says a writer, is a suggestion of the Roman gardens of long ago.



"PERHAPS THE LOVELIEST FEATURE OF VILLA TURICUM"—The south garden, with a fascinating fountain center. The residence, finished in stucco with green shutters, tile roof, and a stenciled cornice in bright colors, stands at the eastern extremity of an expansive mall, which is gained by an entrance drive, straight as an arrow, cut through woodland. From the drive the view across the elm-studded mall is one of breath-taking beauty.



TERRACES THAT MOUNT FROM THE LAKE SHORE, completed in 1912, are enhanced with lovely examples of sculpture which, set in the retaining walls of the various levels, are employed as fountains. Down the slope thus beautified, water murmurs over marble cascades. Portrayed are the lower cascade, its fountain terrace above, and the levels that rise to the residence.

What Swiss Science Found Out About Your Underweight, Nervous Child

LIFE STORIES of Increasing Weight—A pound or more a week

Improving Appetite—*M*ore food with no coaxing

Bringing New Energy—*A*nd greater strength each day

The discovery from Switzerland that is solving child problems for mothers everywhere

Over in Switzerland, as you may know, they have done wonders in child feeding. Their famous child sanitariums have accomplished almost the miraculous.

If you have a child that is underweight—nervous, or easily exhausted—that won't eat enough, or drink milk, we think you will be interested in every picture on this page. For these pictures illustrate the use of this Swiss method in the United States.

These pictures tell a wonderful story to any mother—the story of how thousands of nervous, unhappy, underweight children have been almost miraculously rebuilt to the happy vigor of normal childhood.

The results pictured here were gained by the use of a remarkable Swiss food concentrate. Discovered almost 40 years ago by a famous Swiss scientist, the use of this food-drink—called Ovaltine—has spread over some 54 countries of the world.

New to America, over 20,000 doctors—many world-famous child experts—are advising it.

If your child is underweight for his age or height—try it.

If your child is nervous, irritable, cries easily or tosses in his sleep—try it.

If your child's appetite is poor—or he won't drink milk—try it.

If your child seems to tire quickly—try it.

If your child is recovering from any illness—try it.

If your child tends to lose weight during the summer—try it.

It has worked wonders in thousands of cases like these. It may do much or little for your child—but try it.

What It Is

Ovaltine is a food-drink that is utterly different in formula, taste and effect from any other known. A scientific food concentrate not remotely to be confused with powdered, sugary, chocolate, malt or cocoa "mixtures" offered as substitutes.

Developed almost 40 years ago by a famous Swiss scientist, Ovaltine contains, in highly concentrated form, virtually every vital food element necessary to life, including, of course, the Sunshine Vitamin D.

Due to an exclusive process, employed by no other food-drink known, it supplies those vital elements in such easily digested form that a child's system can absorb them even when digestion is impaired.

How It Acts

Some of those elements in Ovaltine build bone and muscle. And thus create new strength. Others build firm flesh. And thus constantly increase weight. Others develop nerve poise; for, as weight increases nervousness perceptibly decreases.

"He's Gained 5 Pounds in 4½ Weeks"

After my little boy had had his tonsils removed, I found it impossible to build up either his nerves or his weight. He was much underweight and so fretful that I thought I might have to take him to the mountains for his health. My husband and I decided to give Ovaltine a trial—giving it to our boy regularly twice a day. Yesterday we weighed him and do you know what we found?

He had gained 5 pounds in 4½ weeks! These results were so surprising that I weighed him twice to make sure that I was right. Really, I can't be thankful enough for Ovaltine.

Mrs. M. W. C., 2640 N. Charles St.;
Baltimore, Maryland

Other elements foster richer blood. And thus combat conditions of anemia. All are supplied in scientific ratio to meet the body's needs. That is why results are often so astonishing.

Digests Starches

Then, too, Ovaltine has high diastatic power. Which means the power of digesting the undigested starches from other foods eaten.

Thus, this scientific creation not only furnishes tremendous food energy in itself, but greatly increases the effectiveness of all starch foods your child eats. Such as oatmeal, bread, potatoes, etc., which comprise over half the normal child's daily diet. Consider what this means.

You take this food-drink in milk, hot or cold. Children love its new delicious flavor—it makes them drink more milk and makes every glass doubly nourishing.

Give it at breakfast, always. Give it with meals and between meals. One week's results will surprise you. Note the difference in your child's weight; in nerve poise, in greater strength and energy. Get a can tomorrow and find out, for your child's sake, what this creation means to you and yours. Get Ovaltine—in 3 sizes—at any drug or grocery store.

(Note)—Thousands of nervous people, men and women, are using Ovaltine to restore vitality when fatigued. During the Great War, it was a standard ration prescribed by the Red Cross as a restorative food for invalid soldiers of all nations. Ovaltine is now made in 8 countries (including the U. S. A.) according to the exact original Swiss formula—to meet the demand from 54 different nations. 743

"It Put Her on Her Feet, When I Was Sure I Was Losing Her"

My little daughter 2½ years old had the flu with measles following. As the result of this she was very puny and nervous, cried all day, bit her finger nails, and refused to eat her meals or drink milk. At night she was restless. Altogether she was in bad shape.

Ovaltine put my little girl on her feet again when I was sure I was losing her. The roses are coming back in her cheeks. She sleeps and eats regularly, does not bite her finger nails any more, plays out in the sunshine all day and is altogether a different little girl.

Mrs. John Rosen,
8416 Garfield Blvd., Cleveland, Ohio

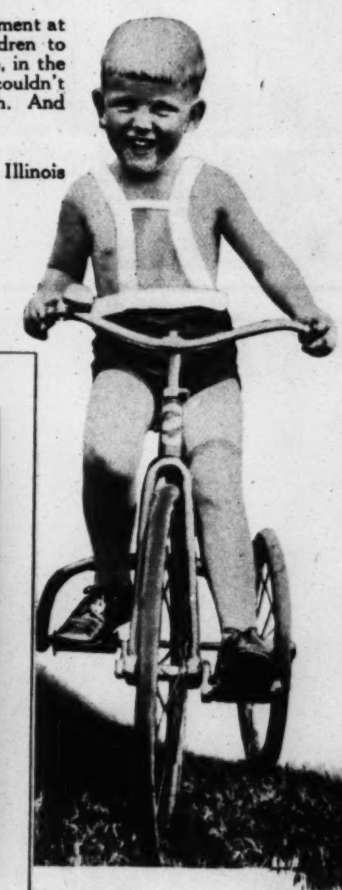
"They Drink Twice the Milk They Used to—Since a Friend Advised Ovaltine"

My little boy and girl would not drink the amount of milk the doctor said they should have. I tried every way I knew to coax them to drink their milk without success. They were nervous, underweight and irritable and I was worried.

Then a friend advised me to try Ovaltine—to put it in the children's milk and give it to them hot or cold.

I did this and noticed an improvement at once. That's how I got my children to drink twice the milk they used to, in the face of the fact that a week ago I couldn't even coax them to drink enough. And they are so much more healthy.

Mrs. C. A. Shumaker,
20th Ave. & 14th St., Fulton, Illinois



"Now He's a Rosy-Cheeked, Healthy Lad"

My little boy, three years old, had rickets. I tried to build him up with vegetables, fruit juices and medicine, but he got no better. A year ago I started to give him Ovaltine. From the first he started to pick up and is now a rosy-cheeked, healthy lad. He takes Ovaltine twice a day and shall continue to do so.

"They've Made Wonderful Gains in Weight and Color"

I've been using Ovaltine since it first came on the market for both my children, ages 5 and 7 years. Like many children, my little girl, now aged 7, was underweight and not very strong. She refused to eat breakfast or to drink milk and my little son was much the same.

Having read about Ovaltine in a magazine, I decided to try it. Both of the children loved it from the first, particularly the little girl. Now they both drink their Ovaltine regularly, warm in winter, cold in summer, and I feel that they are always sure of having enough food.

Ovaltine has built my little girl up into a strong robust girl, and has been splendid for the boy. They've both made wonderful gains in weight and color, all due to the constant use of Ovaltine. I've told many, many mothers about it both in Chicago, my former home, and here in Jacksonville.

"We Noticed an Immediate Increase in Weight"

My small son was a perfectly healthy child, but his appetite had fallen off noticeably during the summer heat. I wanted to see if Ovaltine would provide the necessary food elements and vitamins even though he was not eating as much solid food as usual.

We noticed an immediate increase in weight and he has certainly come through the hot weather in first-class shape. He likes Ovaltine immensely—drinks it 3 times a day with meals and whenever he wants it between meals.

The Zip and Sing of a Taut Line... the Sparkle and Coolness of a Clear Stream

THE rushing water is shadow-flecked... the wind stirs the leaves of the trees, the only sound. Poised he waits, and then the high, thin click of the reel as he casts. Here is a sportsman, finding vigor and exhilaration in the great outdoors.

Do you wonder that he, and countless others like him, drink "Canada Dry," the sportsman's beverage? For in its sparkling, cool, clear depths he finds the vigor of sport itself.

You, too, are a sportsman. You know the thrill of exercise. And you value excellence above all qualities. Then you probably drink "Canada Dry." For, like sportsmen, it has basic excellence.

The very foundation of "Canada Dry" is "Liquid Ginger"— which we make from selected Jamaica ginger root by a special process. This process is exclusively controlled by us and, unlike any other method, retains for "Canada Dry" all of the original aroma, flavor and natural essence of the ginger root. Rigid laboratory control assures uniformity, purity and highest quality. A special process of carbonation enables "Canada Dry" to retain its sparkle long after the bottle has been opened.

Such exclusive methods produce a ginger ale of matchless flavor. No wonder it has won worldwide acclaim! In famous New York clubs... in the Houses of Parliament at Ottawa... in the great hotels of London and Paris, "Canada Dry" is the choice of many, many people.

And in countless homes throughout this country this inimitable beverage adds its distinction and zest to dining. The Hostess Package of 12 bottles is a convenient way always to have "Canada Dry" on hand. Order it today.

HAVE YOU TRIED—?

Canada Dry's new Golden Ginger Ale. Never before have you tasted a golden ginger ale with such a marvelous flavor. The secret of its delight comes from a secret and exclusive process of beverage making. Buy it where you buy "Canada Dry."

MUST YOU CHOOSE between risking your frock or your friends?

the answer is Néy!

A serious question, that — as EVANS soon discovered when they undertook to find out why some women do NOT use a deodorant. No considerate woman would knowingly run the risk of giving offense to her friends. Yet, surely, lovely dresses do not grow on bushes!

So, you see, the answer really is "NÉY" —the new and different EVANS liquid deodorant. NÉY completely checks under-arm perspiration and prevents body odors, yet it is so safe it cannot injure or stain the most delicate fabric or irritate the tenderest skin. And it DRIES INSTANTLY!

NÉY is antiseptic, too, and was developed expressly for safe, effective use after application of EVANS Depilatory. They're actually made for each other and may be found together at drug stores and toilet goods counters. NÉY, 50¢. Depilatory cream, 60¢ and $1.00; powder, 75¢.

Mum offers permanent protection from underarm offense, for it is something you can always use.

Make the use of this dainty deodorant a daily habit. Morning and evening. Then you're always safe. Never at a disadvantage. No hour of the day or night can ever be ruined by that arch-enemy of charm—body odor.

That's the beauty of Mum! The utter simplicity of its use. You need not plan ahead, nor make elaborate preparations for its application. Nor wait for it to dry, or fear its effect on skin, or dainty fabrics. The moment you've used Mum, you're ready to go! And absolutely safeguarded against any perspiration odor.

Mum is as bland as any face cream and is, in fact, beneficial to skin. Perfectly harmless to fabrics. Its only action is to neutralize odors caused by the chemistry of the body.

Keep a jar of Mum on your dressing table. Use it every day, and be serenely confident of yourself all the time. You'll always find Mum at all toilet-goods counters for only 35c. Or three times the quantity for 60c. And you use so little each time! There's no waste.

The Scientists

[Copyright: 1930: By The Chicago Tribune.]

By W. E. Hill

Professor Koogles is lecturing before the Woman's Shakespeare club on the subject of Mr. Einstein's theories. "The Quantum Theory in a Nutshell," is the title of the lecture, and it's some fun, all right. Mrs. Hazel Debevoise is giving Mrs. Harvey Foot a telling look which says, plain as words, "He has no charm, has he?"

Many people who have never seen a man who devotes his life to the cause of science at close range imagine that his off duty hours are spent peering into retorts and test tubes and duodenums, but they are all wrong. A scientist at play is just like anybody else; he has just as many temptations to go wrong as the tired business boys.

A scientist at home, about to go upstairs to tell his little girl a bedtime story about Johnny Amoeba and Grandpa Tadpole.

Professor Isadore Molecule, who is a great believer in the ascendancy of the atom. "If the power latent in the more refined atom were liberated, provided, of course, that the atom wanted to," (reasons Professor Molecule), "enough horse power would be liberated to carry our tallest skyscraper across the continent and back again." (Professor Molecule is shown here in a relaxed pose during a rest period among his atoms.)

The inventor. Meet Mr. Harry Fuse, of the De Luxo Laboratories, perfecting a contrivance whereby the static of the ordinary radio will be converted into the "boop-a-doop" noises of Miss Helen Kane, thus creating pleasing sounds for the listening ears, instead of the raucous dissonances to which the radio fans have been subject.

"Do come up and dine with us some evening soon. Because you'll be thrilled to death with our new goldfish globe—and, besides, I want to consult with you about the snail's diet." (A lovely lady luring an under-the-sea scientist to a dinner engagement.)

The scientist's sweetheart. Emma is desperately in love with a geologist, and you'd never guess the rebuffs that cupid is subject to over the love of a geologist. Many's the sylvan path that Emma lures her big, strong man of science along, hoping to hear the question popped, only to have him leap into a pile of stones after a fossil. Cecil, for that is his name, no less, can tell all about a fossil's history, even back ten thousand years, long before they had talkies, and Emma should be very much intrigued, but she isn't. Next time, Emma will drag Cecil into a Clara Bow movie and lean her curly head on his shoulder.

This is where big business and science get together, introducing Mr. Orville Millions, who is heavily endowing a laboratory movement which will enable several scientists to devote their joint efforts to a big expose of the moral stamina of guinea pigs and lesser animals.

The occult scientist. Ram Guzzle, the Hindoo seer, is looking into Miss Gertie MacDuff's future, and Gertie is hearing the strangest things! Imagine, he's telling her she's going to take a trip across a sea. What sea, Ram Guzzle is uncertain, but it's full of fish and big waves. Only, Gertie must beware of a ginger haired man with a moist, porous looking face, who may cross her path. Because he bodes her ill. O dear, O dear, Gertie won't sleep a wink tonight for wondering who the ginger haired man can be!

LONGER EVENING WRAPS ON THE HORIZON

Paris Fashionables Are Tossing Aside the Short Coat for the Draped Fur-Laden Ones of Velvet That Will Be Ultra-Chic This Fall

This is the newest coat in Paris. Jane Regny makes it of apricot pile velvet and trims it with white fox draped around the arms and looped around the back.

Worth's black, pile velvet evening coat shown here is a knockout success. Sleeves are replaced by loops of silver fox.

The blouse is pink satin.

Maggy Rouff ties up the elbows and waistline of this pink and black chiffon hostess ensemble with black velvet ribbons.

The afternoon ensemble of black satin shown here is from Jane Regny. The long jacket is trimmed with silver fox, and there are double sleeves.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—(Special.)—At the opening of the new Ambassadeurs on the Champs Elysees recently all fashionable Paris came out in the last and best of French styles. Longer and more luxurious evening wraps, that have been forecast in whispers through the secret channels of style, made their impressive debut. Lots of ladies, who are always among the fashionable, but never in the band wagon of style, came to the Ambassadeurs in the simple short coats that are so popular at the moment. The few women who are always a little ahead of the mode, and who take a hand in mode-making, were wearing long, draped and fur laden cloaks that immediately made everything else appear, somehow, just a little bit demode. They signed the death warrant of the tiny evening wrap by just looking so right and so enchanting.

Dozens of short-style-sighted women rushed around to Patou, Worth and Jane Regny the next morning, in spite of late hours the night before, and ordered one of the new coats, so they will not be caught short coated after dark again this season. A new style is here.

These new evening cloaks are not long all around. They are, often, mere waistcoats in front, but they touch the heels in the back in every case. White satin, loaded with yards and yards of silver fox, made one of the most ravishing of the long cloaks seen at the Ambassadeurs, the other night. It was certainly a gold-digger's dream, the last words in luxury and fashion. Satin is being used to make many of the long cloaks designed for "sport" wear, but heavy, pile velvet is the material signalled for the season to come. You know the kind. It has a long and luxurious nap, is perishable and altogether desirable.

All the long evening coats I have seen are trimmed with fox fur. Ermine, which has been worn in legions, is, it appears, to have a rest from fashion's limelight. The furless evening coat is due to pass out of the picture along with the little jacket, and the evening coat that has any traffick with a cape seems destined for the oubliette, also.

Jean Patou, daringly combines evening coats that brush the heels in back, with dresses whose hems have risen to above the ankles. The coat is, thus, longer than the dress, at least in back. This particular style is being offered, and whether it is to be taken or not remains to be seen. The long evening coats I have seen worn are no longer than the frock they accompany. Evening frocks vary in length from the floor to the top of the instep.

Jewels to make a maharajah jealous were a striking feature of the opening of the Ambassadeurs. Rubies, the rarest of all the precious stones, are being worn in bracelets, clips and pins. One woman wore long earrings of rubies. White frocks with rubies are a conspicuous feature of formal evening fashions. Emeralds worn with a brown evening dress make a stunning color combination and one that is new. A necklace worn by one of the leaders of Paris fashions is a thin platinum chain with a huge white diamond, blue diamond and yellow diamond strung on a bar and hung from it. Bracelets set with flowers made of various and vari-colored precious stones, are worn in groups of twos and threes outside the long gloves most smart women wear. Black, pink and white gloves are worn with the predominating white evening gown. Brown gloves are a new note with the white or pastel colored dress.

Some of the smartest, the new long evening coats have fitted, glove-like sleeves, and their wearers couldn't get tissue paper gloves (much less kid ones) under them, so in this case no gloves are worn. Such a coat is the Jane Regny thriller shown in one of our sketches today. It's really destined to come out in the fall. Madame Regny makes this glorified cutaway of apricot colored pile velvet, and as you see it is like a jacket in front, and trails on the ground in back. The white fox is draped around the arms of the fitted sleeves at the elbows, and then brought up over the upper arm and down in a big loop at the back. Even the fur we wear is going to be draped, this season. The frock that is worn with this coat is made of white crepe romaine, and is Grecian in line with a long skirt made full by sunburst plaitings set in clusters from the normal waistline.

At the right of the Regny model is Worth's newest evening wrap, that reaches to the floor in back. It's a wow and Worth tells me he can't supply the demand for it among his smart clients. This coat is made of black pile velvet with a dropped-shoulder yoke that ends in two scarfs you can drape to suit yourself, or they may be allowed to hang in streamers down the front of the coat. The coat body is shirred on to this yoke, and as you see there are no sleeves—none at all. There are simply wide armholes made prominent by two silver fox skins that are sewed with loops outlining the armholes, and giving passage to white arms. The coat is somewhat shorter in front, and touches the tips of the heels in the back while the skirt of the dress hangs evenly to the instep line all around.

Some of the newest daytime suits in Paris are beginning to follow the lead of the evening ensemble and take to longer coats. They are also adopting the silver and other fox habit. One of these is sketched for you in another figure. Jane Regny designed it for afternoon this summer, making it of black crepe satin. The jacket of this suit, as you see, is three-quarters of the length of the silhouette, by a large margin and its sleeves are something new and fascinating. They are, actually, two sleeves, an outer and upper sleeve that flares into a remarkable turned-back and draped cuff just below the elbows, and an inner sleeve that fits like a glove and extends well over the back of the hand. The black satin skirt of this suit is flared by a circular movement and is draped into a knot on the right hip, as shown in the smaller figure of our sketch. The pink satin blouse is also draped, having a tricky, triangular yoke that becomes a scarf with a loop and ends on the left shoulder. The sleeves are long, cut in one with the yoke and fitted tightly below the elbows.

The newest thing in a cocktail frock, tea gown, hostess dress, or what do you do between five and eight of a summer evening, is shown in the last sketch herewith. It's from Maggy Rouff, who calls it "Rose Cocktail." The material of the dress and the draped jacket is rose chiffon printed with a cloudy design in black. The jacket has black velvet ribbons tied at the elbows of the sleeves and a black velvet ribbon girdle at the normal waistline. (You're going to see lots of velvet ribbon trimming, this fall.)

The low necked, sleeveless blouse of the dress is Greek-draped and the skirt is extremely full and limp and long from the shirred hip yoke. This yoke has its shirring concentrated in the front.

Paris Snapshots

¶ Velvet hats are already out in Paris. They have brims that begin 'way back on your head, showing half of the part in your hair, on top. Comtesse de Robilant is wearing Agnes' wide brimmed hat of black satin, the brim being punctured with eyelet embroidery.

¶ The newest evening accessory color is jade green, and fashionable Parisiennes are wearing jade bracelets, jade colored gloves, bags, handkerchiefs and slippers with black or white frocks.

¶ Zibiline-broadcloth in black or navy blue is forecast for fall coats and is actually being worn for afternoon. It is combined with fox fur, in most cases.

¶ Antoine has created a new coiffure to go with Greek evening dresses. Short hair is curled into an imitation of the Greek psyche at the back of the head.

Fabrics for the House

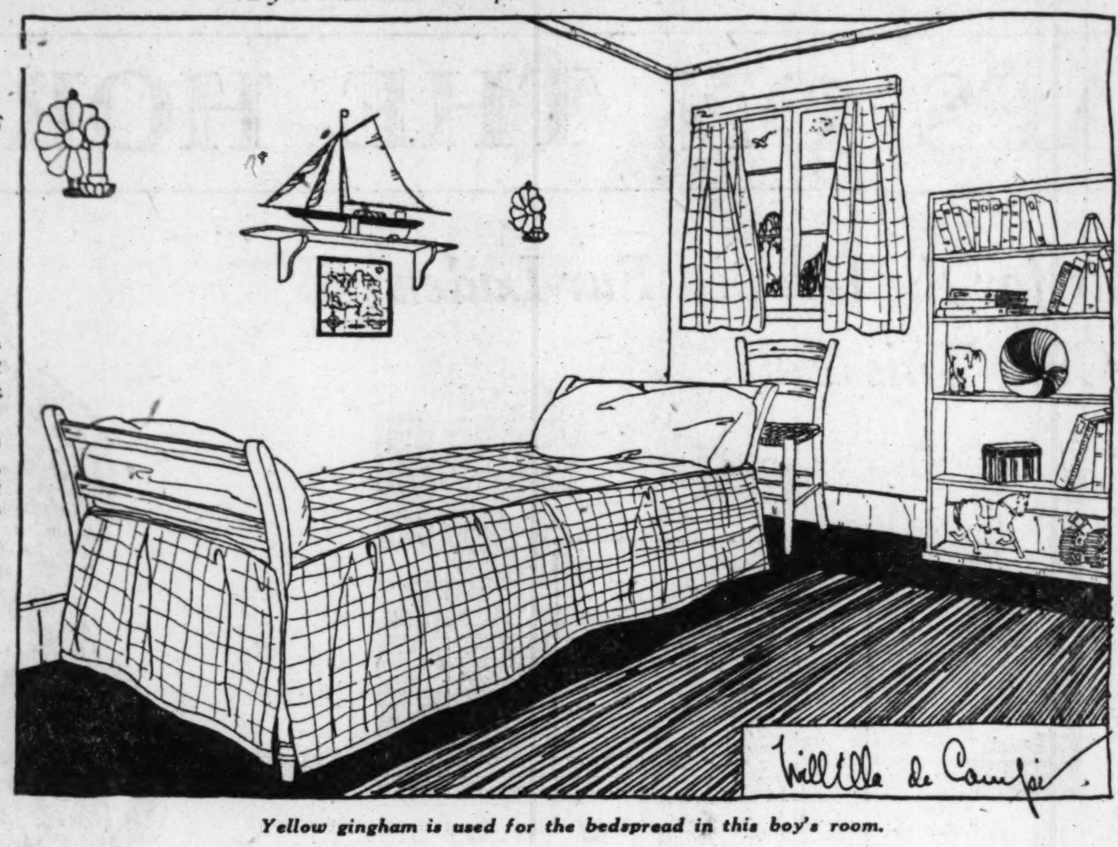
Sheets, Blankets and Bedspreads Come in Such a Variety of Colors That They May Be Made Part of Almost Any Decorative Ensemble



Yellow gingham is used for the bedspread in this boy's room.

MAKING the bed clothes fit in with the decorative scheme of a room is an important part of the ensemble idea so greatly favored today in house furnishings as well as in wardrobes. Manufacturers, having become alertly cognizant of the demand for ensembles, are now making sheets, pillow slips, blankets and bed covers to harmonize with many types of color schemes.

Delightfully colored sheets and pillow slips are much in vogue. Perhaps you cling, though, to the idea that nothing can equal the cleanliness and comfortable feeling of white. Then there are white sheets and slips, with borders and monograms in colors that will "tie" your room together.

Blankets, too, enter the general scheme, and such lovely ones they are! All wool, unbelievably light and fluffy, in solid or reversible colors. Being made all of wool, they give real warmth in spite of their light weight. Some are soft blue on one side and mauve on the other, or lovely rose with ecru on the reverse side.

Though summer days are warm, summer nights are often unexpectedly cool, especially in the country where there are no rows upon rows of brick and stone walls, pavements and cement walks to hold and refract the day's heat. Beds may be cool in appearance, but they must for comfort's sake be equipped to furnish extra warmth when the temperature suddenly drops. There are lovely comforters suitable for every young son's room to satisfy this need. Some are covered with gay calico, others with sateen, taffeta, or gingham. These may be folded at the foot of the bed to give a bright decorative note, as well as to serve their practical purpose.

When it comes to bed covers, the possibilities are more than numerous. There are, of course, many stock-styles which may be bought already made. Reproductions of hand woven colonial spreads, in indigo and white, or any one of the candlewick embroidered cores are happily suitable for use in American colonial rooms. And there are ready-made spreads of toile de Jouy, in a nice selection of colors which are appropriate and charming in a room of French Provençal style. But to the clever home maker, innumerable ideas present themselves for making bed covers at home. Such fascinating materials may be utilized in a home which rises above the average ideals.

In a little house in one of the suburbs the bedrooms are admirably effective. They are not at all fussy or expensive. Rather, they are exceptionally interesting and individualistic. In the master bedroom where the plaster walls are painted a light, cool blue, covers on the twin beds are made of voile with a modernistic woven design in blue and orange on an ecru ground. There is an undercover of plain, unbleached muslin, and the voile spreads are made with full flounces at the sides, finished at the edges with an orange and blue binding, which was bought by the yard, ready made.

Glass curtains at the windows are of the same voile, pleasingly light and airy in effect. Draperies of plain glazed chintz, in deep, bright blue are edged with a binding of orange and blue, like that on the spreads. These draperies are caught back over blue glass knobs, at the center of each side of the windows. The furniture is maple, and there are burnt orange shades on all the lights in the room. Rugs made from narrow strips of felt, in two shades of blue and black, give a modified modern effect by means of the small squares which are made by the manner in which they are woven.

Sturdiness is the keynote in the young son's room—as it should be in every young sons's room. Here the furniture, which is an assemblage of various odd pieces, has been painted a deep, bottle green, making a pleasing "set," as shown in the accompanying illustration. The bed cover, smartly tailored, is of large checked gingham in lemon yellow and white. It is piped and bound with yellow. Being quite plain and of fadeless color, it may be frequently and easily laundered. Pillows are covered with yellow chambray.

Straight, sill length curtains at the windows are made of the yellow and white gingham. Plenty of open shelves in the room hold books and the many treasures dear to the boy's heart. These shelves are deep green to match the furniture. Walls, done with washable paint, are lemon yellow.

Light rose organdy, always crisp and youthful in spirit, is used for the bedspread and window curtains in the "growing-up" daughter's room. Here the spread, over unbleached muslin, has a deep flounce and ruffled edge, and the curtains are ruffled, too. Instead of over draperies, there are roller shades of glazed chintz, in a Dresden flower pattern on a white ground. With the sheer curtains, these roller shades are particularly lovely.

An arm chair in the room is upholstered in the same chintz, and there are several small pillows covered with the chintz and with plain flower colors on the bed. Walls are light French gray. Woodwork and furniture are painted a somewhat darker gray. Deep rose rugs are used.

In addition to the materials found in these rooms, there are many others, exceptionally well adapted to bed cover use. A trip through the yard goods section of any large department store is sure to bring ideas to mind. Among other suitable and useful materials are freshly patterned cretonnes, plain, sunfast sateens, dotted Swiss and marquisette, cotton, taffetas, calicoes and percales. Well, really, there is no end to them!

The Biggest Liar

Some Heater!

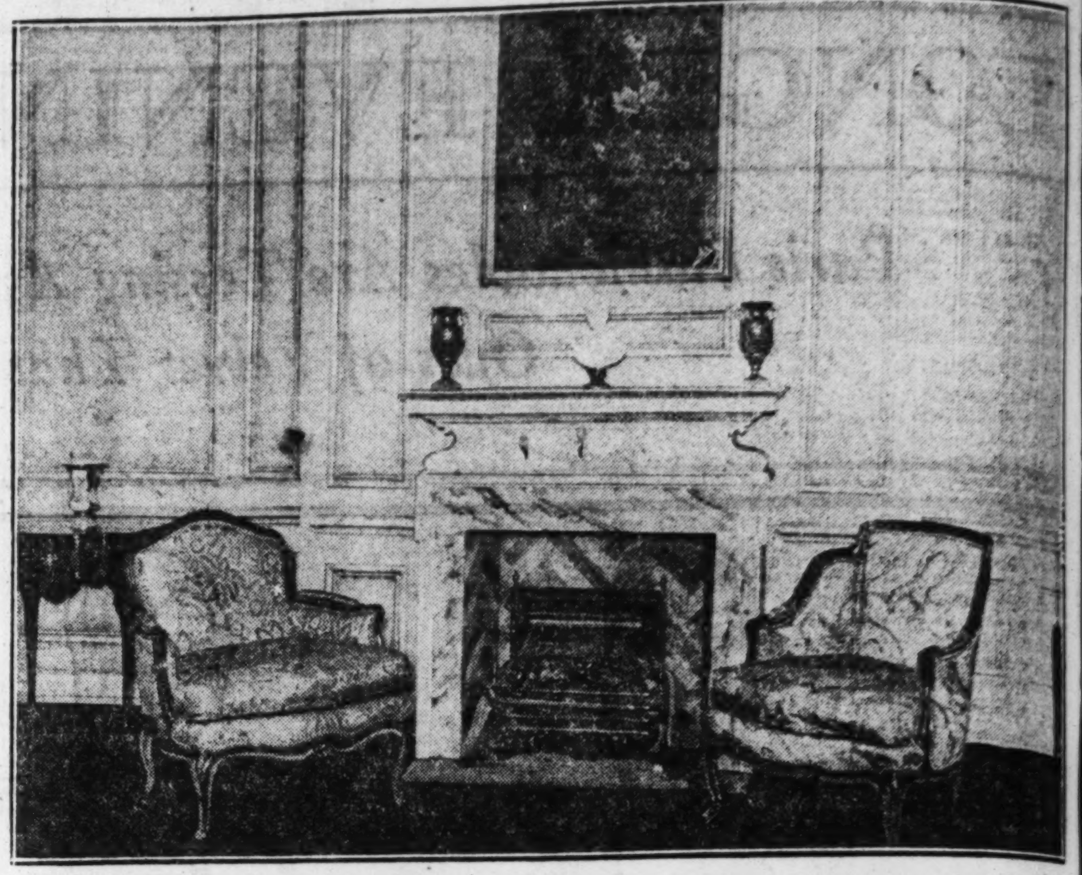
George always was telling some big lie, yet he always went to such extremes that he knew nobody would believe him. One day he was telling about a great heating stove he had.

"Why," he exclaimed, "the other morning I got up and built a fire, then went back to bed. I dropped off to sleep and when I woke up thirty minutes later it had the water in the cistern boiling." W. M.

Seen at the Furniture Show

—By Edith Weigle

At the Mart, as Elsewhere, an Attractive Background Does Much to Show the Merits of the Articles Exhibited.



This cream colored paneled room makes an ideal setting for fine furniture.

AT the recent exhibition at the American Furniture Mart I noticed that the groups fortunate enough to have an attractive background were rewarded by interested buyers. There, as well as in a department or furniture store, a homelike setting does much to show the merits of the individual pieces displayed. Acres and acres of chairs, a jungle of tables, and miles of beds placed side by side, have anything but a good effect on the average observer. He feels swamped and if he obeys that impulse he turned and runs.

Lead him into a real room, however, with doors, windows and walls, where each article is given meaning by being placed in relation to another article and in relation to the whole and he will immediately be interested. He can tell at a glance what his customers will want to buy, and he knows what to order.

Some of the displays at the Mart are assembled with great care and good taste. One firm uses a permanent background of several paneled rooms with marble fireplaces, lovely objets d'art and oriental rugs, a fitting place to show beautiful pieces of furniture. Two of the photographs used today were taken in these rooms.

The first picture shows two unusually pretty arm chairs, French reproductions, at either side of a fireplace. The one at the left is covered in soft blue brocade and the other in green. Queen Anne walnut console tables are placed against the cream colored panelled wall. A flower painting in rich, mellow colors is set in a panel above the mantel and below it is an exquisite Sevres bust of Mme. du Barry.

The smaller picture was taken in a pine panelled room and shows the couch with removable slip cover which was mentioned last Sunday. The linen cover closely resembles crewel embroidery and fastens with zippers so that it may be taken off in a moment's time and sent to the laundry. The permanent covering of this couch may be in almost any material desired. This idea of buying the slip cover when you buy the couch, or chair, should appeal to a great many women, for it is such a labor and time saving device.

The third picture was also taken at the show and illustrates one of many novelties I saw there. This one is a beverage cabinet. The glasses, decanters, ice container, etc., may be lowered in the cabinet by pulling up the two ends which act as the top and fit together neatly.

The whole thing may be pushed out on the porch or into the sun room, for it is on small rubber tired wheels and the back is arranged like a tea cart with a stout handle. This cabinet is made of walnut. Others, more elaborate and suitable for a club, as they contain poker chips, cards, etc., are also made by this firm.

One of the most fascinating displays at the show was a group of early American rooms with quaint scenic wall paper, open fireplaces and all the little details needed to bring out the charm of maple chairs and corner cupboards, chintz covered couches, Boston rockers, and butterfly tables. Pictures of some of these pieces will be shown later.

When the top is closed the glasses disappear.

Children and Water

—By Gladys Huntington Bevans

If Your Youngsters Are Timid and a Little Fearful of the Waves, Don't Force Them to Go In, but Let Them Take Their Own Time.

A "Play Booklet" and "Toy List" will be sent by Mrs. Bevans on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

IS there anything more engaging to look at than the combination of beach and baby? Does anything give you a nicer feeling than to sit on the sand and watch little children in their bathing suits or sun suits digging in the sand, running to the water's edge to fill their pails and scamper back from the chasing waves, letting the wavelets catch at their chubby feet as they scream in excitement—or to see the more daring ones throw themselves headlong into the foaming surf?

Water, like earth, sun, and air, is a child's natural element. Every child should have water to play in, or to paddle or swim in, if it's a possible thing.

All children love water—as you know when you see them merely with a basin of it or in a puddle, or frisking under a fountain or the spray from a hose. In the shallow edges of a lake or a shelving beach of still salt water they show their delight in it most plainly. But in spite of their love for the element, there are times when children are terrified by the water.

Strangely enough, there are parents and other adults who seem to be annoyed—even infuriated—by these signs of fear in their children. They will scold them, try to pull or push them in, or even carry them forcibly and screaming into the water. I have seen children who, as a result, were in what was almost a convulsion—between their terror of the water and their sense of helplessness as they were carried farther and farther out, or dipped in and out up to their necks. Often this is done in a climax of adult irritation. But sometimes it is done without rancor—the idea being that if children are forced in often enough they'll get used to it.

Fear Is a Bad Thing.

Well, I think that's all a great mistake. Whether eventually the children get used to the water by such heroic means is not the point. Paroxysms of fear are things definitely to be avoided. Even if accustomedness to the water comes more slowly, it is better so. Children are individual in this respect, as in all others. The thing to do is to give them time.

Having watched many young children in various kinds of water, I have noticed that children are very different in their approach to bathing and learning to swim.

Practically all children love paddling in shallow water, whether there is rough water beyond or not. But even here there are exceptions. Children of 3 or so who have never been near the ocean and who are rather highly strung will somtimes not even wade if the surf is wild. In these cases the power and noise either confuse them or frighten them or affect their nerves as noise and confusion do in any other place. The roaring and pounding of the big water makes them want to keep their distance.

When this is the case, the only thing to do is to let them take their time. A little gentle urging each day, the finding of a rocky pool or sandy inlet for quiet play is about all you can do. I have seen such children come to love both rough and still water and be perfectly at home in both.

Even when there is still-water bathing, as there is in a pool, some children are afraid of the water. I have seen it take them a whole summer to get used to the feeling of the water. If let alone these near-babies, if not forced, will sit happily day by day on the steps or edge of a pool splashing and dangling their feet. Then, suddenly to your astonishment, next summer they may be so fearless that they have to be restrained from taking chances.

Another thing you may observe is the reverse—that a small child who is fearless one year may be timid the next, without any apparent cause. When this is the case the only thing to do is to let them take time to get over it.

Undoubtedly one reason why bathing inspires fear in children is the loss of support they experience when they try to swim—that "loss of support fear" which is supposed to be one of the few inborn fears of children. So, not as a swimming instructor, but just as an ordinary person who has watched many children learn to swim, I have a few suggestions which hold true for lots of youngsters.

First, some children won't have anything to do with artificial support, like water wings, etc. If this is the case don't interfere. But others get great delight and gain much confidence in the water by paddling around, holding on to a medium sized, blown up water ball or water wings, a blown up inner tube, etc. They not only enjoy themselves, but become so used to the water that way that they learn to swim easily.

It is a good plan where there is a beach to have children face the shore when they are learning to swim and work toward the shallow water and the shore.

Fine Exercise.

Another frequent mistake grown people make is to try to teach small children a special swimming stroke, like the breast stroke, for instance. Children have a natural stroke. Left to themselves they practically all begin with a sort of dog paddle. When they feel perfectly at home in the water with this busy, churning stroke, then they begin to be interested in the overhands, crawls, etc.

Swimming is a wonderful exercise for any one. It is especially fine for women, doctors say. But it is best learned when young. So encourage your daughters as well as your sons to be proficient in it.

Of course that swimming is pleasure as well as profit goes without saying. And, aside from the pure enjoyment of swimming, there is a sense of power that comes with it that is a fine thing for a child to feel. With it goes the ability to take care of yourself in an emergency and, if you've had the life saving training to help some one else.

Patterns and How to Use Them

Short Sleeved Frocks of Summery Cottons and Silks Make Warm Days More Endurable.

2535—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 14, 16, 18, and 20 years and 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅞ yards of 39 inch material.

2540—Child's dress. Sizes 2, 4, and 6 years. Size 4 requires 1¼ yards of 39 inch material with 2½ yards of binding and ¾ yard of 1¼ inch wide ribbon for the loop and end.

THIS tennis or sports dress, pattern, No. 2535, that has simulated the princess, will add a new note of smartness to your summer wardrobe. The drop shoulders form short sleeves, and the V-shaped neckline is finished in an unusually interesting way. It has an outside fitted facing that is stitched to the neck on both edges, and on the right side of the front this facing is extended to slightly below the normal waistline. It crosses over towards the left, surplice fashion, where it is slipped through two bound slashes at the waistline, and ends in a pointed tab below. Each side of the front at the waistline two small plaits are taken, perforations on the pattern showing just how, and these are stitched in place. They help to emphasize the normal waistline.

The skirt is beautifully flared in grouped box plaits that are inserted both front and back. These inserts have perforations showing how to lay the plaits. Do this work on a table, pinning each plait down and working from the top towards the bottom always. See if the under side of each plait is as smooth as on the upper, then baste from the top towards the bottom.

This dress will be easy to wash and iron, and will always look well. It is never a mistake to shrink wash materials before using them, and you can do this with washable silk crêpes as well as cottons. Chinese silk damask, silk shirting, mercerized cotton broadcloth, pique and linen are among the materials that are suitable.

Dotted dimity in white showing blue dots will make an adorable dress for a small girl, using pattern No. 2540. A short yoke, straight across the back and pointed at the center front, has the full skirt attached to it—the fulness being laid in groups of tucks. The round neck may be faced or finished with a narrow, bias binding. At the bottom of the yoke turn the edge under evenly and set on the skirt, letting the yoke come over the skirt. After basting, overcast the seam edges together then stitch twice, first close to the edge, and then a little above.

The dress closes in the back so it will be easy to put on and take off. Small children's clothes should always be made easy to get into and out of. Tiny cap sleeves have scalloped edges that are bound with the color of the print. The bottom of the dress is finished in the same way. These scalloped edges are lovely, but, of course, they do take time; but if you make that part of the work "pick-up work," you won't mind doing it. Of course, the edges may be left straight and then hemmed.

Yellow pique with white piping or binding, red and white cotton broadcloth print, baby blue handkerchief lawn, pink shantung, tub silk in pale pink tones and Nile green linen will all make pretty dresses.

Pattern No. 2502 is something rather unusual in a new house frock design, and has capelet kimono sleeves and a fitted basque bodice. House dresses should always be made easy to slip into and out of, and the designer of this frock must have remembered this, for the dress opens at the side. This side wrapped treatment aids in giving that slender appearance all women like.

The circular skirt fits snugly about the hips with a gradual widening towards the hem. All the edges are scalloped and bound with a contrasting color. This adds much to the attractiveness of the dress, and should be worth your while. Pique, tub silks, linen, men's shirting, dimity and gingham are appropriate materials. At the bottom, for size 36, this dress measures about two yards. You will doubtless buy bias binding that comes perfectly folded and ready to put on the material, and if you are careful to baste it on so that the crease comes exactly on the edge of the material, the stitching will include the under side as well.

Salad Route to Beauty

By Antoinette Donnelly

Water, Vegetables and Fruits Free the System of Excess Waste and Promote Health and Appearance.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—We are going to talk today about the most insidious beauty evil known. It is constipation.

At this particular time of year it is an apt theme for two reasons—one, that if the state is permitted it becomes doubly enervating and beauty disqualifying, and, secondly, because it is a perfect time to battle the ailment with the best known measures.

Physicians constantly remind us of the ill health influence of irregular bowel action. Seventy-five per cent of ailments suffered by human beings are contributed by the poisoning that goes on within us. There's hardly an external feature of us that is not directly affected if the habit becomes a fixed one. Hair, complexion, eyes, teeth, expression, posture, verve, almost all of the larger items in a woman's list of desirable attributes are included. So that, when introducing the subject in this column, it is not done with the intention of stealing any straight medical advice and passing it on, but because so much of beauty depends upon internal cleanliness as well as external.

Effect of Retained Waste.

It scarcely seems necessary to remind any woman who has suffered the discomfort of retained waste matter of its effect upon her whole appearance.

She knows better than any one else how muggy it makes her eyes, how heavy lidded, how oldish. She can see the change in the tone of her complexion, a change that makeup at best can only rectify in spots. She knows from the feel of her hair that a poisoned blood stream takes the life out of it. She doesn't move with her old gay spirit because constipation robs the spirit of its gayety. She feels murky gray when she should be radiating the bright summer colors.

Now, a great many women suspect that they are victims of the common plague. But they do nothing about it. They become more and more indifferent, until one day they are tripped up with the need of a hurried call on the physician who may report an emergency operation or a condition calling for long and serious observation.

Start with Liquid Diet.

Other women rush off to the drug store and buy the first pills recommended and use them faithfully for a few days. Some women go on for years carrying actual pounds of waste matter, a fact attested by a reputable physician, who further declares that a good internal cleansing often disposes of anywhere from three to five pounds. Incidentally, the now well established practice of beginning a reducing course with a three day liquid diet has the highly practical advantage of ridding the system of much of this excess waste.

For a summer constipation remedy, we recommend this three day liquid diet. You can go along quite easily three days with no food and all liquid, such as orange juice, buttermilk or a mixed drink of orange juice, lemon and grapefruit juices to which water is added. With a little cheating on food you can go a couple of days on water alone.

But more to the seasonal point is the simplicity with which one may fight constipation by the salad route. You can make a midday meal easily of a large bowl of mixed vegetables—as lettuce, tomatoes, onions, celery, radishes. With the olive oil dressing (regular French dressing) you have an additional help to the intestinal tract. The oil is particularly lubricating and the vegetables sweep out the tract in need of overhauling. The dinner time meal may easily be composed of a little meat, if needed, and two vegetables with a fresh fruit dessert. Anyway, cram as much fresh fruit and vegetables into your system as you can while they are easily obtained. Eliminate all your fried and starchy foods until you have yourself in better shape internally.

Also, you have more appetite for water during these hot months. Drink at least six glasses a day. There is nothing like water for cleansing the internal tracts. Drink water the first thing on arising in the morning. For persons whose intestines are nearly normal but sluggish this simple rite may be sufficient.

But the point is to understand that accumulated waste matter pollutes the blood stream and that complexion, hair, breath, eyes, body and spirit are all affected where this handicap exists.

If the condition is habitual, let a physician prescribe a sane course of correction. If it is lazy colon, as it generally is, superinduced by muscular inactivity, you must get more exercise—and again you have the season's advantages with such pleasant outdoor exercise as tennis, golf, swimming, horseback riding, rowing, and so on.

Temporary Measures.

Take mineral oil or one of the mineral oil-agar mixtures, or take agar-agar recommended for use alone because of its bulk when mixed with water, or take psyllium seed. The latter is of mucilage-like substance and when mixed with water gives bulk to the intestinal content, affords lubrication and is a nonhabit forming laxative. Take bran or yeast. Take enemas. Properly given, enemas bear medical endorsement as a safe method of temporary relief. Resort to some harmless and nonhabit forming cleansing agent for temporary relief. But consider the temporary measure as temporary, pending a reformation of the diet and living habits to those consistent with better bowel action.

Eat vegetables, such as spinach, chard, cabbage, lettuce, celery, string beans, broccoli, asparagus, and so on. Take fruit juices at breakfast without fail. If possible take the fruit juice a half hour before breakfast. Eat oranges whole for the pulp, which adds bulk to the food residue.

Know about the necessity of internal cleanliness—and insist on it. Be just as strict in this regard as you are about local care of yourself for the most distressing feature of all about constipation is that it is impossible not to make its presence known, in warm weather particularly, in fetid odors thrown off by the body.

Sing Your Own Praises

By Doris Blake

Modesty Remains a Desirable Virtue but the Soil of Our Current Life Doesn't Encourage Its Growth.

THE difference between a successful girl or boy and an unsuccessful one in affairs of the heart, as well as in the affair of making a living, lies in the success with which the "lucky ones" can overcome self consciousness.

Every one is more or less self conscious, which fact may help the deeply involved, for it does help to know that others may have the same handicap as oneself. The big help, however, comes from recognizing the fact that one need not stay buried under the crushing weight of self consciousness.

Some people are luckier than others in that they have the good fortune to be surrounded by family members or friends who are ever ready to buoy up a failing self assurance with the word of encouragement or praise. And some boys and girls are particularly unfortunate in belonging to a family group whose object seems to be to crush out any spirit of self assertion that may manifest itself, even though the individual may be fully worthy of exhibiting an exalted ego.

Youthful Training at Fault.

A certain gentleman known to me, in preparing a speech for a first public appearance, suffered so painfully from the prospect of facing a large, and what proved to be a most friendly, audience, that he burst out with:

"Believe me, if I ever have a son, I'll tell that kid every day of his life what a wonder he is! I don't care if everybody does hate him as a youngster. Anyway, he'll arrive at man age with enough confidence to see himself through without all this agony that I am going through now! Lord only knows how many occasions in my life I've muffed it because of that stupid training I got about 'being modest about yourself and let some one else do your shouting for you.'"

While modesty keeps on being a desirable virtue, the trouble with it is that there isn't any soil in our current life to encourage its growth. That is, modesty about self.

Assurance Brings Success.

Haven't you and I seen in our own more or less limited experience the almost commonplace individual surpass a truly brilliant one because of the former's excellent composure and rare ability to sell himself. Or, getting down to the problem that concerns this department most, have we not seen men of inferior qualities sell themselves as desirable matrimonial prospects to girls, whereas one of better character and husband-making potentialities went through life nursing a heart sorrow. We are inclined to believe that women are more often victims of the dread destroyer because they are more emotional than men. This emotionalism creates a more favorable soil for the sprouting of the ill.

An older woman looking back over a period of helping out several married sisters and their progeny, remarked: "If I had had but one-half their assurance, I wouldn't be in my present lonely position. But I was reared to think that I should be self-effacing and, as I look at it now, helpful to the success of other people. I took my training literally and at least two good opportunities passed me by because I felt too mean and humble within to grasp at them."

However, nothing is to be gained from recitals of persons who failed to free their systems of the insidious poison.

It is a recognized branch of mental hygiene practice now to treat people for their woeful lack of self confidence. The way it is gone about usually is to discover first what is at the root of the trouble. What is it that saps at the vitality and makes a person, perfectly equipped from an outsider's point of view, feel discouraged, hopeless and helpless? If you can find the answer to that query, you are well on the way to recovery. But only you can answer why, given equal advantages with another educationally and pictorially, you go down and out with character completely undermined while the other blossoms and brings forth all kinds of rich fruit into his or her life!

Maybe if you look deeply into yourself for the cause, it may prove to be some trivial experience in your past life, which, now in the light of a larger vision you should be able to laugh at or about. Perhaps an incident over a first affair of the heart, when you were quite young and most sensitive and your judgment was not equal to the moment! Perhaps some hurt or disappointment in the one you had your heart set upon at the time. But does not every one suffer a broken faith, a broken illusion when he or she is young?

Cure Lies Within.

Or, maybe the influence in your confidence flop was due to a vicious family influence. These influences are not always intentionally vicious; a habit of raillery, "teasing" may be interpreted by the sensitive plant of the family as painfully personal attacks from which he or she refuses to recover. Since other members of society have recovered beautifully from like family jibes, it is safe to assume that what is wrong with the one who goes on nursing her or his self confidence is nothing more or less than an exaggerated awareness of self.

Anyway, if one knows he is a victim of self-consciousness and knows that it is standing in the way of his heart's desire, he should accept the fact that he is encouraging, instead of trying to cure, a curable disease. While booster friends and booster families are useful in the accomplishment of a cure, the final remedy is given only to the one with grit enough to say: "Here, I am going to get over this! It has had me down long enough!"

Introductions

By Helen Bartlett

There Is a Right and a Wrong Way of Presenting a Stranger to a Friend and Convention Lays Down Certain Definite Rules.

Miss Bartlette's two booklets, "Table Setting and Service for Luncheon" and "Table Setting and Service for Dinner," may be obtained by sending two stamped, addressed envelopes to this department. Address Helen Bartlett, Sunday Department, Chicago Tribune.

ONLY the very rich or the very poor can afford eccentricity. Those of us who must take the world as we find it and adjust ourselves to it learn, if we're at all observant, that it's wiser and more comfortable to abide by conventions. And after all, conventions have lasted a long, long time and been found pretty reliable. Those which survived will be found to combine common sense and good taste.

Take, for example, introductions. There is probably no other social gesture which can be so simple and at the same time so indicative of social grace. There are rules, of course, but the perfect introduction is usually outwardly casual, but productive at once of exactly the right atmosphere and the essential information.

Names should be clearly enunciated—and one should be certain of the names of the persons one is introducing. It is painful on all sides to perform vague introductions and quite unflattering to the person whose name has vanished from memory.

Follow Simple Rules.

The etiquette of introductions may be condensed for most purposes into the following rules: In introducing a man and a woman, always present the man to the woman. In introducing a young person and an older person present the younger to the older. In introducing two persons of equal position present the younger to the older.

To the first rule there are but three exceptions. Women are presented to the President of the United States, to a cardinal and to a royal personage.

There can also be exceptions to the second rule. If the younger person were very distinguished it might be correct in some cases, depending on circumstances, to present older persons to him. It would depend entirely, of course, on the degree of distinction claimed by the young person.

In addition to these straight rules there are countless other ramifications, but none of them are extremely important, to our way of thinking, and they might be confusing. An unmarried woman is generally presented to a married woman, but this would hardly hold if the unmarried woman were of middle age and the married woman a young matron.

Governed by Circumstances.

Introductions may be formal or informal, depending on the circumstances. An introduction to a personage would be formal; one would say "Mrs. Personage, may I present [or may I introduce] Mr. Jones?" In an informal introduction when perhaps the two are of about the same age and station, it can be made simpler, with the inflection of the voice giving the key to the situation. One could say, "Mrs. Smith, Mr. Jones," with a slightly rising inflection on the first name and the voice dropped on the second.

In introducing friends to the family it is the rule that introductions are made first to one's mother, then to one's father. If others are present, introductions are made to the women first, beginning with the oldest, and then to the men.

A mother presents her sons and her daughters to friends of her own age, calling them by their first names. She would say, "Mrs. Oldfriend, may I present my daughter, Mary?" To a woman with whom she is less intimate she would say, "Mrs. Jones, this is my daughter Mrs. Smith," if the latter were married.

Introductions with intimate friends are naturally informal. Formal introductions occur at formal social functions. In formal introductions one "presents" people to other people.

And even in informal introductions it is not permissible to say, "Meet Mr. So and so," or what's infinitely worse in every way, "Meet the wife." Or, "Mr. Black, shake hands with Mr. White."

One phrase much used is "You know Mrs. Jones, don't you?" or something much like it; it should be avoided for the most part because if the two haven't met before there can be more or less awkwardness.

No Introduction Needed.

There are some circumstances in which it is quite all right to speak without an introduction. At large parties, for instance, it is sometimes almost impossible to introduce every one to every one else, and when unintroduced guests are thrown together they should speak to one another. The hostess should do her best, of course, but sometimes it can't be helped and under such circumstances guests shouldn't sit with stony faces and that unintroduced look.

The fact that they speak, however, doesn't mean that in the future an introduction could be dispensed with. After they leave the house they needn't pretend to know each other, if they wish.

Answers to Etiquette Questions.

"In acknowledging an invitation to a wedding reception is it necessary to state the reason wny you cannot attend? MRS. W. L."

No, in this case it is not necessary to give a reason. One simply "regrets one's inability to accept, etc."

"A friend claims that married women no longer use their husbands' names on visiting cards. Is this correct? "K. G."

COINCIDENCES

Coincidences in geography, time, and persons are ever fruitful of stories and recollections. Whom from the home town did you meet in a far corner of the earth? Who of the same name looks just like you? Who called you up just as you were about to make the call? If you know of a coincident you would like to have published address Coincidences, Sunday Tribune.

Reunited by Scar.

Back in Germany, one day, when my grandmother, then a child of about eight, was cutting bread, a group of playmates came in and, in the playful scuffle that followed, one girl received quite a severe gash on her arm. Next year my grandmother came to America and the two friends lost track of each other.

A few weeks ago my grandmother was visiting in a nearby city and her hostess took her to a party given by a neighbor. The gathering was entirely of old German ladies and they were telling stories of the old country. My grandmother told this one and expressed her wish to find her old playmate. The hostess of the party excitedly told that she was the girl and proved it by the scar on her arm. So, through one of the queerest coincidences I ever knew, these two friends were reunited after nearly seventy years. E. B.

Service Was Good.

One day I took down the telephone receiver and as I waited for central to answer I could hear some one. As we were on a private line I wondered why I should hear any one before I called a number.

I finally said "Hello," and some one said, "Is this B——'s?" I thought the voice sounded familiar and who should it be but the friend I was starting to call. W. R. B.

Fortune Telling.

One of my classmates had a deck of fortune teller cards and often read cards for me. One day he told me that very shortly I would change my position, work for a stout, blond man among books and papers, and that also a fortune of disputed money was coming to me.

The following week I was attracted by a blind advertisement in THE TRIBUNE, which I answered. When called for an interview the next day I was amazed to be hired by a stout, blond man in the branch office of a trade paper magazine and textbook publishing house.

After I was there two months I met with a very serious accident in the elevator of that building, from which a lawsuit arose for recovery of personal injury damages. E. S.

And They Married.

One time while spending my vacation with a friend in the country I took a pail and went into the woods to pick blackberries. So did a young man who also was vacationing, neither of us knowing of the other's whereabouts. We met at the same bush and recognized each other across the berry-laden branches. We had been engaged to be married, but had parted in anger. At this unusual reunion we both were constrained to smile. Then we bowed to each other in a distant manner and finally conversed. Later we became reconciled. Today we are the happy grandparents of our children's children. E. M.

Kept the Secret.

When I was about fifteen my father became entangled in so unsavory a scandal that, after his release, our entire family moved over a thousand miles westward and took up residence in a city totally strange to us.

We immediately went flat hunting and shortly moved into the first floor of a two family building. Naturally, one of our first tasks was window washing, and as my mother sat in a window looking up at the upper pane she was washing, a woman leaned out of an upper window to call to a huckster on the sidewalk. She was an acquaintance from our own city, visiting our landlady!

The latter, however, was a lady indeed, for she made it clear that our secret was our own, and never divulged it to any one. H. L. J.

The Soul's Necessity

By Margaret Weymouth Jackson

Louise Was Nine and in Number Three, but She Was Never Allowed to Play with Other Children; Even Roller Skates Were an Unrealized Dream, Till One Wonderful Day When Her Father Came Home.

THEY took Louise back and forth to school four times a day, although she was now in No. 3 and almost 9 years old. When mother herself had been a little thing gypsies had taken her away and kept her all day before she was found, so that grandmother was full of fear for Louise. Usually mother went with her, or Aunt Agnes, or sometimes, if the weather were fine, grandmother herself walked along with the little girl's hand safely in her own.

All the other little girls, going along by twos and threes with their arms around one another's necks, with their delightful secrets and the little notes they stopped to read, paused on the edge of the walk and let the cavalcade of Louise and her escort go by in respectful silence, looking up with big brown and blue eyes and small, lovely, silent faces. Louise looked at them longingly from under her eyelashes, but she did not speak, and neither did they. All of the Lesh women were tall and dignified and entirely satisfied with the Lesh way of doing everything. And one of their rules was that Louise should not go on the street alone, nor play with other children.

At recess, of course, none of the three guardians was with her. But a little girl cannot in fifteen minutes, three of which are spent in line, pierce into intimacies formed in dawdling walks back and forth to school, in hours spent roller skating over Hilltown's uneven walks, in long Saturdays of having shows and tea parties, going to one another's houses, whispering in the twilight—not in fifteen minutes twice a day can such comradeship be shared. Besides, by the time they were in No. 3 all the little girls were paired off. There were Martha Pierce and Martha Reid; Barbara and Mary; Kathie and Mimi; Rosalie and Marcella. There were even two little colored girls who were inseparable. None so mean in No. 3 that she did not have that indispensable satisfaction of the soul—a chum! None, that is, save Louise Rogers.

Louise Liked Barbara

Of course, the chums were not always constant. Barbara and Mary fell out and would not speak to one another for three weeks, and it happened now and then that three of them got "mad" at one, and they walked on opposite sides of the street and called back and forth to one another quite unkind things. And one thrilling week all the girls in the room (except Louise) were angry at Kathie and shut her out of their games because she tattled. But even in her extremity Kathie did not seek Louise. She spent her time wrangling with her enemies. These difficulties had for Louise a fascination quite unbearable. When she thought of them a longing and emptiness came over her that made her feel quite faint, so that she could not eat. But she did not have any idea why she felt that way, and never thought of telling any one.

She stood at the front window one late March afternoon and watched the girls skating down the long slope of the hill and made up little scenes in which she and Barbara quarreled and made up. For, of them all, Louise liked Barbara the best, and would have liked to have her for a friend.

They came swooping down the hill, all the girls in No. 3. They had been skating for two years, most of them, and they had what they called "ball-bearians," and they did stunts. Barbara was the tallest and she was the best. She came first, and she bent one knee and let the other foot trail behind her like a dancer making a curtsy. So, stooping forward, arms outspread, her eyes shining and her yellow curls fluttering behind her, she came down the walk, like a beautiful bird flying in the wind. All the others followed her, but none did as well.

"Can't I have roller skates this spring, mother? I'm nearly nine."

"Darling, you might fall and hurt yourself. You might break your arm, or bruise your face. Little girls can be happy without skating."

"But the others——"

"Now Louise, we're not going to talk about it any more. You're to do as mother says, and not as other mothers say to their children. It's only because I love you and want to take care of you——"

"Can I go out in the yard, mother?"

"Yes, dear, but don't go on the walk. I'm afraid one of those wild girls might knock you down, they go so fast."

"They shouldn't be allowed on the sidewalks with their skates," said grandmother, peering out of the window. "They're worse than boys on bicycles."

"Button your coat, dear. The wind is raw."

A Houseful of Women

In the yard Louise sat on the swing they had hung for her when she was a little thing and played there alone. She had tied a good sized knot under the swing board, but still her feet dragged on the ground. She wondered when her father would be coming home again. It was almost time for him. He had not been home since Christmas.

He was a traveling accountant for a great oil company and was gone from home for months at a time. When he made his infrequent visits mother was always in a little flutter and grandmother and Aunt Agnes were unnatural and prim. Louise, too, was jealous, for mother was always so pretty and gay when father was home and quite forgot her daughter. One could feel how relaxed and comfortable things were after he departed.

Father sometimes complained about a "houseful of women," but, since it was grandmother's house, he could do nothing, and he couldn't expect mother to live alone when he was gone so constantly. They all said over and over how nice it was when he was home, but they all knew that he was a great disturbance. Louise loved and admired him secretly.

Barbara paused and hung over the fence. Louise smiled at her shyly. Barbara was always s w e e t to Louise, though the others called her "baby" and ran away from her with ready instinct.

"Come on out," said Barbara. "What do you want to stick in the yard for? Come out and skate."

"I haven't any skates."

"I'll lend you mine. I'll hold your hand. You can learn quick as scat. Just fall down twice and you'll know how."

"I dassent."

"Won't your mother let you?"

"No."

Barbara paused. "Why don't you anyhow?" she asked at length. "Gee, she couldn't do anything to you but lick you, could she? If you ran off every day they'd let you go. I'll bet!"

"She wouldn't punish me," said Louise proudly.

"Then why don't you come out?"

She fell and hurt herself repeatedly. She could not even stand up on the skates. She dispaired of ever learning.

Louise dawdled against the rope. Her heart was beating thickly. "I don't want to, that's why," she said. "I don't like to play with rough girls. I'd rather play alone."

"Yes, you would!" hooted Barbara. "O, yes, ma'am. O, sure! everybody knows that." She laughed gayly.

"Well, so long, stick-in-the-mud. I'll see you tomorrow," and she went off in her magic freedom.

The Sophisticates

Louise pushed the swing a little, holding tightly to the ropes. Her cheeks were flushed. Again it came over her, the faintness and the longing. Barbara would run away! But Barbara hadn't ever had three grown women all heartbroken over her naughtiness. Barbara's mother had three children, and then, Louise knew, from her own mother's actions, that when a man was around all the time the mother talked to him and didn't notice her children closely.

No, Louise would not disobey. She loved her mother with a deep tenderness. "Mother loves you." "Mother knows best" were bonds unbreakable.

Perhaps, too, Louise shrank unconsciously from the ordeal that would await her if she should go out and try to take her place now among these sophisticates, these eight or nine little girls with one roller skate key among the lot of them, with baby brothers and sisters to be tagged after, with their quarrels and independence and their secrets and giggles.

Grandmother was tapping on the window pane. The light was almost gone. Louise hunted in her pocket for her handkerchief and blew her nose loudly and wiped her eyes and went into the house smiling firmly.

She had been in bed and asleep a little while when she was awakened by a low moaning sound and got up at once. Her room was under the eaves, and her mother's room opened off it. Grandmother and Aunt Agnes slept across the hall. There was a light in her mother's room. Louise went in there at once. Her grandmother was leaning over her mother's bed, bathing her mother's face.

"The doctor will be here now directly. You'll be all right," grandmother was saying soothingly. Louise grew stiff with terror, uttered a cry and flew to her mother and seized her with tight little hands. Mother smiled up at her, but her face was very white.

"I'll be all right, Lou-Lou. Don't be frightened. I've eaten something, I think."

Louise began to cry, and grandmother said sharply that she would have to go away if she did that, so she stood there with tears upon her cheeks and her teeth tightly clenched and waited. Aunt Agnes came and went—to the telephone, to the door. The doctor came in a very short time, and they sent Louise out of the room. She leaned against her own door, listening. Her mother was very ill. And then they called her.

Father Comes Home

"Louise," mother said, taking her hand, "Mother has always told you the truth, and I'm going to tell you now. I must go to the hospital. I have appendicitis. It isn't serious and I'll be home in ten days or two weeks. You can come and visit me there, in a few days. You stay right here and be good. We're sending for father. He'll be here tomorrow. Kiss me and go back to bed. I'm going to be all right. Do you understand?"

Louise went quietly back to bed. She was not frightened now that her mother had explained to her. She knew things would be all right, but she did not take any chances and prayed very carefully about it all. In the morning only grandmother was there. Aunt Agnes had gone to the hospital and had stayed there with mother.

Grandmother g a v e Louise some breakfast and told her she did not need to go to school. But at noon there was word that mother was out from under the anesthetic and out of danger. Father came in. He had gone directly to the hospital from the train. Aunt Agnes was with him, and she went upstairs to bed. Father took Louise into his lap and told her little jokes, but his face was drawn and pale. They ate their lunch in silence and father said Louise should go to school.

"Agnes has gone to bed and I am too exhausted to take her. You will have to take her," said grandmother.

"Take her?" said father. "Why, it's straight down Elm avenue, six or seven blocks. Why does she have to be taken?"

Grandmother's lips tightened.

"We've never allowed her to go to school alone," she said. "Children are not safe in this day and age. You know what happened to her mother—and everything is far worse now."

"There are other dangers besides kidnaping," said father quietly, but he was very stern. "I knew you coddled her, but I didn't know how much. It is mistaken kindness. Get your hat and sweater and go on to school, Louise. You don't need any escort. Nothing can harm you."

Louise was worried about grandmother's expression, but she started alone, a little song in her heart that her mother was all right now. That was the main thing. She would do just as her mother wanted her to do. She would mind her mother every day and never do a thing she wouldn't like!

Barbara and Mary were standing on the corner. They had heard, in their own homes, about Louise's mother. Louise saw that she had attained an unprecedented importance.

The two little girls clutched her.

"Listen!" they demanded. "Was she sick in the night?"

"Yes," said Louise. "I woke up and heard her moaning."

"Did you cry? Did she scream? My brother screamed when he had appendicitis."

"No, of course she didn't scream. She just kind of groaned."

"Was she—you know—sick to her stummick?"

"Terrible," said Louise.

I'm His Girl

Barbara and Mary were fascinated. When they reached the school ground Louise told it all again, and this time her squeamishness was lessened. She went into details. The little girls stood about on their roller skates and nodded.

"When I had scarlet fever——" offered one, woman-wise, and another broke in, "When I fell out of the cherry tree and broke my collar bone, they all thought I was dead!"

The others gazed admiringly at the heroine of the cherry tree. Martha Reid whispered, "Come with me Louise. I'll tell you a secret."

"No," said Barbara firmly, "Louise is to stay with Mary and me. Her mother sent word for us to take her to school and home again."

Louise gazed in astonishment.

"I can go by myself," she said, and Barbara answered at once, "Now, Louise, you know what your mother said. The nurse phoned our house. Just as soon as your mother woke up from the chloroform she said, 'Call up Peters' house and tell Barbara to take Louise to school'."

No one believed it, except Louise, and even she had faint doubts. But her admiration for Barbara was so intense that she could not question her. At recess they walked together, Barbara and Mary, with Louise between them, but after school Mary ran off with Rosalie and Marcella and Barbara and Louise walked slowly home from school with their arms around one another's necks.

Louise walked in a dream. There was something so sweet and warm about Barbara's arm, in her sweater sleeve, something that drew Louise and melted her. She looked worshipfully into Barbara's clear, fair face, with its lovely blue eyes and the yellow curls all about it. Barbara was the prettiest girl in No. 3.

"I'll tell you all my secrets if you'll tell me yours," she whispered.

"I haven't any," said Louise, ashamed, and Barbara exclaimed, "Gee, can't you make one up? Just to tell me? Mary's mad at me now. She's jealous over you. So we'll be chums, you and me."

"All right," said Louise trembling.

"I'll tell you my first secret," said Barbara. "I've got a note from Roy, and he says I'm his girl."

"Honest?"

"I'll show it to you. It's in our hollow tree. And I'm going to have a circus when school is out. I've taught my dog three tricks. Roy is going to have his pony in it. Listen, Louise, look in all the magazines and if you see any coupons, send them in. We'll get a lot of tooth paste and samples of powder and little recipe books and things, and we'll sell them in our circus, see? It will be our secret."

They came to Louise's gate.

"I'll go get my skates and come call for you," said Barbara.

Louise sighed. "I can never go out," she said meekly. And Barbara, a sophisticated citizen of the world, replied with spirit, "Gee, maybe your mother's sick they won't notice you."

Baby Likes the Game

"Grandmother will notice."

"Ask your father," said Barbara shrewdly. "He's your boss now. Ask him. He'll let you. Say, I'll bet he'd get you skates if you asked him."

Louise felt that there was something underhanded about this, but it so happened that her father was just coming out of the house as she went in. He stooped and kissed her. She was always shy with him. He was a very handsome man.

"Safe home again?" he teased her. "I'm just going to the hospital to see mother for a few minutes. Shall I take your love to her, Louise?"

"Can't I see her, father?"

"In a day or two. I'll take you, Saturday or Sunday. What are you going to do now?"

"Barbara Peters wants me to play on the walk with her."

"Why not?"

"Well, grandmother might not let me." This was treachery.

"You go ahead. I'll let you."

So Barbara, trembling a little, said, "Father said I might play on the walk with Barbara until he gets back."

"Come on out," said Barbara. "What do you want to stick in the yard for? Come out and skate."

ILLUSTRATION BY P. T. JENSEN.

Grandmother folded her lips tightly and made no answer.

Barbara had her skates and she had their baby. They played a game. Louise held the baby's hand, about ten feet from the top of the hill. It was comical the way he humped his little back and braced himself. Barbara got a good start and picked him up. Her roller skates s p r e a d far apart, she caught him under the arms and around his little middle and lifted him and let him fly back between her knees. Then she drew her feet together skillfully and he put one eighteen months' old foot down on each of hers and away they went clear to the bottom of the hill with Louise running after them in fear and trembling.

What if the baby fell? What if Barbara lost one of her "ball bearians," and came down on top of him? But nothing happened. The baby was not frightened. He was wild about the game. Barbara couldn't go fast enough to suit him. They were still out there in the early dusk when father came home. The two Marthas and Kathie and Mimi had joined them, and the six little girls and Barbara's baby were making a good deal of noise in the quiet street.

Father got out of his car and watched them playing a little, and then he said, "Why aren't you skating, Louise?"

"I haven't any skates."

"Don't you want any?"

"O, yes!"

"Run in and tell grandmother I'm taking you downtown. We'll get you some."

The New Skates

Louise stood very still. The other little girls looked at her. Barbara made encouraging signs. But Louise looked at her father fairly.

"Not unless mother says I can. She doesn't want me to skate."

Father looked at his little girl and looked away and smiled.

"I'll ask her," he said. "I'll ask her tomorrow."

Louise went to sleep that night as soon as her head touched the pillow. She wakened early and felt extraordinarily light and happy. Then she remembered about her prayers and said them with tardy guilt. She prayed especially for her mother, and then she dressed and went down to breakfast. Father wasn't down yet. Grandmother and Aunt Agnes were at the table alone. They looked at her sorrowfully.

There was a good deal of low voiced talk about Louise taking advantage while her mother was ill. It hurt grandmother, terribly. She thought her little girl was different. But Louise hardened her heart. There was a new and powerful rebelliousness in her. Only her mother might have stemmed it. When father came in, freshly shaved and pink of cheek, grandmother fell into uneasy silence and Louise went off to school alone again.

That evening father was waiting, and he had the roller skates. Louise had not expected them at all! Father put them on for her and then got into his car and drove resolutely away.

Barbara and Mary and Rosalie and Kathie and Mimi came to skate on the hill, and Louise was very awkward and selfconscious. She fell and hurt herself repeatedly. She could not even stand up on the skates. She despaired of ever learning. Her heart ached, and she wished, forlornly, for the shelter of the little yard, and the swing that was too small for her. Barbara and Kathie helped her. They held her hands and told her how to throw her weight forward on each foot, but it was no use. She became terribly discouraged. Nothing sustained her but pride. She had wanted the skates and now she had them!

Father came back and sat on the steps and smoked and watched the others flying by. Father watched her struggling and his eyes looked hurt and disappointed. When they scattered to go to their suppers, Barbara with their baby riding on her feet, father said, "That's the way to start them. If you'd started that way before you could walk any too well, you'd never have these troubles now, little daughter."

You'll Be My Chum

And then, with infinite patience, he held her hand and she tried and tried.

"It'll be easier tomorrow," he assured her. "I'm going to take you to see mother in the afternoon and I want you to tell her you can skate a little. You'd do well to practice all by yourself. You mustn't give up, Louise. It's worth sticking at."

She was so tired she couldn't sleep. All night she seemed to be skating. Her feet felt just as though the heavy steel contraptions were fastened to them. She could feel the bite of the straps on her ankles. In the morning she got up early and stole downstairs. She unlocked the front door and went out alone. Only the milkman was on the quiet street.

She sat down on the front steps and put her skates on and started out, slowly, her hands outspread, going down the hill to skate on the cross street where it was level. Father had been right. She could balance herself today. She had learned while she was sleeping. She began to throw herself forward, with more confidence. Gradually her feet came together a little better. She was able to lift her right foot clear of the cement while her left rolled forward.

She came back at 7 o'clock and went into the house. Her grandmother was astonished to see her. Louise did not even listen to her, but ran to waken her father and tell him. She had a few small tasks to do on Saturday morning, and after breakfast she hurried through with them, but she was scarcely finished when she heard a shrill treble: "Looueeese—Yoo, hoo!"

It was Barbara. Louise rushed out of the house, her skates clanking by their straps. They went off together, skating with long strokes, their arms around one another's waists, their hands crossed over in front. They were together all morning, the little brown eyed girl and the little blue eyed girl. Mary had gone to the country and there was no one to trouble them. Mary, Barbara told Louise, was going to move to the country.

"You'll be my chum now, won't you?" she said. Louise gave Barbara's hand a squeeze, but her heart sank. This would only last while father was home. She closed her eyes. She would ask her mother if she couldn't have a chum. They had never allowed her to play with any one.

"I've got a secret to tell you," she whispered. "I've got some beautiful gold paper. I've had it a long time. We could use it—for the circus next summer, to make crowns or something with!"

Becomes Independent

Barbara took everything for granted. She showed Louise how to put on skates without a key, how to cross her feet over on corners, showed her the hollow tree where they could leave notes for each other, and the hole where they could go through Smiths' fence when the apples were green. The other girls came to skate on the hill, and they played "rin-tin-tin" and "senders," "pom-pom pull-away" on their skates and laughed until they had to lean up against the trees and hold their sides when Barbara's baby got silly and made faces and pulled his hat on the side of his head. The two Marthas would have coaxed the others to run away, but Barbara, who was leader in everything, soon put a stop to that.

It was noon before Louise could believe it. She was bathed by a silent and grieving grandmother and went to the hospital with her father. She was thrilled to see her mother, who looked astonishingly young and pretty, lying on the pillow with her thick, fair hair in a braid. She wore a bright bed jacket father had bought her and she seemed shining with happiness and not sick at all. Father kissed her tenderly and so did Louise. Mother asked about the skates, and Louise told her, with enthusiasm, leaning against the bed, holding mother's hand.

"Mother," she said, in a rush, "Barbara wants me for her chum. Can I have a chum, mother? You have to visit each other, and stay all night, sometimes. You have to call for each other and have secrets."

Father sent Louise to look out of the window, and he talked to mother in a low voice about grown up things that didn't interest Louise. It was all about solitary confinement being meted out only to the most hardened criminals, about gregarious instincts and the necessities of the soul.

"I'd never have left a boy under such circumstances," father said, reproaching himself, and mother drew him down and kissed him.

They had to go almost at once and mother put the hair back from Louise's forehead and looked into her eyes and kissed her.

"Of course you can have a chum, darling." Mother's eyes were full of tears. "Barbara Peters is a fine little girl. I know her mother well."

Father went away on Monday morning, to be gone a few days to the "head office." Aunt Agnes and grandmother could not do a thing with Louise. She refused to allow any one to walk to school with her, and, short of a scene on the highway, she did not intend to yield. She brought little girls into the house—walking on the hardwood floors on their roller skates—to see the shells father had brought from California. Her indiscretions were numerous. She jumped the rope too long and was tardy in school. She appeared at the supper table with grimy hands. She didn't listen when grandmother pleaded with her. When she was taken to see her mother she leaned against the bed in an ecstatic silence.

"It's lonesome without you, mother," was all that she had to say.

Father came back at the end of the week, and on Saturday afternoon he took Louise riding and showed her a small story and a half white house and told her it was to be her new home.

Sorry for Grandma

"I'm not going to be away from home for months at a time any more. Mother's being sick has made me realize a lot of things," he told her. "I'm going to have charge of southern Indiana warehouses and stay right here in Hilltown. You and mother and I are going to live in this little house, just the three of us."

The house was perfect. It was right across the street from Barbara's. There was a cherry tree in the yard. There was a gate.

At the hospital they found mother sitting up in a chair with her hair combed and a beautiful mandarin coat father had brought back with him over her night dress. They had a wonderful hour making plans, just the three of them. But when they reached home again Louise saw at once that grandmother had been crying and Aunt Agnes looked very tall and pale. For a moment the child was pierced with sorrow for her prolonged babyhood. She would never be the apple of the family's eye any more, for father and mother had a new way of looking at each other, as though they had just found each other. Louise would never again have three grownups breathing when she breathed, watching her every step, loving her every moment of the day. She felt sorry for grandmother and went to her and kissed her.

"I'll come and see you every day," she promised. It was as though she had already moved. She kissed Aunt Agnes. "I'll always love you," she told her gravely.

Then she went out on the porch and put on her skates. She coasted easily to the gate. They were no longer traps for her destruction, but wings upon her feet. She turned down the hill, flexed her knees experimentally and then stooped and let one foot trail behind, riding lightly on the forward skate. She spread her arms as the other girls did, and the wind rushed under them, sending little banners fluttering from her skirt and sweater.

She went faster and faster. Her face was fired with happiness, her eyes were shining. She heard, far down the street near the new little house, a shrill voice calling her. It was her soul's necessity.

"Wait up for me. I'm coming. Yoo hoo! Barb'ra! Barb'ra!"

Money from Cake.

Two years ago, about two months before Christmas, I mailed samples of fruit cake to friends of my husband in Chicago, stating the price per pound and asking them for orders if they liked the cake, to be sent when they wanted it. I got several orders and in this way made some pin money which came in handy at Christmas time. R. H. M.

I am an ex-champion typist and have a typewriter at home. Occasionally I make extra money during my spare hours at home by helping backward high school or business school students. HARLEY AND JOAN

by ROLAND PERTWEE

The story in Resume.

Harley Trevelyan, spending the last night of his leave from the front in London, has an engagement to dine with Paula Drayton, whose younger brother, through Trevelyan's influence, has been assigned to his own battery. Paula grows emotional just before they go into dinner and leaves after telling him that she loves him. Harley is walking the streets when the Zeppelins raid London and, being used to gun fire, does not run for cover as every one else does. A young woman in a window, sends her brother to bring him into the house, and he discovers that the boy is Freddie Miller, an old schoolmate, and the girl is Joan. With Joan he goes up on the roof to watch the air raid and they see an airplane shoot down one of the Zeps. Following the air raid Harley, Joan and Freddie have a bite in the kitchen and Harley realizes that he is in love with this girl he has known only a few moments. The next day Freddie and he leave for the front and when Harley rejoins his battery he discovers that Paula's brother, a second lieutenant, is already on hand.

INSTALLMENT V.

Joan Sees Paula.

THREE nights after Harley's return from England there occurred one of those mishaps which attended even the nonmilitant branches of His Majesty's Expeditionary Force. The O i/c 007 siege battery ammunition column, a faithful and conscientious youth, in company with a lorry loaded with fifty rounds of Pip X, made an exit from this world in one swift upward flight. There being no remains, there was no burial; a large hole in the road east of Sailly au Bois was obligingly filled in by the R. Es and traffic proceeded as usual.

Maj. Fawlk, who had a theory not entirely borne out by the casualty lists that no one in the A. S. C. was ever killed, indited a letter to siege park headquarters stating that in no circumstances would he accept the services of the second officer as O i/c column.

Maj. Regan, replying, told him to mind his own business, which was surely as much as he would be expected efficiently to do. He referred him to the fact that the administration of transport problems was no part of a battery commander's duties. Until such a time as another officer could be posted—if ever—the second officer would be in charge.

Maj. Fawlk thereupon sent the correspondence with a covering chit to heavy artillery.

Heavy artillery used it to stuff a hole in an Armstrong hut.

Second Lieutenant H. T. Wardley, the second column officer, lamenting the loss of his senior but rejoicing in what was tantamount to promotion, removed the governors from the engines of four of his lorries to form a flying squad and two days later was placed under open arrest by an A. P. M. for doing thirty miles an hour on a one way traffic system with the arrows against him. Thanks to Regan, a court-martial was avoided, but something had to be done. Wardley collected for himself three tick-offs—one from Regan, one from the S. M. T. O., and a third at corps, which started at noon—paused for the luncheon recess, and proceeded with renewed vigor at 2 p. m. What was left of him returned in low gear on a motorcycle.

Freddie Gets New Job

Maj. Fawlk reopened the attack and this time heavies backed him up.

"It was impossible," he wrote, "that the ammunition and supplies of his battery should depend upon the services of such an officer as Wardley."

No available reinforcements being on hand, Regan was reluctantly obliged to withdraw an officer from another column. That he hit upon Freddie Miller was not because he had detected particular brilliance for transport work in that young man, but because he conceived him to be of a disposition such as would "turn that damned pussy cat, Fawlk, scranny."

"Besides," said he, when advising Freddie of his new posting, "ye'll have a friend at court in Trevelyan, and ye've too much sinse to make a mess of the job."

Glad of heart, Freddie Miller returned to his own lines to tell the melancholy Wodehouse that they were to be parted. Brooding upon his domestic sorrows and severance from his adored bride, Wodehouse received the tidings phlegmatically."

"I never get anything or any one I'm allowed to keep," he sighed. "My wife and I hadn't been married twelve hours when I was ordered abroad."

So Freddie shifted his kit to a comfortable little hut that the deceased O i/c 007 S. B. A. C. had built out of wood and canvas scrounged by night from an R. E. dump. Here he found a sullen and dejected Wardley willing and anxious to die, but determined first to make himself a thorough nuisance to his new senior.

Freddie produced a bottle of whisky and two glasses. Wardley shook his head.

"I have no wish to drink with you or to talk to you," he said.

"But you're going to do both," said Freddie.

Laughs at Jokes

In the horse play that followed the foundations of the hut gave way. It heeled over and rolled down a road bank. Locked in each others arms and in a chaos of match boarding canvas, folding beds, boots, tins, and other impedimenta of active service, the two enveloped young men went with it.

The best of friends, they subsequently emerged by way of the roof.

And that night, to the surprise of Harley Trevelyan, Freddie Miller sailed into the B. C. dugout and reported delivery of three hundred rounds of Pip X as per invoice.

Regan's pious hope that the new column officer would prove a thorn in Fawlk's flesh was doomed to disappointment. Finding out at their first meeting that Freddie was a son of Sir Balliol Miller and a brother of the lovely Joan, Fawlk extended himself in the direction of amiability. He described Freddie as an agreeable and capable young man and observed that he had had the honor of meeting Sir Balliol in Kenya and Joan in London. He went to the length of laughing quite openly at some of Freddie's anecdotes. It was the first time in the history of the battery that Fawlk had joined in a general laugh.

Although not without appreciation for humor, his practice in the presence of wit or a jest was to assume an expression of reprobation and disapproval, and then secretly to retire and laugh by himself.

In the opinion of his subordinates this secret laughter was worse than solitary drinking. There was something very ungenerous about it.

But at Freddie's jokes he laughed outright, also he said:

"That's very amusing, very amusing, indeed."

To Harley, who had accompanied Freddie back to where the unloaded lorries and their drivers impatiently awaited orders to return, Freddie said:

"Appears to me you've given your old man a needlessly sour press. He seems a genial sort of bloke."

"He certainly blossomed out tonight," Harley agreed. Then, more tentatively: "Any news from—home?"

Freddie slapped his tin hat.

"There! Clean forgot. Had a letter from Joan this morning. Message in it for you, too."

Harley tried to make his voice sound natural.

"O! Yes, well?"

"Can't make head or tail of it myself. P'raps you are brighter. Here!" He fished a letter from his pocket, switched on his torch, and pointed.

In a bold large hand were the written words:

"Tell your friend I was just as disappointed as he looked."

Harley's heart thumped extravagantly. In the two brief snatches of time he had spent with Joan there was only one disappointment. A life saving soul starving porter was responsible for that.

He managed to say: "Queer. I wonder what she did mean?"

"Don't ask me," Freddie replied; then to his sergeant: "All right, sergeant; cast off."

"Beg your pardon, sir, but they're shelling very 'ot at the crost roads."

"If you can suggest any way to stop 'em, I'll try it," said Freddie, "but if not we'll get under way. 'Night, 'night, old son."

An Informal Chat

By the intermittent flash of gunfire and the white glow of star shells Harley watched six dark shapes rumble down the lane, turn at Windy Corner, and string themselves out across the plain. He returned slowly to the B. C. dugout.

"Old man wants you in his quarters," said Hammersley.

Fawlk was sitting on his camp bed with a copy of an illustrated paper on his knees and a whisky and water within reach.

"You sent for me, sir?"

"For a chat, Trevelyan, yes, an informal chat. It's pleasant sometimes to shelve one's duty and relax. Help yourself to some whisky."

He pointed to a bottle and a tin mug with a tooth brush sticking out of it. The association of the one with the other robbed Harley of thirst.

"Thanks, I've just had one, sir."

Fawlk did not press the invitation. With the toe of his boot he thrust a wooden case toward Harley and waited until he had seated himself before speaking again.

"So you think young Drayton will make good?"

Harley nodded.

"I don't see why not."

"I have been rather puzzled why you should have exerted yourself to get him posted to us."

"I thought I told you, sir."

"A friend of the family—but that was such a slender pretext."

Harley felt his cheeks beginning to warm.

"Now, now, don't take offense, Trevelyan. A harmless jest—a shot in the dark, that's all."

"I don't understand, sir."

Fawlk's mouth relaxed into one of its catlike smiles.

"You should take me into your confidence, Trevelyan. It is the duty of an officer commanding to know all the whys and wherefores."

"Certainly," said Harley, short as a biscuit.

"I had a chat with Drayton this evening, quite a chat. You have a sincere admirer in that boy—very sincere. It seems, too, that he is not the only member of his family whose admiration you have captured. Eh?"

Harley lit a cigaret and stared hard.

"He showed me his sister's portrait. A very lovely woman. Am I to be allowed to congratulate you, Trevelyan? H'm?"

"No," said Harley. "No, sir; you are not."

Fawlk leaned back against the stone walls of the cellar, hugged his knees, and laughed thinly. The open periodical had tilted forward and lay against his chest.

Late as was the hour, he slouched miserably up and down the battery position.

ILLUSTRATION BY W. H. WISNER.

"Er—Slightly"

"If you choose to be reticent you have every right," he allowed. "Yet out here, divorced as we are from all that is tender, fragrant, and sensuous, I cannot choose but feel some relaxation of reticence is excusable. You are only just back from leave. The scent of Rose Jacques Minot still lingers in your nostrils—by closing your eyes you can still picture the faces and the hair of lovely women. Your larder, so to speak, is overflowing with hoarded experience. Is it not something less than charitable, less than civility, to keep the doors so tightly closed?"

"If you want to talk about women, sir, I don't see why you should go short—even here," said Harley.

Fawlk frowned.

"Not a very happily turned phrase, Trevelyan, is it?"

Harley made no answer and Fawlk changed the subject.

"An amusing fellow, young Miller. Quite amusing. Know him well?"

"We were at Magdalen together."

"I met his father two or three times—in business. A very influential man on the east coast—coffee and other things. You have met him?"

"Once, I believe—May week—years ago."

"And the rest of the family?"

"Er—slightly."

With every word he spoke Harley was putting himself as far as possible from the subject under discussion.

"The mother and the sister, eh?"

Harley's nod was not enough to shake the long ash from his cigaret.

"I once had the pleasure of meeting her—at a dance."

Harley, whose leg was beginning to swing, said: "Did you?"

"My dear Trevelyan," Fawlk protested. "'Did you' is surely inadequate. Have you no eyes—no memory—or has love made you blind?"

"What do you mean, sir?"

"That whatever a man might feel for another woman he could not fail to admit that Joan Miller is the most exquisite girl ever created. Here," and he extended the periodical at the length of his arm, revealing a full page portrait of Joan, "can you conceive a more perfect body—a lovelier face than that?"

Harley did not trust himself to reply. His hands, knotted into fists, were thumping against the sides of the box upon which he sat.

A Picture of Joan

"I have traveled in too many corners of this earth and seen too wide a pageant of beauty to be lightly susceptible to external charms, but the moment I saw Joan Miller and held her in my arms for one tragically brief waltz—Weber's 'L'Invitation'—I said to myself this is the apotheosis—the epitome of perfect womanhood."

Taking from his pocket a small knife, he neatly cut the picture from the paper and skewered it with the blade to the brickwork beside his bed.

He was so occupied by this amorous task that its reaction upon Harley escaped his notice. Harley had risen and was standing erect and rigid, breathing through his nose.

"I am sorry, sir," he said, "but I must ask you to take that down."

Fawlk's eyes narrowed to slits.

"What did you say?"

"I ask you to take that down," Harley repeated.

"Trevelyan, you are forgetting yourself."

"On the contrary, sir, I am remembering what you are doing with the picture of a friend of mine who, I am damn sure, would have no wish for it to hang above your bed. There are plenty of Raphael Kirchner girls and outer covers of Vie Parisienne's which'll serve that purpose—but not——"

He did not trust himself to utter Joan's name, but, taking a step forward, he ripped the picture from the wall, tore it in fragments, and stuffed them in his pocket.

Fawlk did not move. With half closed eyes and still as a crouching cat, he watched this amazing conduct in silence. There was, of course, only one explanation for Harley's action and that the least acceptable of all.

"Captain Trevelyan," he said, choosing his words like a jeweler matching pearls for a string, "you may count yourself fortunate that no one beside ourselves was present to witness this unfortunate display. In civilian life I should know how to act. In the present circumstances I can only wish you good-night and better manners."

Harley saluted and went out.

For perhaps five minutes Fawlk sat on the bed, slowly tapping his teeth with a finger nail. Then he picked up the telephone to the B. C. dugout.

"Send Mr. Drayton to me."

Fawlk Writes a Letter

What he said to David took a long time. His attitude throughout the interview was benign and fatherly.

"But you should make sure, my boy—you should be accurate before spreading rumors about these affairs. You must remember women are imaginative creatures—they assume a great deal more than has actually been said."

When he was allowed to go David Drayton stood at the top of the cellar steps and gulped and rubbed his eyes with the back of his hand.

Down below Fawlk was writing a letter to Sir Balliol Miller.

"——delighted to have your son as my column officer—very capable—has a friend here in Captain Trevelyan—no doubt you met Trevelyan on his last leave, if his time was not too heavily occupied with the sister of another of my officers. In these curiously emotional times it is hard to keep track of the many romances with which one is surrounded. I hope to be allowed to present myself when next on leave. A letter from a friend on the east coast has advised Tanyka Land Developments and—from personal experience—I know it to be sound——"

And so on.

There was a smile of satisfaction at the corners of his thin mouth as he sealed the envelope and affixed the censorship stamp.

. . . . . .

David Drayton did not return to the dugout which he shared with Harley. Late as was the hour, he slouched miserably up and down the battery position, cursing the restraint that held him in France when every loyal and devoted instinct urged him to be with Paula.

There was not in all the world a woman like Paula. She had been the core and center of his existence. In his young and ardent imagination she supplied every demand. She was mother, sister, sweetheart—everything. There was no sacrifice he was not willing to make for her sake—or the sake of her happiness.

That her love for any man should not be returned was unbearable—unthinkable. Harley couldn't know—he couldn't.

True, she had never told him she loved Harley, but their understanding was of a kind transcending the exchange of spoken confidence.

David Slunk Away

David clenched his hands in impatient wretchedness.

"If only I could talk to her—now—now."

What was it the O. C. had said to him, "another interest—intimately related to our new column officer." That meant some other girl.

"And I'll bet she's cheap, too—I'll bet she's cheap," he said aloud.

"What's the strafe?" he asked with humorous kindliness. "Talking to your self and all! Gone ga-ga or something?"

"It's nothing, Hammersley."

"Then I'd go to bed. You're for O Pip at five and the night is using itself up fast."

"All right," said David sulkily.

"And all right it is," said Hammersley. "In one's early days one gets a bit homesick now and then, but feelings wear off."

"Not mine."

"You bet they will. Go on, toddle off. If the old man found you here he'd think you were looking for a blighty."

David slunk away. He undressed by the light of a torch. Harley was lying with his face to the wall asleep, or pretending to be asleep. David thought:

"If I could wake him—make him say it isn't true that there is no one but Paula."

But one couldn't do that—not now. Out here everything was different—different.

The barriers of rank stood permanently between confidence and truth.

. . . . . .

"Here," said Sir Balliol Miller, familiarly known to the members of his family as the baron, "here is a damn long letter from a quite unpleasant fellar I thought I'd forgotten."

"How does one think one's forgotten anybody?" Joan asked, over a slice of bread and jam. She had never cured herself of the nursery habit of spreading jam on bread, and what remained after the first bite looked like one of those newspaper war maps designed to illustrate the phrase, "All objectives were taken."

"How does one think one's forgotten anybody?" she repeated. "It would be a useful accomplishment these days."

Lady Miller nodded slowly.

"It would," she said, "it would be very nice indeed."

Lost in Thought

"By not remembering them," replied the baron breathily, for he was a breathy man—the kind of a man who said "Pooh!" more easily than any other word.

"You women had better read it, though," he went on, "as it refers to Frederick."

With a rapidity unexpected in one of her size, Lady Miller whipped away the letter from her husband's hand.

"Aloud," Joan demanded.

Lady Miller filled her lungs and read.

When she had finished Joan seemed to have lost interest in her bread and jam.

"I never can remember names," said Lady Miller, "but surely Capt. Trevelyan was that air raid young man."

Joan nodded.

"How nice for Freddie to be with a friend."

"Jolly," said Joan. "Can I have a peep at the letter?" She read it through with a shadow of a frown—a puzzled frown. "Drayton—I wonder if that is Paula Drayton's brother? Must be."

Lady Miller wondered too, but only vaguely.

"And I wonder," said the baron, "if this fellar Fawlk feels it his duty to advertise the love affairs of all the officers under his command to disinterested parties. Is there another cup o' coffee, my dear?"

There was.

"Still it was very nice of him to write about Freddie," said Lady Miller.

Joan had pushed back her plate.

"Fawlk," she repeated. "I believe I met him once—a year ago. A slug with little peering eyes and hands that wandered up and down one's back when one was dancing." She shuddered expressively. "What was he, anyway?"

"So far as I can remember," said the baron, "he was a man who had done very well for himself out of minding other people's business. Well, well."

Rising, he brushed his mouth with a napkin, kissed his wife's fat cheek and the smooth top of Joan's head and went off to the ministry at which he was employed.

Joan seemed lost in thought. Her fingers were drumming softly on the table.

"Finish up your bread and jam," said her mother.

Joan came back with a start.

"Of course—yes, rather. I'm hungry."

What was left she wolfed unceremoniously, finished her coffee and jumped up.

Lady Miller asked:

"What are you doing today?"

"Prisoners—Grosvenor square."

It was raining a little, but Joan took no heed of that. She walked with long strides, too long for the length of her legs. Her hands were stuffed into the pockets of her short coat, also she whistled—a very vulgar thing to do in the streets. Real ladies witnessing her conduct were shocked by it. The war, they thought, was responsible for very bad manners among young people.

Something Behind It

Once Joan stopped whistling and said to herself:

"He's a perfect right, of course, but still——"

Curious how ardently at one time one may desire to cook for a man and at another refuse even to contemplate doing such a thing.

Paula Drayton! Well, why not? Very attractive, one supposed. Temperamental—complex. Full of swift and bewildering changes. Now languid, now active as an ant heap poked by a stick.

Joan whistled, "If You Were the Only Girl," and passersby stopped passing by to look over their shoulders. One young R. A. F. officer had the filthy cheek to stop and stare, and wrinkle his forehead inquiringly.

"I'll sing if I like," said Joan.

But her way of saying it was not encouraging.

"Still you'd think a man'd have more sense than to plump for that type," she thought.

"There's more in this," she said, whistled a few bars and added, "than meets the eye."

What was that fellow Fawlk up to? A stinking thing to write about the private lives and loves of the officers he commanded.

The whole of that letter was puzzling.

Why write it?

Sucking up to the baron? Not unlikely.

A wriggling, wormish sort of letter.

He had been very attentive that night at the Savoy. Paddling round after her—paddle, paddle, paddle. Always arriving where she had finished up with any of his other partners. "May I not have the pleasure of driving you home, Miss Miller?" and her reply, "Thanks, I have my roller skates." Which was true. She and Esme Raeburn had skated home together and when a policeman in Trafalgar square asked what they were doing she had answered, "Saving petrol." A jealous man might have written that letter, but it was over a year since they had met. Besides, how could he know about—surely Harley wouldn't have said anything. No, no, O, no. And yet—a puzzle.

Grosvenor square, and a door marked Prisoners' Aid Depot.

One had arrived.

That's Temperament

"I say," said Joan to the girl who kept the nominal rolls and duty rosters at the baize table in the hall, "what department is Miss Drayton working in?"

"Surgical, when she does."

"And does she today?"

"Half a jiffy." A nominal roll with pencil ticks was consulted. "Yes, for a wonder."

"Why a wonder?"

The girl took off her glasses and wiped them.

"Because that's how it is with her. Absent for days on end and then all rush and fever and 'Here we are,' and 'This war must be finished by Friday and no more nonsense about it' sort of thing."

"That's temperament," said Joan.

"Temperament!" The girl readjusted her glasses and sniffed. "All my aunt and my elbow, I call it."

Joan went on to the changing room, took off her coat, rolled up her sleeves and donned a blue overall with P. A. D. in red letters on the handkerchief pocket. Then she went upstairs to the commandant's room.

"Can I have a shift for a day or two?" she asked.

"A shift—what kind of shift?"

"Into surgical. I've worked there before and just for the moment I'm sick of cakes and candies."

The expression of that sickness seemed unnecessarily vehement.

"If you like—we can do with extra help in that department. Three workers are on the sick list. Take this chit to Miss Buddy."

Miss Buddy stood no high, looked about 12 years old, had a voice like the chirrup of a canary, and was a holy terror to the idle.

"As long as you haven't come here for a holiday," she said, "and don't want to talk all day long. Still, you look as if you might have a little sense." Witnessing a misdemeanor, she darted across the room. "Denise, how can you be so stupid. Undo that parcel and do it up again. Like you were shown."

Denise, a lovely creature with the eyes of a spaniel, sighed, bit her lip, shook her head as one who would say, "Is one never to be understood?" and obeyed.

A place was found for Joan at bench 4, with a little cockney chatterbox on one side of her and Lady Mary Ermyntrude Iphegenia Lafayette on the other. As small trays and lists were passed to Joan she added, according to specification, bottles of No. 9 pills, fruit salts, calomel, senna pods, or podophyllin.

"It's more like relaxation than work," she whispered.

Joan Watches Paula

Lady Mary, under the vigilant eye of Buddy, stifled a snort of laughter.

In that busy hive it was some while before Joan discovered Paula.

Paula was seated at No. 6 on Joan's extreme left. She was working with a feverish energy and concentration far beyond the needs of her occupation. No. 6 was devoted to narcotics and narcotics were dispatched sparingly to the prison camps. Even the milder forms of sedative are apt to do more of harm than good to men who have little else to occupy them but loafing up and down before a hedge of electrically connected barbed wire.

On this account much of Paula's energy was spent in impatient delays—the drumming of her toes and fingers and the restless biting of her lips.

In a lull Joan had an opportunity to watch her and thought she had never seen any one strung up to a higher pitch of nervous tension. Joan had seen Paula before on sundry occasions, but this was the first time she had considered her with anything but casual interest. For quite primitive reasons she felt suddenly angry. If this was the girl Harley Trevelyan was in love with, he would have fun—she didn't think. It wouldn't do at all, she told herself. In their short acquaintance Joan had made up her mind that Harley was one of those steadfast, reliable men with an outer crust which concealed extraordinarily sensitive feelings. A woman like Paula, who might be splendid for a little while but who would never be anything for long, would drive Harley into a padded cell in less than three months. Of course it wouldn't do.

Watching Paula through a mesh of plaited fingers, Joan's toes, too, started tap, tap, tapping the floor. And then Joan saw a peculiar thing. Paula had picked up one of the little bottles of sedative, with which her section abounded, and, dropping her hands, bore it beneath the table. Here, for a while, it and her hands remained hidden. Presently one hand returned to the table with a movement that was curiously quick and secretive. Once more the bottle was in place. A second later Paula's other hand made three swift journeys from her lap to her mouth. A slow movement of the hollow cheeks showed that she was absorbing something rather than swallowing it.

"O, jiminy!" said Joan half aloud, "that's not so good either."

Paula Had Not Moved

A new batch of trays commanded her attention, but in the next interval of labor she addressed Lady Mary:

"Isn't that Paula Drayton over there? Looks pretty well jazzed up."

Lady Mary nodded.

"It's her brother. Quite a kid—just been sent to France. They are devoted, you know."

"Poor darling," said Joan. "A vertical breeze, eh?"

Lady Mary nodded.

"An awful mistake, caring for people," said she, sententiously. "Tempts providence and providence nearly always yields to temptation."

"Cave-ee. Buddy's lookin'," whispered the little Cockney, and drove an elbow into Joan's ribs.

They worked in silence until the luncheon recess, when some of the workers scampered off home. Joan bought herself a seven inch sausage roll in the buffet downstairs. One could buy sausage rolls without a coupon. She returned gnawing it meditatively.

Paula had not moved. She was leaning back against the wall, smoking and staring. The stare penetrated the walls of the room and a small section of the contingent. It was a difficult sort of stare to interrupt. Joan helped herself to some water from the filter and let the cup bang on its chain when she let it go.

"Ah," Paula exclaimed.

"That's done it," thought Joan, and said, "Hullo."

Paula nodded a vague recognition.

Joan approached, perched herself on the bench, took another bite, and, with swinging legs, asked cheerfully: "Aren't you going to lunch?"

Paula shook her head "no."

"I'll get you something from below, shall I?"

"No, thanks."

"Your brother's just gone abroad, hasn't he?" She didn't wait for a reply, but went on: "I know he had, because my brother is transport officer to the same battery."

"O, O, really?" Paula's interest had quickened. The stare returned from the other side of the channel and was focussed on Joan.

"I expect he'll love it," said Joan, puffily, for her mouth was full.

"I daresay," said Paula. "I daresay he'll love it."

It Was You Then?

Joan wondered what to say next. She wasn't liking herself very much.

"Freddie, my brother, is sure to be bucked; he's only just been posted. He'll be bucked to death because a great friend of his is in the battery—Captain Trevelyan."

"Yes," said Paula cautiously, "I

THE NEW TUNE.

I can not sing the old songs now—
For who would pay them heed?
Aunt Dinah holds no quilting bees,
A poker fight's her speed.
No "silver threads among the gold"
While henna dyes hold good.
And don't say sweet to Adeline—
Not in her hard boiled mood.
Romance, on bicycles for two,
Would be in traffic's way;
No breaking hearts "af-ter the ball,"
The night club life is gay.
To warble now "take back your gold"
Would mark one down as dumb
Unless, of course, one quickly adds
"And hand me platinum."

know," but with the tip of her tongue she moistened her lips. Then without "I see. He has just been home on leave."

Joan nodded and looked at the small pink circle of sausage in her roll.

"Yes, it was then we met. The last apparent interest she added, "He's a friend of David's, too, and of mine."

It was Joan's turn to say "Yes."

"Do you know Harley Trevelyan?"

Joan shrugged her shoulders.

"Not to say know—we've met—just met."

night of his leave. We saw the air raid together."

Paula started and leaned forward, her hands gripping the edge of the table. Barely above a whisper she said: "You—it was you, then—it was you?"

Joan was puzzled.

"Why? What do you mean, it was me?"

Paula's mouth had screwed itself into a smile.

"O, nothing—much," and added, "extraordinary."

"What is? Did he speak to you about me?"

"No," said Paula, hard as nails. "Why should he?"

If cutting up rough was the order, two could play.

"Then how did you know it was me?"

There was a longish silence before Paula answered. All the offense had vanished from her voice.

Next Week

Clement Henderson had planned the perfect crime—not a detail had been overlooked—but in a moment of stress he wiped his moist hands on his handkerchief . . . a short story by Alex Barber.

Stain

"A man in love carries the fact branded all over him. That's how."

But Paula was an unknown quantity to Joan. For all she knew the words might have been spoken to draw her out.

Two can draw out. She said: "Do they? How very obliging of them. How did you learn that?"

The answer was cryptic.

"Not from a man who made me any the happier for the lesson."

Again a silence. Then Joan, leaning over, thumped the heel of her fist on the back of one of Paula's hands that lay upon the table top.

"I think," she said awkwardly, "I think I haven't behaved very nicely."

"My poor child, you've nothing to reproach yourself with."

"Well, if you say so."

"O, yes, I say so," Paula nodded. With a new expression she searched Joan's face and said: "You certainly have the guns, my dear. Yes, you have the guns, all right. I could almost kiss you and wish you luck, but I'm no Judas and the words," she laughed, "the words 'd stick in my throat and choke me."

Joan was out of her depth.

"Sorry," was the best she could do.

"Why be sorry? It's stupid. Lots of people are hit by the same shell nowadays. We won't talk any more, if you don't mind."

So Joan went off to the filter for another mug of water.

Hooray! Sally Announces Big Circus Party!

Clows and Acrobats Will Amuse You.

By Sally Joy Brown.

Our next big party of the season, boys and girls, will be under the big top with Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey's combined circus, at Grant park on Thursday afternoon, Aug. 7. I know this comes to you as the biggest kind of news, for who is there among us, young or old, who doesn't love this show? Yes, it's a sign of happy days when the big canvas tents appear on the lake front.

The circus is to be an especially grand one this year because many new features have been added and, of course, there are the old favorites that always take the town by storm. There will be one hundred of such funny clowns to see that we are in a continual state of merriment; there will be the mammoth sea elephant that weighs five tons and eats 490 pounds of fish, every meal; there will be seals that play real music and juggling dogs who tumble and perform like humans.

Trained horses and bareback riders, dancers, aerialists, acrobats and tight rope walkers number among the performers who thrill and delight their audiences. One thousand and nine menagerie animals, forty-three elephants, and seven hundred horses will do their bit to make our afternoon a happy one, and 800 circus stars will go through their various stunts for our benefit. There will be five rings and six stages filled every minute with exciting things to see. Acts will come and go with such speed that we'll have to keep our eyes jumping from one side to another to see and catch everything.

Doesn't it sound like the kind of party you don't want to miss? Well, the customary rules hold forth and I shall have the usual number of guests, which means that 100 of you will be with me on Aug. 7 for the big show. Each of you write me a letter, telling me what you like about a circus and why you are so anxious to see this one. The boys and girls who receive invitations will be those who have convinced me by their letters that they are the ones who will enjoy it most.

You have until next Thursday morning to get these letters to me and it is most important that they include your name, address and age.

One hundred boys and girls will be delighted to know they've won invitations to the party at Ravinia, which will be on next Thursday afternoon. Their names are listed below:

MY PET ECONOMY

Would you care to pass on to some one else your pet economy? If so address Pet Economy, Chicago Tribune.

Invalid Takes Subscriptions.

An invalid friend of mine sells magazines without stirring from her fireside. She has many friends who in turn interest their own friends in what she is doing. Then, too, she writes charming letters to her "prospects," and who can resist the appeal of a well worded letter? She also uses the telephone. In her experience she has never lost a subscriber. One reason for this, I believe, is because she writes sweet little "Thank You" notes for each subscription. G. M. R.

Absent Treatment Pays.

I'm a yard and furnace tender. My school bills are largely met by "absent treatment." When families in our vicinity go visiting in winter, yours truly minds the furnace to keep the pipes from freezing. When they sally forth in summer, little Johnny-on-the-spot keeps laws green and gardens weeded. Family pets are fed and cared for, in their own homes or at mine.

Once a reputation is established the business grows, a pleasant, lucrative and "always different" business. R. J.

Savings Accounts.

I keep two savings accounts. One in a large downtown bank, the other in a small local bank. Into the larger one I deposit all sums that I am in hopes of not having to withdraw. Into the other all amounts that I know will have to be withdrawn during the year to meet expenses such as insurance, taxes, etc. In this way the interest is not disturbed on the total savings. Temporary deposits lessens the interest instead of increasing it, if withdrawals are made between interest dates. Also no interest is paid on amounts less than a dollar, so I try to keep the balance in dollars. This may be petty economy, but every little bit helps. M. A.

Pliable Wire.

I save all the wire handles from the ice cream cartons which are brought to the house, and place them in a convenient corner of the housekeeping repair box. I find them quite useful for repairing articles—such as draft control chains on the furnace, lid hinges, etc., and various repairs which require a short length, pliable wire. M. E. O.

Supplies the Homelike Touch.

I know a young lady who collects flower pots from her friends or neighbors, scrubs them clean, and lacquers them in pretty colors with a decorative band or spray in contrasting tones. Then she fills them with earth and "plants" an artificial geranium or two in each. Geraniums may be purchased for 6 to 10 cents. When finished the pots sell for $1, giving her at least 75 cents profit.

She has sold every one she has made so far and has orders for many more. They add a homey touch to any room, but I think they are most attractive in the kitchen. Mrs. J. H.

The Biggest Liar

Who is the biggest liar you have ever known and what was his biggest lie? Tribune readers would like to hear about it. Write it simply and use only one side of the paper. Mail it to Biggest Liar, Sunday Tribune.

Apparently So.

The biggest liar was a speaker who called prohibition a "noble experiment." M. S.

His Story Shrinks.

When I was a youngster I knew an old man who was, I believe, the champion liar. Though he has been dead over thirty years I still remember one of his yarns. He was driving his team up a steep hill one day, so he said, when suddenly it began to rain. As the leather tugs on the wagon became soaked with water they began to stretch. They stretched so much that by the time the team had reached the top of the hill the wagon had slipped back to the bottom.

"Well, what do you reckon I did about it?" the old fellow would ask at this point in his story. "Well, sir, I jest set in that wagon till the sun come out bright again. Then the tugs began to shrink and shrink till they'd jest pulled that wagon right back up the hill with me in it, by golly!" E. C. B.

Some Keg Jumper.

Out in southwestern Iowa lives a man who has the "rep" of being the biggest liar in the country. Here is one of his best:

He had a habit on winter mornings of rolling out of bed and rushing to the stove to shake down the ashes so the banked fire would blaze up and get the house warm. Then he would shovel the ashes out into a bucket.

One morning something distracted his attention and he threw a shovelful, consisting mostly of live coals into a keg of black powder setting nearby.

"I didn't have time to run," he said, "so I jumped into the keg and tramped the coals out before they hit the powder. Burnt the feet outa my socks doin' it, though." L. R. Z.

Mercolized Wax Keeps Skin Young

Do you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or aged complexion is one fair to look upon? Nature causes the normal skin to peel off in tiny, unseen, flour-like particles, a little each day, renewing the complexion of youth naturally, but there comes a time when this skin shedding slows up. Worry, overwork, sickness, inactivity are reasons that cause the face to be blotchy, discolored, pimply and old looking. The thing to do, if you wish to look your prettiest at all times, is to assist nature in the process of absorption by using pure Mercolized Wax. Get an ounce at any drug store or beauty counter and use as directed. It gently but surely peels away the outer scarf skin, removing freckles, pimples, blackheads or a muddy complexion. The underneath skin, now in evidence, is clear, pink, fresh and velvety, and the entire face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty. To quickly remove wrinkles and other age lines we recommend a face lotion of unusual merit. One ounce powdered saxolite and one-half pint witch hazel.

Needlework

By Clotilde

Wee Moderns Step Along More Gayly When Latest Style Touches Are Added to Their Party and Play Frocks.

What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope if a personal reply is desired.

WHITE dotted organdy makes charming frocks for tiny maidens, and no woman who sews can help but love to do work of this kind. All you need is the plainest little dress pattern. If your pattern has no fullness at the top, extend the material straight out at a yoke depth for about three inches each side of the front and back. Then gather the lower slashed edges, stitching them to the upper slashed edges. Finish the bottom of the dress with a deep hem, and then finish the neck with a straight gathered ruffles, making it deep enough to fall over the shoulders, taking the place of short sleeves. This ruffle should have one or two rows of half inch wide Valenciennes insertion, and the same width edging, and the lace should be set on by hand. The armholes can be bound or faced.

The ruffle must be made full enough to lay properly at the lower edge. Measure around the child's shoulders about where the lower edge of the ruffle so that it will measure once and ruffl so that it will measure once and a half the number of inches at the bottom.

Printed chiffon makes charming frocks for "dress-up" occasions, and this material needs little or no trimming. Vertical tucks in clusters of three, forming a little yoke, make a pretty dress, which may be finished at the bottom with a deep hem. Two rows of half inch wide lace insertion set in across the front of the dress, following the shape of the neck, is another pretty way to trim one of these dresses.

After the neck of the dress is finished, measure down an inch and a half or two inches at close intervals, all around the neck, and baste the insertion on this line, pulling up a thread in the upper edge, so it will lie flat. The second row should be put a little lower down than the width of the insertion. The lace should first be basted, then hemmed down on both edges.

The material is cut away, allowing an eighth inch margin. Turn the raw edge back, so that the edge of the insertion on the right side is in the edge of the fold; then overhand in small, closely taken stitches, directly over and through the insertion edge and the material as well. In this overhanding the raw edge will be caught in and rolled by itself; and when straightened out the lace will look as though it were woven into the material.

Tiny puffed sleeves set into a narrow band and edged with the narrow lace will finish the dress beautifully.

BEAUTY QUERY ANSWERS

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

MRS. T. O'R.: FULLER'S EARTH, mixed to a paste with witch hazel and a few drops of benzoin, will make an effective mud pack. You may use a mud pack once a week. Mud packs stimulate lazy tissues, and also bleach the skin.

D. N.: ORDINARILY WE breathe unconsciously, but it is well to employ deep breathing exercises several times during the day. This is particularly beneficial for persons who are confined during the day. To step outside or in front of an open window and take fifteen or twenty deep breaths several times during the day helps to offset the evils of indoor living.

K. P.: FOR HANDS THAT ARE rough and red an excellent lotion will be found in the simple one of equal parts of glycerin and spirits of camphor. The glycerine softens, the camphor whitens.

A Friend in Need

By Sally Joy Brown

Have You Some Old Baby Clothes? This Expectant Mother Would Appreciate Them.

I want to be the medium through which the friends in need and the friends in deed may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

ONE of the greatest occasions of happiness in a family is the advent of a new baby and for months before its coming there is preparation on a large scale. Stitching on the finest of linens, the acquisition of beribboned bonnets and bassinets, and the utmost care and attention to the expectant mother number among the important items in this period of waiting.

Is it any wonder then that the woman, whose husband is jobless, who cannot think of her diet, but is glad to get anything at all to eat and who wonders what she'll put on the baby when it arrives, awaits the day with sorrow and misgivings? Perhaps there are other children in the family and this addition means to her just another muoth to feed, another body to be nourished and clothed.

A striking example is this letter. It is one of many which have come to me recently and the picture it brings to one's mind is not a pretty one:

"Miss Brown: I have two babies, a girl 2 and a boy 10 months old. I am going to have another baby next month and I have nothing ready for it. I wonder if one of your readers could give me their old baby clothes and some things for myself. I wear size 46 or 48, and shoes size 6½. I shall need bedding, too. My husband has had no work for eight months now and has gone away looking for something to do. I can sew and will be glad to make anything over. "Mrs. L. G."

This is a sad case and to the expectant mother it is a hopeless one, but I think it is a situation which can be remedied with your assistance. Many of you have infants' clothing which is outgrown but is still in good condition. Surely there is a layette which could be gathered from what a number of you can no longer use. Others of you may be able to supply the much needed bedding and still others the clothing which Mrs. L. G. needs for herself. Won't you let me hear from you, if you can assist in any way?

Deaf and Bedridden.

"My dear old grandfather is bedridden and stone deaf, so there is not much joy left in life for him. I wonder if one of your readers would be kind enough to teach me the game of backgammon, as a dear old lady has sent grandfather a set. If I learn to play it I can teach him. M. D."

This letter comes from a 14 year old girl, apparently devoted to her invalid grandfather. If you can teach her this game I know they'll have many pleasant hours with their new set of backgammon.

Request for Lawn Mower.

"May I ask you to bring joy to us through your column by obtaining for us a lawn mower? It would be wonderful to have a large one, but we would be pleased to have any kind. We are a young institution just starting out and our finances are low. Sister M. R.

This request comes from a sanitarium outside Chicago—a deserving institution. Buying a lawn mower at the present time would be a drain on their small fund and I am sure there must be an about-to-be-discarded one for them, somewhere.

Wants Shorthand.

"Would it be possible to reach some one through your section who would be willing to give me an hour or so of instruction in shorthand writing one or two evenings a week? Several strokes of misfortune including the loss of a position I had for years left me in a worse condition than broke. After a long period of unemployment I found a position but with small pay so that it is almost impossible to provide a living for my wife and child. I could get a better job if I knew shorthand. W. K."

If you are an experienced and capable shorthand writer, perhaps you would devote a little of your spare time to passing this knowledge along to an ambitious young father. I am sure he will accomplish much with a little instruction.

Young Cripple Needs Clothes.

"I am a young man and a cripple. I live alone in a basement room that my landlady gives to me without rent. They are kind to me and do a great many things to help me. Now I am in need of clothing and I wonder if you can get it for me. I would be most grateful to get a top coat and suit, size 38, and some shirts, size 15. "H. N."

This young cripple is unable to provide for himself so he has come to us for the few things he needs. I am sure many of you can supply him with the clothing you are about to discard.

By Meta Given

Tomatoes, Once Thought to be Poisonous, are Now One of the Most Popular Vegetables on the Market

Tomati. Pommes d'Amour. Loveapple. Tomato. Tomatto. Tomäto.

META GIVEN.

In Mexico and Peru, where tomatoes were first grown, they were called tomati. The French named the fruit brought from Peru pommes d'amour, which translated into our own language means loveapple. For a decade or so after they were first grown in the American colonies they were called loveapples. Thomas Jefferson in his notes on Virginia [1781] speaks of them as tomatoes. This latter pronunciation has been maintained ever since except with those who have adopted a foreign accent and have called them either to-mat-toes or to-mah-toes. Such are the evolutionary stages through which the name of this delicious fruit has gone. Whether there has been an improvement or retardation in that evolution will depend on your own way of thinking. As an American citizen, I'm strong for the American pronunciation—to-may-toe.

Once Thought Poisonous.

Some early Connecticut history relates that tomatoes were first grown for curiosity and that no use was made of them because the people thought they were poisonous. In fact, we have a number of memoirs as well as traditions of early American families showing people were really afraid to eat tomatoes.

When little children were caught in the act of eating the fruit they were rushed to the doctor with the fear that they had been poisoned and probably would not survive. The reason for such fear seems to have been due to the fact that many people knew the tomato plant belongs to the poisonous nightshade family. It was natural for those inexperienced and with a smattering knowledge of botany to conclude that all members of one plant family would have similar characteristics. Now that tomatoes are one of our most popular foods it is hard for us to realize that our fondness dates back less than a century when experimental eating was done in fear and trembling.

Important Commercially.

No other food of equal commercial importance has increased in use so much and in so short a time as the tomato. At first it was grown only in home gardens. While the home grown fruit was available only for a few months in the summer and fall, it was long enough for the people to discover that tomatoes were a valuable food. A need was soon felt for a year round supply. Canning, pickling, and preserving the product met the requirement to a certain extent, but did not completely satisfy. People dreamed of a time when fresh tomatoes could be had all the year around.

Specialized trucking areas and improved transportation have made that dream almost come true. Of the thirty-nine states in the Union that grow tomatoes, twenty-two are now producing them in sufficient quantities to ship in carlots. Local truck gardens also produce enormous quantities. And still there is plenty of room on the market for the greenhouse product. Greenhouses now produce a perfect fruit, which is usually the most expensive.

Attractive Qualities.

Tomatoes appeal in many ways. The color is one of the most beautiful among foods. Yellow ones are available on some markets, but the red predominates.

Besides lettuce, tomatoes are our most important salad vegetable. The flavor, texture and color seem to be particularly adapted to salad use. Served with dressing in combination with poultry, fish or meat it makes one of the most tempting and expensive salads appearing on the à la carte service of our best restaurants and hotels. The flavor of tomatoes alone is distinctive, pleasing and stimulating to most people. It is a flavor that combines well with a number of vegetables, meats and fish and a few fruits such as pineapple and orange.

In the ripe state tomatoes have found a wide use in the preparation of relishes, pickles, catsup, soups, pastas, purées, juice and canning. In an underripe state they are often sautéd as egg plant and used in numerous pickle combinations. The green tomato pie, which does not sound particularly good, is a much more delicious concoction than one would think.

Tomato Juice.

Tomato juice is now as permanent on the market as is grape juice. While the bottling and canning of the juice has been in the experimental stage for the last ten years, the many difficulties encountered in the original preparation have been overcome. Now the product is uniform in consistency, beautiful in color and palatable in flavor. The first tomato juice that appeared on the market usually separated, leaving a heavy sediment in the bottom and a clear liquid on top. Recently it has been found that a much better product can be obtained if only juice of the first extraction is used for bottling and the heavier purée used in the preparation of a sauce for baked beans.

Tomato juice bids fair to become a strong competitor of orange and grapefruit juice as an early morning bracer.

Quantities of tomatoes are converted into soups and purées in concentrated form, as well as into catsup and chili sauce. During the war much of the purée was evaporated into a paste, commonly called tomato leather.

Valuable for Vitamins.

Tomatoes are one of our richest and least expensive sources of vitamin C [the vitamin which prevents scurvy].

Preparing a salad of chilled whole tomatoes. Center: Skins of tomatoes may be easily removed if the surface is rubbed over with the back of the knife a few times. This bruises the skin, loosening it from the flesh. Care should be taken not to overdo the bruising. A little practice is all that is necessary to become skillful.

1. Vegetarian salad. The base is a thick, lengthwise or crosswise slice of lettuce (a club). On this is placed a caulifloweret, and around this is placed concentric rings of peas, beets and carrots.

2. Poinsettia salad. A whole tomato with the outside fleshy part cut and pulled back in such a way as to resemble the petals of a flower. Asparagus, cream cheese, peppers and hard cooked eggs complete the salad.

3. Dixie salad. A whole tomato scooped out and filled with corn and green peppers marinated with French dressing.

It is now given to babies in the place of orange juice to protect against scurvy. Fortunately, canned tomatoes are just about as potent in vitamin C as fresh ones.

Tomatoes are also an excellent source of vitamins A and B and are more valuable than oranges for phosphorus and iron, but not quite so rich in calcium. So, if the cost of oranges seems to be prohibitive when tomatoes are inexpensive, use tomatoes instead and have no fear of a less nutritious diet.

The tomato is one of the easiest vegetables to can. Its sterilization is not difficult because of its acid content. The color is not easily spoiled, but the texture is delicate. Overcooking causes it to lose shape, so care must be taken not to overcook if the preservation of texture and shape is desired.

Now is the time to enjoy tomatoes to the fullest extent. The following recipes will help you to serve them in some of their most attractive ways.

COLD TOMATO CATSUP.

1 peck ripe tomatoes.
1 pint vinegar.
1 tablespoon salt.
1 teaspoon fresh ground cloves.
1 teaspoon pepper.
1 teaspoon grated garlic.
1 teaspoon allspice.

Wash tomatoes and chop fine. Press through a wire sieve to remove seeds. Then put puree in a jelly bag and allow the liquid to drain off. The liquid is not used in the catsup. Thin the pulp with the vinegar. Season with salt, cloves, pepper, garlic, and allspice.

Pour into sterilized bottles and seal. This catsup retains the taste of the fresh tomatoes and is an excellent flavoring for soups and sauces. This recipe was used in the kitchen of Gen. Washington. Yield: 2 quarts.

CHILI SAUCE.

2 large green peppers.
2 onions.
2 teaspoons cinnamon.
1 tablespoon salt.
1 teaspoon celery seed.
4 tablespoons brown sugar.
1 pint cider vinegar.

Chop the tomatoes, green peppers, and onions fine. Add the other ingredients. Put into a large preserving kettle and heat to the boiling point. Simmer for 2½ hours. Pour into sterilized jars and seal. Yield: 2 pints.

BAKED STUFFED TOMATOES.

6 medium sized tomatoes.
¾ cup fresh bread crumbs.
½ cup minced mushrooms.
2 tablespoons minced ham.
1 teaspoon onion juice.
1 teaspoon minced parsley.
¼ teaspoon black pepper.
2 teaspoons butter.

Select smooth, firm tomatoes. Cut a slice from the stem end. Remove pulp carefully. Add other ingredients to pulp and fill tomato shells. Cover top with 2 tablespoons of buttered crumbs. Bake in a moderate oven [375 degrees F.] until tender, about ½ hour. Yield: 6 servings.

SAVORY FRIED TOMATOES.

3 large tomatoes.
3 teaspoons French mustard.
2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce.
1½ teaspoons sugar.
½ teaspoon salt.
1 teaspoon onion juice.
¼ teaspoon paprika.
½ cup corn meal.
12 rounds toast.

Cut tomatoes into thick slices. Rub well on both sides with a mixture made of the next six ingredients, well blended. Dip the prepared slices in corn meal and saute on both sides to a rich brown, in butter and bacon fat. Serve immediately on rounds of buttered toast.

Yield: 6 servings.

TOMATO PRESERVES.

1 pound small yellow pear tomatoes.
1 pound sugar.
2 ounces preserved Canton ginger.
2 lemons.

Wash tomatoes and cover with boiling water. Let stand until skins may be easily removed—just a minute. Skin tomatoes and place in a preserving kettle. Add sugar, cover and let stand over night. In the morning pour off the sirup and boil until thick. Skim, then add tomatoes, sliced ginger, and sliced lemon. Cook slowly until tomatoes are transparent.

Yield: 1 pint.

POINSETTA SALAD.

1 small head lettuce.
6 medium red-ripe tomatoes.
30 asparagus tips.
1 package cream cheese.
1 green pepper.
2 hard cooked egg yolks.
½ cup French dressing.

On a bed of lettuce place a whole chilled, peeled tomato. Slit through the flesh five times from top to stem end, leaving the base intact. Fold back the flesh to resemble petals. Place an asparagus tip inside the center of each petal. Pipe a little rosette of softened cream cheese at each opening between petals. Sprinkle central globular portion of tomato with chopped green peppers and yolks of eggs to resemble the pollen in flowers. Serve with French dressing.

Yield: 6 servings. One serving: Total, 258 calories: Protein, 37 calories; fat, 166 calories; carbohydrates, 55 calories.

DIXIE SALAD.

Lettuce.
6 tomatoes.
1 cup golden bantam corn.
½ red pepper.
½ green pepper.
¼ cup French dressing.
½ cup Thousand Island dressing.

On a bed of lettuce place a small tomato peeled and scooped out. Fill with corn and diced peppers which have been marinated in French dressing. Serve very cold at the table with Thousand Island dressing. Yield: 6 servings. One serving: Total, 368 calories: Protein, 16 calories; fat, 288 calories; carbohydrates, 64 calories.

VEGETARIAN SALAD.

1 large head lettuce.
2 large chilled tomatoes.
6 small carrots.
6 flowerets of cauliflower.
¾ cup cooked peas.
1 cup chopped beets.
½ cup French dressing.

On a club of lettuce place one thick slice of tomato [1-3 tomato]. Around the edge of the tomato arrange a row of carrot slices. In the center place a cooked floweret of cauliflower. Around the cauliflower arrange a row of peas and between the peas and carrots carefully arrange a row of chopped beets. Serve at once with French dressing.

Southern Style Cornbread.

1 cup cornmeal.
½ cup white flour.
2½ teaspoons baking powder.
½ teaspoon salt.
Milk or water.
1 egg.

Mix and sift dry ingredients. Add milk [or water] enough to form a paste thin enough to pour but not enough to make it a liquid mixture. Add egg, and beat well. Bake in hot oven in a pan until brown.

Glorified Rice.

1 pint of cream, whipped.
1 cup of cold cooked rice.
1 teaspoon vanilla.
1 cup of pineapple.
½ cup of sugar.
1¼ tablespoons gelatin.
½ cup of cold water.

Soak the gelatin in cold water and melt over hot water. Whip cream and add vanilla and mix with cold cooked rice. Add sugar, pour over all this the cooled gelatin. Fold together and add 1 cup of crushed pineapple drained. Set in a cool place. Stir from time to time until consistency is same throughout. Put in mold and set in a cold place.

Blackheads, Pores —how Awful!

Now don't worry over large pores, unsightly blackheads, wrinkles and perspiration that makes the skin shiny and oily. Out in Hollywood they have the recipe for an amazing lotion that quickly corrects these flaws and makes the skin beautiful. It succeeds even when the finest special soaps and creams have failed.

The very minute you pat it on the face and neck it gets down deep into the skin and cleans out the dirt that solidifies in the pores and causes blackheads. Gently it tightens up the skin, erases wrinkles and closes the pores.

Soon, very soon, this lotion makes the skin smooth, good-looking and thereafter keeps it youthfully fresh. You'll notice, too, that oiliness has disappeared and perspiration doesn't bother you any more.

Get 3 ounces of Orchard White from any druggist, mix it with the juice of 2 lemons. This gives you a full quarter-pint of the finest preparation you have ever used. Try it.

Note: In the summer this lotion keeps the skin soft, free from freckles and guards against the leathery look caused by wind and sun.

Madrid Is More Like Spain than Paris Is France

In It You Find a Cross Section of Nation.

This is the fourth of a series of articles on Spain by Jay Allen of The Tribune's foreign staff. In the series he will tell of the political and economical problems now confronting this ancient and romantic country, including the movement, which he terms "really formidable," against the king. The next will appear in an early issue.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID.—[Special Correspondence.]—From some shining pinnacle of modernity like the Telephone tower this stone shell that holds a million people seems very small.

You feel that you could almost jump past the city limits. And in truth you can walk from the center of town to open country in twenty minutes in any direction.

The plain of Castile, which Keyserling calls "African and planetary," seems unfriendly even under a pleasant sky. But under one of those sensational cloud effects of black deepening into purple and streaked with rust red that follows a dust storm it seems almost sinister.

Off to the southeast is La Mancha, the red sun baked plain where Don Quixote fought windmills and patriarchs to whom the new roads and bus lines mean nothing die without ever a glimpse of their surprising capital. Up to the north the Guadarramas, still touched over with snow, where Phillip II. turned in upon himself by defeat, had his impossible ideal of perfection forever embodied in the granite Escurial for posterity to marvel at.

New University City.

Madrid, less than any capital in Europe, seems to dominate her surroundings. In the winter when the snow and in the summer the dust swirls through the streets, people are very conscious of the proximity of the savage steppe. Madrid seems merely set down on it as she is set down on Spain.

From this height the brown side of her face toward the Manzanares seems to have no streets at all, only red brown tile roofs closely jumbled together. Out to the north and the northeast there are wide avenues and the new battlements of gaunt eight and sometimes ten story apartments pushing out into the stubborn plain. They are already out to the bull rings three of which are visible from here.

The new University City, an enormous construction spreading over the hills past the Park of the West shows up. It is in the tradition of the monster building projects of the past. Too big, educators say. And the money is being raised in a typical Spanish fashion, by huge annual lotteries under the patronage of the king whose idea it all is.

There are almost no factories to be seen while churches and convents are too numerous to count. There are six hundred monasteries and convents in Madrid the statistics show not including the hundreds of churches whose bells clang at unholy hours.

Drying Palm Leaves.

Everybody lives in apartments, except the very rich who have palaces and the very poor, hovels. There are a few sporadic experiments in duplex homes for workmen but not many. Every window, if every dwelling has a balcony, sometimes of handsome wrought iron to which are often attached drying palm leaves, left over from Palm Sunday. If they last through the year it is good luck.

Down below the traffic snarls but, knowing now that this aspect of Madrid is not to be taken too seriously, it is easier to look into her real visage and see in her, Spain.

There are palm leaves drying even on the balconies of the gleaming Palace of the Bourbons. The glare from its high cream walls in the Plaza de Armas through the arcades of which you see the distant blue mountains, is unbearable.

Guards with bayonets fixed step and wheel slowly in the sun as if sleepwalking. The hussars wear white aigrettes and red dolmans today and seem to doze. Children clamber on the cannon and nursemaids with stiff green and yellow aprons and white lace headdresses flirt with soldiers who look uncomfortable in their khaki and hold white cotton gloves stiffly in sunburned, calloused hands.

The Bourbons live in style. Napoleon told Joseph, whom the Spaniards insisted on calling "Pepe," that he had the finest palace in all Europe. It cost the equivalent of $15,000,000 back in the eighteenth century when money was worth more than it is today. Frescoes by Tiepolo. Pomp by the Bourbons. In the library 100,000 rare volumes and in the attics 3,000 of the world's most precious tapestries.

Is it possible that there is trepidation within this gleaming pile. Only last February the mob cried, "Viva the republic," in front of it.

The Flea Fair.

The palace shows up best from down by the dry Manzanares on the dusty Americas where they hold the rag or flea fair on Sundays, a great institution where you can pick up a battered birdcage, fine bits of furniture, and sometimes things you don't bargain for.

All along this slope the people mill about. Coatless, hatless except for berets sometimes. The sun is strong on the pavement but groups of blue bloused laborers are playing some lagging game. There are swarms of brown babies mostly bare from the waist down. Their mothers sit on the pavement by their doors.

From behind the white curtains that hang in the doorways of the numberless little bars come medleys of sound. Assertive talk. Mechanical pianos.

How to Save Invalid Drama from Its Doom?

Plans, Prayers for Sick Man of the Arts.

By Charles Collins.

THE DRAMA, often referred to by its practitioners as "the legitimate," as if to intimate that all other forms of entertainment given in theaters were otherwise, now languishes in the picturesque attitude of chronic and perhaps hopeless invalidism. It is the Sick Man of the Arts. It resembles that Abdul Hamid, once grand seigneur of the Turks, who was for many years the Sick Man of Europe—its distressing symptoms are often news. It is so ill, from obvious and obscure causes, that it fascinates its physicians.

During my vacation, between endeavors to swim a mile and shoot a hole in one, I would often meditate upon the condition of this patient who is partly mine, and endeavor to invent remedies for his salvation. Perhaps, I told myself, his anemia is not truly pernicious, and a wise regimen will bring back the roses to those pallid cheeks and start an enriching flow of customers toward the box offices. But the flash of inspiration never came.

I thought of the balcony and gallery seats, so often empty, and it occurred to me that they should be placed on public sale at prices which compete directly with cinema charges of admission—25 and 50 cents. But then I remembered the standard argument of theater managers whenever the subject of lower ticket prices is mentioned: "When we reduce the scale, the public thinks we have a bad show, and stays away." Into a region of such maddening economics as this no sane mind should enter; so I abandoned my happy idea about the balconies and galleries.

Playgoers of Future.

I thought of a remark made by the veteran manager, William A. Brady, before the house of representatives: "Only ten per cent of the children under fourteen years of age in the United States have ever seen a performance of the living drama." It then occurred to me that during the last ten years the stage has not been copious in its offerings of plays and musical shows fit for the entertainment of children; and that by its own flagrancies of speech, manners and themes it was failing to inoculate its customers of the future with the playgoing habit.

This condition, it seemed to me, could be corrected by conference and agreement between the business men of the theater. They need not reduce the entire institution to the level of juvenilia and moronia in imitation of the higher policies of the cinema overlords; but they could mitigate, for the sake of the parents who would like to take the kids to a real life show once in a while, their present output of sexly cynicisms and carnal curiosities.

So, I reflected, if I were appointed "czar" of the drama, at a salary equaling that of Will Hays, I would put my vassal producers on a quota: so much rough stuff, so much sweetness and light. Thus would be born a new generation of playgoers who, beginning in their sub-teens on such innocuous delights as "Peter Pan" and the lyrical pastimes of Fred Stone, would grow up to patronize the Freudian furies of new Eugene O'Neills and the voluptuous vagaries of warmer Mae Wests.

Then I heard that Miss West herself was to start off a bigger and better season at the Garrick theater in her tabooed masterpiece, "Sex," and I abandoned my dreams of czardom.

Hard to Reform.

Whatever curative measures are employed for the benefit of the Sick Man of the Arts, one thing is certain: the drama never listens to advice. It is wild, wayward, and hostile to reforms, even those that seek to improve its financial status. In an era of stand-

GOOD MORNING!

Alas, what profiteth it a man if he have good intentions and STILL loseth the girl of his heart?

I don't know, unless, maybe, he has a better time dying than he would had his intentions been bad at the time the fatal bullet meets its mark.

"Fatal bullet?" say you. "Is this ANOTHER gangster picture?"

It is. You remark you're fed up on 'em. Well, well, sure you are, BUT "Good Intentions" is really quite an interesting program number, presenting its desperadoes in, we might say, pretty boxes all tied up with ribbons.

Got up at all times in exactly what the well dressed man should wear, the marauders of this film prey upon the social élite. Churches, banks, and fashionable night clubs are their stamping grounds. Looking just like those with whom they mingle, they stroll among the unsuspecting, chatting casually and blithely and, chameleon-like, changing their color to suit their surroundings.

Thinks of Quitting Racket.

Their chief, David Cresson, is a man of wealth and social standing. When the picture opens we discover him deeply in love with a beautiful and aristocratic girl and turning over in his mind the idea of quitting his racket forever. You are to learn later that Helen Rankin really loves—well, I mustn't tell you that.

"Something wrong here!" you mutter restlessly. "Sergt. Quirt in a movie where the women aren't swooning over him?"

Even so. But don't shun the film on that account. You're always crying for something unique—different! Here you have it. Sergt. Quirt is a lamb, a sweet thing, and a martyr in this piece. A hard boiled egg, sure enough, but boiled in a new kind of way. David Cresson's English is as flawless as his manners, which are perfect, and, though he does love to plan a clever robbery, he has a kind heart and the instincts of a gentleman. His admirable traits make him the victim of confederates not thus equipped.

From hints scattered about by me you must by now have a pretty good general idea of what's doing in "Good Intentions."

Mr. Lowe's performance is consistently good and he has an able supporting cast headed by Marguerite Churchill. Regis Toomey, the young man with the corrugated brow that always makes him look so appealingly puplike, is likable and a good actor. You can't see WHY the heroine prefers him to Mr. Lowe, but—well—it's all in the story, and there's no use crying about the situation.

You Like 'Em Both.

Anyhow, you approve of Mr. Toomey and Miss Churchill. You get quite a kick out of Eddie Gribbon's impersonation of a gangster who has been done wrong to by the gentleman who is ostensibly just a palpitating orchestra leader with "it," which sometimes threatens to be "that," but who is in reality a member of Cresson's gang who yearns to wear the

OperaExcellent, Although Nary a One Is Killed

Moore Pays Tribute to "Anima Allegra."

By Edward Moore.

IN the somewhat hasty task of jotting down late in the evening certain impressions of the first performance of "Anima Allegra" at Ravinia the other night, some details were necessarily omitted. As the second performance of the work is still in the future while these words are being written, this is about as good a time as any to continue with the first.

It is easy to say that Franco Vittadini would not have written his score, at least would not have written it that way, if Puccini had not lived, and that the second act would have been entirely different if "Carmen" had not preceded it by over half a century. That is not the point. The important part is that here is a work which adds to the enjoyment of the musical world, expressly planned and executed for such intimate surroundings as are found at Ravinia, and once again making the discovery that an opera may be entertaining even though no one gets killed.

The French dramatists have a theory that "action" in drama does not consist in movement but in interest, and anything interesting may be defined as action. This would seem to apply to the second act of "Anima Allegra." The story, such as it is—it is a tenuous tale anyway—is hardly advanced at all. The scene is a gypsy camp, and acrobats, fortune tellers, dancers ply their arts. But Ruth Page puts on a flaming dance of the gypsies, one that she learned to dance and found the costume for in Spain last year. Meanwhile the music dances and sings and makes merry generally, just like the people on the stage.

Cheering Experience.

The third act has another uncommonly pleasant scherzolike section. The participants, led by Consuelo [Miss Bori], decorate the stage, representing a patio, with masses of flowers and growing plants, finally with a number of cages containing live canaries. These, aided by several artificial bird song instruments directed by human agencies, add their piping to the music; in fact, the actual canaries keep up a cheerful chirp long after the humans have retired from the score.

This is an enlargement upon the talking machine record of the single nightingale used by Respighi in the orchestral score of "The Pines of Rome." The live birds add their note of gayety to the proceedings on the stage and the auditor in the audience is enlivened with them.

You will find attendance upon "Anima Allegra" a cheering experience. The music lifts the spirits, the piece is beautifully cast, and Gennaro Papi, once again directing without score, is a superb conductor.

"Rigoletto," "Samson and Delilah," and "La Traviata" are bulletined to be added to the summer's list of attractions this week, being announced for Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday nights. Details will be found in the calendar printed elsewhere in this section.

Italian Day.

This is Italian day, with a concert by the Chicago Symphony orchestra directed by Eric DeLamarter of music from that nation, and "Aida" for the night's bill. The concert program will begin with Cherubini's overture to "The Water Carrier," which will be followed by the Sgambati symphony, opus 16. Other numbers will be the "Marcia Reale," the Italian national air, Pedrotti's "The Two Flutes," Corelli's Concerto No. 8, and the intermezzo from Wolf-Ferrari's opera "The Jewels of the Madonna."

John Weicher, violinist, will be the soloist in the group of numbers which includes the Tartini-Kreisler "Variations on a Theme by Corelli," Drigo's "Colombine," and two more Kreisler arrangements, Martini's "Preghiera" and Paganini's Twentieth Caprice. As a special feature of the afternoon the Italian royal consul general, Giuseppe Castruccio, will take the stage and make a short address.

Thursday afternoon will be a special carnival for the benefit of the young people in the audience. It is to be called "Army and Navy Day with the United States Marine Corps." Large detachments of soldiers, sailors, and marines from Fort Sheridan and Great Lakes will come and engage in a series of drills and maneuvers on the Ravinia field, and bands from both the fort and the naval station will play martial music. Children under the age of twelve will be admitted free and there will be free seats for both the children and their adult escorts.

The concert next Sunday, a week from today, will demonstrate the solo possibilities of the Chicago Symphony orchestra. There will be several ensemble numbers, but an interesting part of the program will be some twelve or fourteen of its members playing solos on their various instruments.

Leopold Auer's Death.

A brief item in the cable dispatches a few days ago carried the news of the death of Leopold Auer at the age of 85. Thus breaks a long link between our time and that of the past century, for Leopold Auer represented in himself and his disciples a good part of the history of modern violin playing.

He was a Hungarian by birth, though frequently spoken of in this country as a Russian. He was born in Beszprém, Hungary, June 7, 1845, studied, among other masters, with Joachim, played in an orchestra at Hamburg, Germany, in 1866, became imperial solo violinist and professor of violin at Petrograd two years later, in which post he remained for over forty years. He was ennobled in 1895, thereby becoming entitled to call himself Von Auer, though he never made

Belasco, at 77, Testing Out New Play

By John Chapman.

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—David Belasco, full of good will and plans for several more active seasons in the theater, has taken his company down to Atlantic City for a tryout of "Dancing Partner," and for celebration of his seventy-seventh birthday. [There arises each year a difference of opinion over the Belasco age, and "the governor" himself called last year's the seventy-fifth; but that was just a nice round number that the newspaper boys could remember easily, and Burns Mantle's very thorough "American Playwrights of Today" makes him seventy-seven.]

More surely than robins herald the spring time, the presence of a Belasco troupe in Atlantic City twitters the approach of a new theatrical season. It was on Aug. 6 last year that Belasco opened "It's a Wiz Child" on Broadway, officially opening the season. William A. Brady tried to beat him to it by twenty-four hours with a whatnot about drink guzzling college girls, but the whatnot lasted only a week or two and did not count. And on Aug. 5 of this year the new Belasco comedy opens at its producer's New York playhouse.

Those producers who have been persuaded to talk are all of a mind. The season, they say, is going to be a good one. They aren't talking about the magnificent plans that will be produced, for that kind of "good" pays for no Florida vacation; they mean that the wayward public is going to show a revived and profitable interest in attractions of flesh and blood.

Cite Their Own Experience.

Some of them content themselves with saying that the novelty of the talkies has worn off. Others put it in a different way, and say that the customers have learned that not every talkie, nor even every talkie-singie, nor yet even every talkie-singie-dancie, is a good show. Broadway has a hard enough time getting a handful of good stage attractions out of the 2,000-odd gambles it makes each season; how, then, say the hopeful legitimate producers, can the films hope to strike a higher average? And with both sides of the amusement game on a deliver-the-goods basis the legitimate is confident of holding its own.

Whether or not the season will be successful, it bids fair to be interesting. There is, for one thing, the League of New York Theaters and its on-the-level attempt to keep tickets out of the hands of scalpers. For years managers have said something should be done about scalping, and for years they have fought each other so hard nothing ever was done. Now that a real plan has been launched, the result, be it success or failure, will lend distinction to the season.

Then, too, some new firms have announced plans of more than ordinary interest, and an experiment or two is to be tried. It is yet too early for the first-string producers to have made complete announcements of their plans; but some have lined up imposing enterprises for the first few months, and the known list of productions scheduled between now and December totals more than ninety. Some of these will never appear, if history is any criterion; but, on the other hand, many more will.

Guild Is All Set.

The Theater Guild, a very methodical organization, can already name dates and places. It starts its New York season with approximately the same number of subscribers as it had last season, and hopes of having a 40 per cent increase in subscriptions in its various road cities.

Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne will open the season at the Guild theater Oct. 13 in Maxwell Anderson's play about Queen Elizabeth and Lord Essex, "Elizabeth the Queen." Two weeks later, at another playhouse, it will present a drama by Lynn Riggs, entitled "Green Grow the Lilacs." Something like Edna Ferber's "Cimarron," it deals with the land rush in Oklahoma. Just to make sure everything is right the Guild has had one of its directors—a gentleman named

Opera Manager Urges Amateurs to Stay at Home

Europe Full of Aspirants with Little Talent.

THIS is the seventh in a series of letters written by Herbert M. Johnson, business manager of the Chicago Civic opera, during his tour of musical Europe this summer. He was in Milan when this letter was written.

Our visit in Milan is ended and we are leaving for southern France. We heard a few interesting voices here and, I believe, more than the usual number of young American aspirants. There are so many really pathetic cases. I do not understand why these young people feel they must rush over here to study just as soon as some well meaning, kindly friend tells them they have a "voice." Why can they not save many heartaches and disappointments by securing the frank opinion of several competent, unbiased persons who know?

We had a case a few days ago of a young girl who has been studying here and in France for two years, enabled to do so by the sacrifices of friends and relatives who could ill afford the outlay. Some one had heard her in a small room, told her she had a voice and advised her to go to Europe. Her friends rallied to her support and she hurriedly made ready and came over. Well, she sang for us — five of us, all with some knowledge of operatic requirements. We agreed unanimously that she had absolutely no qualifications, even for concert work, to say nothing of opera. She could not believe we were right at first, but I think she has now resolved to give up and go home.

I mention only this one case. There are many similar. Living is high everywhere in Europe and it is becoming more and more difficult for these youngsters. What will become of them is a problem. Reputable teachers often will not take them, giving the excuse that their classes are full, and they fall into the hands of vocal quacks. If I may be permitted to give advice out of my experience in hearing young Americans abroad, it would be this: First, be sure, on the word of a qualified expert, that you have the qualifications for a professional career.

I might point out in this connection that the Civic Opera European scholarships are presented only to students who not only have undoubted qualifications for opera, but who have finished their preliminary vocal training and are ready for post-graduate work, coaching in operatic rôles and foreign languages, and for their debuts in regularly advertised operatic performances.

Angelo Scandiani Dies.

Here in Milan every one is interested in the selection of a successor to Angelo Scandiani at La Scala. Signor Scandiani, who succumbed to a heart attack recently, had done much to reconstruct the finances of La Scala, and his passing removes from the operatic field a man not only beloved by his associates and friends but respected as one of the geniuses of operatic management. Signor Scandiani was a great friend of the Chicago Civic Opera company. It will not be easy to find his successor.

Signor Scandiani was educated as an electrical engineer. Shortly after his graduation, it was discovered that he had a voice and he studied for the operatic stage. His career as a baritone brought him into contact with La Scala and hitherto undiscovered talents on the business side led to his employment in the administration of the theater long before his active career as a singer was ended, and eventually brought him the appointment of general director. He was 58 years of age.

Richard Bonelli was here for several days, and left for a tour of Germany in his new car which he brought over with him from the United States. Mrs. Bonelli, who has been studying in Milan, accompanies him.

Italy Improves Roads.

Italy is doing a great amount of public work and the roads are really fine. We enjoyed touring immensely. The new Via Moderno from Milan to Naples is an excellent road, as is the Via Emilia from Bologna to Rimini, and many others.

Here in Milan many new buildings are in process of construction. Old quarters are being razed and sanitary regulations enforced. No longer is milk delivered in the old tin cans. The law requires that all milk be sterilized and delivered in bottles bearing a seal and date. The law is strictly enforced.

Milan has ambitious plans for beautifying the city and work is well under way.

Our mail bag brings the information that the first orchestral concert to be given in the Vatican in twenty years was performed recently when Bernardino Molinari, conductor of the Augusteo orchestra, directed the "Oratorio Vespertina" in the presence of Pope Pius XI. The full Augusteo orchestra was employed, and Laura Pasini was soloist, assisted by a large chorus. The pope's satisfaction and thanks were transmitted to the performance through Conte di San Martino, president of the Academy of Saint Cecelia.

Son Born to Kleibers.

From Berlin we learn that a son has been born to Frau Erich Kleiber. Mr. Kleiber is general director of the Berlin State opera, and Mrs. Kleiber is the former Ruth Goodrich of Los Angeles. Mr. Kleiber is engaged to conduct the New York Philharmonic for six weeks next season.

The same mail brings word that the Kroll theater will remain closed for the season of 1931-'32, and that the opera's obligations will be assumed by the Municipal, with the Prussian state paying the deficit. The closing of the theater will net the Prussian government a saving of nearly $200,000, which will help to alleviate difficult conditions in Prussion state theaters of other cities.

From Buenos Aires come reports of Tito Schipa's triumphs at the Colon. Mr. Schipa made his first appearance there on June 19 in "The Elixir of Love," and before his season closes will have sung twenty performances at the Colon and ten at the Municipal opera in Santiago di Chile. These will keep him busy in South America until the end of September, after which he sails for the United States to rejoin the Chicago Civic Opera company for the season in Chicago and the tour.

THE ART OF SONG

ELISABETH RETHBERG.
[de Gueldre Photo.]

SHE is a notable of the operatic and concert stage, appearing this summer at Ravinia, where she has been for several summers past. Classifying as a dramatic soprano, her voice never fails to attract attention for its purity, power, and lovely quality. During the week to come she is billed for two performances, "Aida" tonight and "Il Trovatore" on Friday night.

Finds Opera May Entertain Even Though No One Is Killed

By Edward Moore.

In 1911 he went to Dresden, returning to Russia in 1914 and leaving there in 1917. The next year he came to America financially ruined, but started in teaching again, and during his final years appeared to be in comfortable, if moderate, circumstances. For a number of summers he came to Chicago to head the master classes of the Chicago Musical college and to give private lessons.

He was famous through the achievements of his pupils. It is a number of years since Mischa Elman began touring, to astonish the world of music with his golden tone and his marvels of technical brilliancy. Then came Efrem Zimbalist, Toscha Seidel, Jascha Heifetz, Kathleen Parlow, Francis Macmillen, a host of others, all with a tone that a generation before had been undreamed of. In fact the Auer tone has become almost a necessity in these days.

His Gift to Music.

Once he gave a recital in Chicago, and there the secret of his pupils' tone was discovered. He had it himself. Age had robbed his fingers of some of their former suppleness, but a sustained, lyric passage unfailingly pointed out that the beauty of the tone came from himself, to be handed on to the younger brood. This was his gift to the world, and it was a great one.

They say that he declined the first performance of the famous Tschaikowsky concerto for violin, already dedicated to him, on the ground of its difficulty. The story is a bit difficult to believe, particularly as every concert violinist, and especially the Auer pupils, are in the habit of sweeping their audiences with the piece. It is quite possible, however, that the work was later recast to make it, as the soloists say, more violinistic.

During his life in America he wrote two books. In 1921 he published, "Violin Playing as I Teach It," and three years later his autobiography. These and his pupils are the holders of the Auer traditions, and there is a plain duty that they be continued. For Leopold Auer was almost to the violin what Franz Liszt, another Hungarian, was to the piano.

Afternoon recitals at the Cinema Art theater will take place on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons, both at 5 o'clock. Michel Wilomirski will give a violin recital on Tuesday of works of Pugnani-Kreisler, Gluck, Bach, Szymanowski, and Saint-Saëns. Andre Skalski will appear at the piano on Thursday in a program of Bach, Scarlatti, Chopin, Scriabin, and Liszt.

Walter Olitzki, baritone, a nephew of the well known Chicago contralto, Rose Olitzka, has been appearing in the operatic festivals at the State Opera of Berlin. He took the part of Alberich in Wagner's "Siegfried" in the same cast with Laurent Melchoir of the New York Metropolitan and Frida Leider of the Chicago Civic Opera companies. Later he sang the first baritone rôle in "La Forza del Destino."

At the organ recital and vesper service at the Fourth Presbyterian church this afternoon Anna Burmeister, soprano, will sing a new setting of "The Lord Is My Shepherd," by Robert Sanders, Chicagoan, who has recently returned from his Prix de Rome studies at the American academy in that city.

Jan Chiapusso, pianist, will give a recital at the Bush conservatory on Tuesday evening. The program will include the Beethoven sonata, opus 27, two arrangements by Mr. Chiapusso of works by Couperin, and other compositions by Rameau, Scarlatti, Chopin, Arensky, MacDowell, and Liszt.

Some reflections by Charles N. Drake on how the American public looks at American musicians:

"If all the program committees in America were asked to choose between two unknown pianists, George Jackson and Gregor Jachnovitch, as an artist to engage for a recital, it is a foregone conclusion that Gregor Jachnovitch would receive 98 per cent of the votes. Mr. Jackson would be left completely in the shade for the simple reason that his name was Jackson. This is not a vague assumption; it is a positive musical condition in our country, bred of an inferiority complex in matters of art over a period of many long years. It is a remnant of the days when American musicians returning from study abroad found it necessary to change their names from Jackson to Jachnovitch and discovered that bushy hair made a profound impression.

"We progress slowly in spite of our widely heralded artistic emancipation. Long haired pianists are somewhat out of date, but we are still hypnotized by strange sounding names and this hypnotic power works because we do not know enough about music to intelligently appraise it. Years of European propaganda and a certain supercilious attitude on the part of foreign musicians have succeeded in making musical cowards of us. We know our automobiles are the equal of any; we are proud of our skyscrapers, railroads, aeronauts, scientists and bankers, but we're afraid to acknowledge our musicians.

"An inhibition keeps us in doubt. We cannot convince ourselves that a man born in Alabama could ever possibly play the piano as well as one born in Bavaria, although we have to admit that American paintings hang in European galleries and American authors are in the world's libraries! We talk a great deal of our musical advancement and we spend more money than all the world combined in importing performers, but we still apologize for our own."

Elizabeth Hamilton Duggan, soprano, and David Duggan, tenor, both former Chicagoans, will give a joint costume recital at the Hotels Windermere this evening. Mrs. Duggan will appear in old English and Spanish groups, Mr. Duggan in a Scotch group. At the close there will be a group of duets.

All Sorts of New Shows Are in Rehearsal

NEW YORK, July 26.—[Special.]—Among the shows about to go in rehearsal in this town is "The Up and Up," an underworld comedy by Martha Madison and Eva Kay Flint. Work on it will begin in another week under the direction of Howard Lindsay, and it will open at the Broad Street theater, Philadelphia, Aug. 25 for a two weeks' engagement before coming to New York. The cast includes Dorothy Stickney, the dossier of whose excellent performances includes the underworld drab in "The Front Page"; Donald MacDonald, Pat O'Brien, William Foran, and Henry Sherwood. The last two may be remembered for their contributions to "Broadway."

After launching this play its producers, E. A. Blatt and M. J. Nicholas, will turn their attention to the revue announced by Mr. Blatt some time ago as "The New Yorker." [E. Ray Goetz is planning another musical show to be called "The New Yorkers," but that virtual duplication of titles will doubtless be straightened out in due time.] Anyway, the Nicholas-Blatt enterprise will contain music by Muriel Pollock, dances arranged by Harold Hecht, and sketches by Rian James, who labors in the fertile fields of Brooklyn journalism.

These producers also have a third production for the new season. It is a play by David Leibowitz, and it is described by Mr. Blatt as "an American tragedy."

In another fortnight or so Marty Forkins, a showman known in vaudeville, will start preparations upon a Negro musical show which may or may not prove a competitor of Mr. Leslie's forthcoming "Black Birds." At all events Bill Robinson and Adelaide Hall, who were important to the first "Black Birds," will be co-starred in the cast of Mr. Forkins' new one.

Brutal is the mildest adjective to characterize the telling effects of last week's heat upon the handful of theaters now operating. Nearly all the house managers, however, had more elaborate and picturesque ways of describing the weather. . . . Having launched "Reunion," which ended its tryout engagement in Asbury Park last night, Bela Blau and his associates will soon be turning their various attentions to "Overture, 1920," the posthumous William Bolitho play which Marc Connelly will direct and in which Colin Clive will appear. Mr. Blau, so the tale goes, received some revised portions of the play just two days before its author's tragic death.

Whatever happens to the "Vanities" in the courts, Mr. Carroll is going right ahead with the erection of his new theater on the site of his old—well, fairly old—one. It will seat about 3,000 persons, contain all sorts of innovations, including the presentation of big musical shows at a $3 top price, and the contractors have promised that it will be ready to open in April or May. Mr. Carroll is planning a second edition of "Sketch Book" as the inaugural attraction.

Meanwhile, just to keep his hand in the business, Mr. Carroll has notions of bringing forth in the fall an intimate revue called "Personalities." For this he hopes to snare eight or ten well known players and employ only a small chorus. They draw fine distinctions in the musical show field, and it is Mr. Carroll's idea that "Personalities" shall be "a genuine entertainment without distracting girl divertissements." The "Vanities" series will be maintained to represent the pretentious, costly, and elaborate school of production—the adjectives are all from the Carroll office—while "Sketch Book" will continue to typify the merely elaborate and ornate without, you understand, being quite as pretentious as "Vanities."

The Theater Guild is seriously considering a play by Dawn Powell, who has come into attention with a novel or two. The name of the play is "The Party" and it is described as a "hard boiled comedy dealing with the advertising business." . . . Mention of the Guild brings up the fact that Theresa Helburn, its executive director, will return from abroad about Aug. 5. She is bringing three plays with her.

Jed Harris disappeared into the wilds of Maine for a week or so, and affairs in his office consequently are more or less at a standstill. It now seems likely that his first undertaking will, after all, be "Mr. Gilhooley," with "The Inspector General" coming later. And there were reports last week that the fortnight's return engagement of his "Uncle Vanya" production would be placed at the National theater.

"Dr. Rex," a play of which the man who wrote "Stepping Sisters"—Howard Warren Comstock the name is—is co-author, will be tried out on Wednesday evening by the group down in Southampton as the third new production of the season. . . . Harry D. Kline, general manager of the Chanin interests, is expected home from Europe some time during the coming week.

The Gensler-Green musical show for Joe Cook is now scheduled to open at the Colonial theater, Boston, around Labor day and to arrive here in late September. . . . Two young actors who bear names not uncelebrated in the theater are in the cast of "The Ninth Guest," which the Woods office has in preparation. They are Owen Davis Jr. and Wilton Lackaye Jr. . . . Among the manuscripts in which the Erlanger people are evincing interest these days is the libretto of a musical comedy by Harlan Thompson and Edward Hope.

Kenyon Nicholson's play, "Torch Song," in production by Arthur Hopkins, promises to be the principal new show in the seashore tryout places this week. With Joanna Roos heading the cast, "Torch Song" will tarry for a week in Atlantic City and then move on to Asbury Park. The new Madge Kennedy farce, which Long Beach and Great Neck have just seen, will be the week's bill at Asbury Park, while Mr. Belasco's "Dancing Partners" will hold the stage at Brighton.

Michael Mindlin, godfather to the little cinema movement, will, it is reported, place in rehearsal in two weeks or so a play by Robert Wilder which deals with Marcus Garvey. [Another play about Garvey was announced not so long ago, but it seems to have disappeared.] "Empire, Inc.," is the title of the Wilder work, and it will require a cast of more than 75, all but two of whom will be Negroes. The piece, scheduled to open here about Labor day, is said to be so ambitious scenically that it will not be taken on a preliminary tour.

To hear one returned producer tell it, most of Hollywood is preparing to rush eastward during the coming season and produce shows on Broadway. Which, even if half true, promises a condition somewhat in contrast to the marked theatrical dullness of the last few weeks.

Over at the Woods office they are still continuing their search for leading players for Mr. Stallings' dramatization of "A Farewell to Arms," and recently the names of Edna Best and Herbert Marshall came into the discussion as two who would be ideal. Miss Best and Mr. Marshall—or Mr. and Mrs. Marshall, if you will—are at present appearing in the London production of "The Swan," but they seem interested in the prospect of another American visit. Last week efforts were being made to locate Gilbert Miller at Carlsbad in order to find out about "The Swan's" prospective length of continuance. If there is a chance that Miss Best and Mr. Marshall will be free to come here at a reasonably early date Mr. Woods will gladly defer preparations for the Stallings-Hemingway play.

George W. Lederer will soon return to the ranks of musical show production, in which he was active for so many years. A week from tomorrow he will put in rehearsal an intimate musical comedy based on a German play called "The Phantom Ship," which was tried out several seasons ago by Sam H. Harris and Albert Lewis but never came to New York. The libretto will be the work of Mr. Lederer and Harry B. and Robert B. Smith, and the tunes and accompanying words will be the composition of Phil Charig and Richard Meyers.

Mr. Lederer says that, in accordance with his old policy, the cast will contain few names of the sort known to the trade as "big." Under the title of "The Night Owl"—or just possibly, "S. O. S."—the show will open in Chicago. It hopes to play there at least four weeks before coming east.

FOR DRAMATIC LEAGUE

JUDITH ANDERSON.

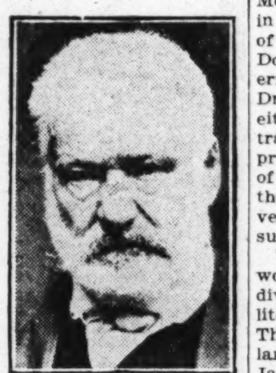
SHE played the character of Nina Leeds in "Strange Interlude" for the Theater Guild last season. She has acted, vividly and with strong emotional effect, in "Cobra," "The Dove" and (can you remember that far back?) "Peter Weston." She will be seen next fall in a new play by the erudite and sometimes puzzling Italian dramatist, Luigi Pirandello, called "As You Wish Me," under the sponsorship of the Dramatic League of Chicago.

THE ARMCHAIR PLAYGOER

By Fanny Butcher.

AT RAVINIA.

On Monday evening "Louise" is being sung again. Although Charpentier did not take the text from any book—he wrote it himself, the way Wagner did—the plot of the play and its atmosphere is so typically Montmartian that it is a distillation of countless romances of that romantic spot. It is the essence of that one phase of Paris.



VICTOR HUGO.

The rivalry between the two Bohemian centers of Paris is amusing. Montmartre and Montparnasse are like warring nations. The last words in the famous diary of Kiki, the model, which was published last year in French and is just being published in an English translation by Sam Putnam, are about Montmartre and Montparnasse. "Some evenings," she wrote, "I must say they tried to turn me from the path of duty and take me to Montmartre, but I refused to be a deserter." The queen of Montparnasse, Kiki has been called for ten years.

If you think that "Rigoletto," which is being sung on Tuesday evening, is so much like the gaudinesses of grand opera that it was a plot conceived for no other purpose, you must never look into the complete works of Victor Hugo, for there you will find a play called "Le Roi S'Amuse" [The King Amuses Himself]. It was produced in 1832 and would undoubtedly have been a failure if it had not been banned by the censor on the second night. Like many plays and books which followed it, to the present day, banning made it immediately popular. Twenty-nine years later Verdi put it to music, with a text adapted by Piave, and it has been one of the old standbys in opera ever since.

"Samson and Delilah," which is being sung on Wednesday evening, is, of course, the Bible narrative of the strong man. It reminds us of the inestimably fine work Richard Greene Moulton did in reprinting the Bible in its literary forms. Read the story of Samson and Delilah in his version. Do not be put off the Moulton "Modern Reader's Bible" by the idea that Dr. Moulton took any liberties with either the text or the fine King James translation. What he did was to reprint the exact words of that version of the Bible in the literary form which they naturally take, the Psalms as verse, for instance, the narratives as such, the idyls, the dramas as such.

You have no idea until you see the words without their arbitrary verse divisions how much more beautiful as literature they seem upon first glance. There is no greater literature in any language than there is in the King James version of the Holy Bible. Even H. L. Mencken in his "Treatise on the Gods" says so. A stimulating book, that, by the way, whether it stimulates you to ardent agreement or passionate disagreement.

"La Traviata" which is being sung on Thursday evening is the musical version of one of the most famous of all plays and one of the most popular of novels. Dumas the younger, left at the age of 24 with 50,000 francs of debts and a pen for his assets, turned out a novel to which he gave the name "La Dame aux Camelias." It was a success in 1848 when it was published. In 1852 it was dramatized and it later became, as "Camille," one of the greatest of all the vehicles for Sarah Bernhardt.

Only a year after its dramatization Verdi made it into an opera. The premiere of the opera was a terrible flop, but history says circumstances were responsible, not the opera itself. The tenor had a cold, the baritone, because his part was a subordinate one, stalked over the stage, and the soprano was ludicrously well padded for a lady dying with tuberculosis. Time has proved the falseness of that first frigid reception.

How to Save Invalid Drama from Its Doom?

Plans, Prayers for Sick Man of the Arts.

By Charles Collins.

It clings grimly to tradition. At a time when salesmanship is supposed to be a science, it still practises a medieval custom: it places a nervous young man in solitary confinement, behind bars in a narrow cell, and expects him to sell one thousand items (tickets) a day through his little window.

It groans over the decay of "the road," a term by which it describes any city other than New York. It knows that the playgoing taste of "the road," taken by and large, represents the sentimental spirit of the average home loving American, but it continues to manufacture its product to suit the viewpoint of Broadway, the national festering point of low grade cynicisms.

It clings to outmoded forms of advertising called "showmanship," which are founded on the theory that Barnum was right.

It inherits its economics from the gypsy's booth and its ethics from the swamp root vendor's cart.

Nevertheless, this Sick Man of the Arts, this incorrigible patient, will survive. The weaknesses of the stage are perhaps its secret strength, giving it, in a mechanized world, the lure of an old romance. If the drama should die it would be necessary [Voltaire said something like this about the existence of God] for the major cities of the nation to invent it all over again.

A Prayer to Hoover.

The saviors of the drama are numerous in this summer of its lowest ebb; they are springing up all over the map like prophets in ancient Palestine. Their sincerity is admirable even if their ideas, like mine, may be preposterous. Among them is the membership of the Theatrical Press Representatives association, which recently decided to address a prayer for salvation to the First Magistrate.

There was a convention of governors of the commonwealths at Salt Lake City, and President Hoover was to address them by radio. So the organized press agents through their president, Wallace Munro, besought the White House for a kind word over the air about the theater. Their message to President Hoover is worth quoting:

"Our unique association, the Theatrical Press Representatives of America, constituting the sales organization of the legitimate theater, has appealed to the governors at Salt Lake City, while they consider ways and means for the revival of general business, not to ignore the deplorable condition of the legitimate theater.

"Decline of the theater with its cultural and educational influence and consequent unemployment problem of over ten thousand idle actors and many time ten thousand musicians, authors, composers, and people in affiliated activities of the stage, threatens utter extinction on the road of an art that stimulated imagination, culture, and happiness of people since olden days.

"We have asked the governors to cooperate by proclamation to all civic bodies in their various states, and a kindly word for better drama and music and a more wholesome theater, if mentioned in the President's radio voice and address to the governors, will go far to stimulate and restore the American theater.

"Any nation that forgets to laugh and sing and play at its labors will lose efficiency and ultimately succumb. The governors can help both public and press to become prosperity-minded, and we believe the legitimate theater is entitled to its share of prosperity with the factory and the farm."

Here, then, is striking proof that the Sick Man of the Arts is in mortal danger.

His press agents are praying for him.

A Letter of Correction

To the Dramatic Editor:

THE statement released to you by the Art institute [and published in your column] wherein I was alleged to demand a higher salary before agreeing to act under the new Goodman régime is untrue, and I would appreciate its correction.

My plans for next fall do not include acting with the new Goodman company, however much salary they offer me. I have made this clear to Mr. Osborne several times and have also refused Mr. Harshe's proposal of an "attractive offer" to handle the subscription campaign. I am a member of the resigned Goodman group, which represents a complete producing and operating organization with an unimpeachable five year record and which group I choose to regard as Chicago's Repertory company, irrespective of whom may be in temporary favor with the Art institute trustees.

In time the public will realize that the control invested in the institute over the Goodman is essentially unsound, impractical and uneconomical.

The deficits, which were admittedly the sole cause of the recent fracture, should be laid, I feel, not to Thomas Wood Stevens, but to the functional sterility inherent in the management of a theater by museum trustees.

Mr. Charles Fabens Kelly, assistant director of the institute, who is responsible for the statement about my "holding out," was apparently misinformed by Mr. Osborne.

ROMAN BOHNEN.

B'way Openings

New York, July 26.—[Special.]—The schedule for the new stage week contains only this première:

"Ladies All"—Tomorrow night at the Morosco theater. Credit for breaking the long period of midsummer dullness on Broadway is due the Shuberts, who will here offer the Elmer Harris version of a comedy by Prince Bibesco, which has just completed the rounds of the tryout places. Although Walter Woolf, the singing actor, is co-starred with Violet Heming in it, "Ladies All" is not a musical show. Others in the cast are May Collins, Germaine Giroux, and Preston Foster.

"Technique" was announced, but postponed.

Belasco Now Testing Out His New Play

Atlantic City First to See "Dancing Partner."

...liberman, who is an authority on Russian drama—spend his summer absorbing atmosphere in the open spaces of the west.

Then will come a production of "Much Ado About Nothing" directed by Robert Edmond Jones. The Lunts will be in this one, too, the idea being to establish a repertory of two attractions to be played on alternate weeks or fortnights. The Guild had ambitions to do the same thing last year with "The Game of Love and Death" and "Karl and Anna," but neither gave promise of lasting long enough—and, in fact, both became so confused in the mind of Robert Benchley that he called them "The Game of Karl and Anna."

The Guild's early road showings include "A Month in the Country" and "The Apple Cart," the first being Russian and having Nazimova in the cast and the second being Shaw and having lovely Simonson sets.

"Garrick Gaieties" to Tour.

Also to be sent on the road is "The Garrick Gaieties," September being the time and Philadelphia the place for the start. And here the road cities have an advantage over New York; for the best numbers from all three editions of the "Gaieties" will be included. The current frolic has its high spots, but the first two editions, which brought to light the song writing team of Rodgers and Hart, had more and higher. None of the recitatives now indulged in by the expressive Edith Meiser can approach her "Even a Queen Has Her Moments," from the second "Gaities." It is odd enough to note here that the hit number from the current revue, a gratifying bit of kidding of our ex-Police Commissioner, Grover Aloysius Whalen, will not be toured. The Guild is understood to figure that other cities don't know who Whalen is, or if they do, don't care.

The Shuberts, fortified with their own subscription groups in key cities, have a formidable campaign to launch. Much of the news of what they are going to do comes from Chicago and other cities, because many plays will be launched on the road before they are brought into the Broadway port. More than ever, the Shubert list bears the label "Imported." Imported dramas, imported actors, and even imported directors.

The Erlanger offices, although still in an uncertain frame of mind because of lawsuits involving the estate of the late A. L. Erlanger, have already started on an ambitious program, with Erlanger money backing several young producers. The firm is reported to have a third interest in "Vanities," and casting has already started for a revue which will feature Fred Allen, Clifton Webb and Libby Holman, the three stars of the first "Little Show." Another Erlanger backed venture will be a new music show for that rare comedian, Joe Cook.

A. H. Woods Has Big List.

A. H. Woods, who suffered a disastrous season last year and consoled himself by becoming president of a corporation that manufactures and leases automatic picture taking machines, again has a long list of manuscripts upon which to draw. Some are left over from last season, for Woods quit after five flops. Among the new ones and the first to go into rehearsal is an Owen Davis drama, "The Ninth Guest." And awaiting a suitable cast is Laurence Stallings' dramatization of Ernest Hemingway's "A Farewell to Arms"—a job which Stallings is reported to have accomplished in three days and with the addition to the novel of but ten lines of Stallings dialogue.

One of the more interesting features of the season is likely to be Chester Erskin's program for Charles Frohman, Inc. This 26 year old director has a consuming enthusiasm for the theater and very definite notions of what he wants to do. Having attained important stature with his direction of "The Last Mile," he is understood to have been engaged by the Frohman offices with the understanding that he is to have a necessary hand.

It is Erskin's notion that plays should be tailor made. Usually, he points out, an author sells a play to a producer, and the producer or his director wants changes made—changes to fit personal tastes and to fit the cast engaged. So, says Erskin, why not have director and author collaborate from the beginning? He has been working with four or five playwrights since last May and much interest will follow his first production.

English Sculptress to Live in Home on Sahara Desert

LONDON.—(AP)—Mrs. Clare Sheridan, England's foremost woman sculptor, is off to Algeria to live on the edge of the Sahara desert.

An Arab stone mason has been building a home for her at Biskra for three years and now she is going there to try it out. She is a cousin of Winston Churchill and has lived in Biskra much of the time since her husband was killed in the war.

Frankly she is looking for adventure and stimulation for her work. She is philosophical about it, too.

"One may hunt far afield for it and not find it," she said. "One may find it at home without looking for it. I searched for it in Russia, in Turkey, in Mexico, in the Sahara. Wherever there was trouble I hurried to the spot. Again and again I thought I was in it, felt it boiling around me, felt thrills, fear and the necessity of caution.

"But the best thrill, interwoven with mystery, happened quite unexpectedly when I went to stay in an Irish country house on the border of the Free State and Ulster during the Irish troubles. The very air was vibrant there."

Little Heavy Drinking.

In the colored tile interior of one of these it is cool and the wine in florid porcelain casks and old skins trussed up by the legs gives a dank, cool smell. Mostly laborers here, and the drink seems to be the ordinary red wine of Valdepenas which costs 15 centimos [two cents] the glass and has a rusty taste. It is said to be antiseptic, and certainly after those shrimps which peddlers have dragged around town in the sun all day it sears the palate agreeably.

There is not much concentrated drinking. There never is in Spain. Alcoholism doesn't exist as a problem. The very word prohibition would unloose tumult. Doctors think it good that people drink wine in parts of Spain where the water is terrible. Not so in Madrid, where the water piped from the Lozoya in the mountains not only makes fine beer but can be drunk with relish and safety.

A husky mule driver is taking his liquor with a stick of spun sugar in it. Others are drinking coffee and chocolate. The so-called vinos generosos of the south, sherry and its first cousin Manzanilla, cost too much, five or six cents the glass.

There is passionate conversation. Two bronzed young fellows in salmon shirts who look like Arabs although they are speaking good Castilian, shout at each other. Their "conversation" unraveled seems to consist of several threads, the absurd pretentions of the fat Lolita, the unspeakableness of the bulls Sunday in the popular priced ring at Tetuan, and the shameful defeat of the Spanish futbol team at Prague.

A One Man Band.

There is almost no talk about generalities. And with a foreigner never, until they have found out just who and what he is. One man who wears a necktie, the only one, produces a copy of "Rebellion," a hair-raising sheet produced by left wing Socialists and proves to the crowd in general that a bourgeois republic would be a calamity. They listen but seem to reserve their opinions. Why take another's when you have your own?

The wheezy strains of the "Marseillaise" are heard outside and what should have been a very haphazard band turns out to be a mangey old gentleman with an accordeon and on his back a drum, bells, an cymbals which he plays with strings attached to his heels and elbows. He gets coppers from windows for his performance, but now he wants a drink.

Although the "Marseillaise" is considered in Spain as the hymn of republicanism, it seems to have an exciting effect for other obscure reasons. So everybody breaks into song and pounds tables. Except the fellow with the necktie, who gets suddenly mad and begins to hurl insults at bourgeois republicans, whom he assumes for no reason at all are present. The band which seems to be not quite right in the head enjoys it all and plays madly while the uproar, very friendly and purposeless, grows notable even for a Madrid bar.

Outside a clatter of hooves. The curtain is pulled back and in the square of light are two guardia civiles on horseback, rifle on one side of the saddle, sabre on the other. They merely glower in but the noise subsides with suddenness and everybody starts doing something else.

The Guardia Civiles.

The hand of authority is heavy on turbulent Spain. These 30,000 guardia civiles and their helmeted companions of the seguridad are respected if fear is respect. Their appearance always dampens those sudden inexplicable flareups of excitement that occur when two or three dozen Spaniards get together in the street. They are glumfaced and are not open to persuasion. People know that when there is any sign of real trouble they are apt to be careless with their sabres and rifles.

Ordinarily they just prowl about and look sad. They don't bother bums on benches or waifs who sleep on the sidewalks. Morals are out of their line. In fact, outside of a campaign against blasphemy, there seems to be no organized attempt made outside the church to keep people in the straight and narrow. There are nearly 150 brothels in Madrid and 6,000 girls, of whom 3,000 are registered, ply their trade. These things are not talked about and nobody goes out of his way to worry about them, must less the police.

"Where else would you find a country where people laugh and shout in the streets at 3 in the morning without hindrance?" the king not long ago asked an interviewer.

For all the deep passion of this race there is comparatively little crime. Punishment, if not swift, is certain. Murderers are strangled by the garrote. Why this should seem more sinister than the noose or the chair is not clear. Homicides total about 2,000 a year, but being mostly of a passional nature take place in the intimacy of the home, not on public thoroughfares. Streets are safe at all hours. When Spain is calm she is very, very calm. When she is upset about anything it can be terrible. Witness Barcelona in 1909.

The Chamber of Deputies.

It is from the red brick and granite ministry of the gobernacion [interior] in the Puerta del Sol that order is dispensed. On the walls, oddly enough, is a plaque to the populace of Madrid that rose on the bloody Dos de Mayo against the authority of the troops of Napoleon. In the old days of constitutional felicity they used to "make" the elections from here.

"What assurance have we that they want 'make' them again if and when they are called?" ask the enemies of the monarchy, who are more vocal, perhaps, than numerous.

The crowd that moves sluggishly here seems little bothered by such thoughts. In the café at the corner of La Aduana and Peligros futbol enthusiasts gather. On the corner of Peligros and Alcala the bullfighters and the aficionados. At Alcala and Sevilla actors without jobs.

In the little square just before the Calle San Geronimo dips into the Prado stands a fine building with noble columns. Two lions with sneers and flossy tails guard its emptiness. Beggars sleep on the steps. This is the cortes, the Spanish chamber of deputies. Spain had a cortes that was the terror of her kings centuries before the English and the French had tamed their rulers.

But the cortes has fallen on evil days. Since Primo de Rivera came roaring into town in 1923 there has been silence within save for the comic interlude of a national assembly which, though hand picked, proved too talkative for the dictator. There is talk of elections in the fall and the old "politicos" are buzzing about, but there are sagacious people who are giving odds that there won't be.

80 Persons Tried.

It couldn't have been any hotter on the afternoon of June 30, 1680, in the arcaded Plaza Mayor when in a gorgeous auto de fe, an act of faith in the glorious service of God, 80 people were tried by the inquisition in the presence of the court, sitting on tapestried balconies, and a crowd of some 50,000. Only 21 of the 80, however, were turned over to the secular arm to be burned out on the Quemadero.

The chroniclers say that the heat was bad and that Charles II., wiping his brow after the eightieth, inquired wearily, "No mas?" [No more?]

It is hard, with the radio blaring away from the corner café and street cars buzzing through bursting with people, to evoke the auto de fes, the bullfights, and the royal ceremonies that took place in this plaza for centuries. But see it on Corpus Christi when the procession winds through from San Isidro el Real and the balconies are hung with gorgeous tapestries. The painted and gilded images, the vestments of the priests, incense—like an illuminated page from an old missal.

They have not burned in Spain for a long time now. The inquisition itself was only abolished, though, a little over one hundred years ago, the drawings of its rigors by Goya in the Prado remind you. And the faith has little changed. Church and state are still one. Protestantism hardly exists and cannot show a cross on its churches when it does.

The Power of the Church.

You read in the papers today that a crowd of Catholic students broke up a meeting in the Bellas Artes hall, where Dr. Villegas spoke against the church, defended birth control, and criticized the monarchy. El Debate, the Catholic organ, complains that a civil marriage, which can only be performed outside of a church if both parties have proved themselves to be non-Catholics, was pulled off with style in Granada by some Socialists.

Madariaga, a professor at Oxford, says in a new book on Spain, "Cases could be told of excellent . . . men broken and lost to the nation by the relentless persecution of hard headed and hard hearted bishops . . ." Yet 50 per cent of those who are lucky enough to get education in Spain get it from the church and the bulk of the nursing and the charity is done by it and the leading agricultural loan society is a church affair.

Tourists find Madrid little eloquent of the past of Spain. Yet 350 years of history are written on her walls. There is no fog and smoke to grime them, so these walls don't look old. Only a fine baroque door now and then on a narrow street tells the tale. And the names. Some of them are fine. The Street of the Waters, the Street of the Bear, of the Head, of the Sacrament, the Conception, the Perils, the Angel, the Farriers, the Sadlers, the Holy Spirit, the Love of God. . . .

There is the street of Lope de Vega, after that phenomenal author of over 700 plays. On this street Carvantes, who fixed forever in the Don and his shrewd squire the contradictions in the Spanish soul, is buried, and it is in the street of Cervantes that Lope's house is found with the inscription he himself put on the walls, "A small possession of one's own is great; a great possession of another is small." A philosophy still very widely held among this extraordinary people.

The Past of Spain.

Neither does the palace look old. It is no mere museum, for a king who rules now with a power as absolute as any caliph's lodges there. The changing of the guard is no stately parade such as you see before Buckingham palace. It is elaborate but rather fussy. No need for it to be impressive, for the power within is real and slow ritual of stiff soldiery is useful only when personal power has been sublimated into a symbol.

The past of Spain is very much in Madrid. All the old institutions are on display here. Some of them frankly sclerotic, none of them enjoying the best of health at this moment. But alive. Even the army has qualms, so bold are the threats of the republicans to clip its wings.

One chapter is well closed. The implications of past empire are hard to find in Madrid. This generation has even forgotten where the colonial office was. Those dusty files of centuries of frustrate effort must be preserved somewhere. The older ones are in Seville. A son of a former governor of Cuba thinks that the ministry of the Gobernacion is the place, but is not sure.

"The implications of empire you speak of," he says, "were just about as hard to find in the nineties. Nobody cared but those of us who had properties there and mothers who had sons. It is notorious that the day when the treaty of Paris ending an episode 400 years long was announced the crowd at the bullring was bigger than ever."

How well closed this chapter is can be seen in the Park of the Buen Retiro, where the finest avenues are called after not the Spanish colonies of old but the republics of today. There is a bust of Rueben Dario, the greatest Spanish poet of the last century, a Nicaraguan.

The Semite Everywhere.

But the whole story of the centuries is preserved intact on the walls of the Prado gallery. There is undoubtedly a certain prejudice. The careful Herr Baedeker warns that although Velasquez's "Surrender of Breda" is one of the great pictures of all time the kindliness which the painter put in the face of the conquering Spinola was "not warranted in fact." You often see peasants walking through gravely taking everything literally, in tears sometimes before canvases of the martyrdoms. They undoubtedly think that the inhabitants of the far Americas still wear feathers.

You see Spain's past more vividly in faces than anywhere else. The living faces of her present.

On the terrace of the Granja de Henar in the Acala there is an ebullient mob. Officers, employés of ministries, artists, politicians, a cross section of the white collar life of Madrid. You see the basic Celt-Iberian in sharp noses and deepset eyes under jutting brows. The Visigoth in ruddy faces and curling blonde hair. In the aggressive nose and florid complexion of a writer from Alicante the Roman is easily seen. In fine vivid features and soft dark eyes you see the Arab, the Moor, and the gypsy.

The Semite everywhere. Historians say that there were 400,000 Jews in Spain at the time of the expulsion and that 300,000 managed to remain and were absorbed. Before that there had been much intermarriage. The saying is that although there are no Jews in Spain, there is much Jew in the Spaniard. Spaniards always laugh at this because, historical evidence to the contrary, they like and understand the Jew.

Profoundly Castilian.

Many of these faces are strikingly rugged. There is very little Mediterranean prettiness. It is not hard to imagine the Conquistador.

The fellow over there with the hard triangular face deeply lined would fit very well in a group on a peak in Darien. He happens to be an etcher with communist leanings. But one of his ancestors was in fact almost a Conquistador. He was treasurer to Ferdinand and Isabella and handled the gold coming in and going out. Another of the physical stamp of Pizarro and Cortes is chewing his nails from boredom. His father left him an income of 700 pesetas a month and he does nothing.

There are men here who have learned things abroad. There is a moderate republican of the French radical stamp whose aim is to separate church and state. There is a Marxian Socialist who would drive the church into the ground. Here is a syndicalist from Barcelona whose designs one can only imagine. A young professor recounts the fell influences of the tightly ordered Spanish family life.

At the core Madrid is profoundly Castilian and does her best to impress that quality on Spain. Around this core there is much variety, Spain working on her.

All the centrifugal forces of Spain that pull against the Castilian passion to centralize and the Castilian contempt for practical matters have their outposts here in the camp of the enemy.

The energetic Basque from Bilbao and the smooth Catalan talk markets, efficiency and the need of high tariffs like any business men from Manchester or Pittsburgh. In banks you hear clerks sometimes speaking Catalan, the language they have struggled so to keep.

The Fronton.

There are half a dozen restaurants where the hardy Basques eat bacaloa codfish with red pepper and get noisy afterwards to help the digestion like the Germans. There are courts called frontons where they play pelota, a cross between handball and tennis. The players wear basket bats strapped to their arms and the ball describes long curves against the green wall in volleys that last many minutes amid the uproar of spectators placing bets and juggling odds through the medium of bookies who wear red berets.

The papers describing a fiesta of Gallegans today says that there are at least 100,000 of these moody industrious Celts here. Many are servants, many poets and lawyers.

There are streets where gaudy tile shop fronts and Spanish spoken softly betray the Andalusian from the Moorish south. He comes to Los Gabrieles and other establishments on the Calle Echegarria for raw Serrano ham which he washes down with dry yellow sherry. Upstairs which you reach through long damp corridors and staircases lined with violent tiles there is festivity.

Doors swing open and you see in the blue smoke men with diamonds instead of neckties down their shirt fronts and their hair in a knot in back—bull fighters. And rich senoritas, men about town, from Seville and Madrid. And girls whose faces gleam if they are dark from the cold cream which many Spanish girls with dull complexions find vivifies their beauty. You hear the convulsive rattle of castanets and the inevitably strident laugh of the Spanish woman. Fat gypsies sitting with guitars on their pendulous stomachs pluck out rhythms far removed from jazz.

Madrid is more than parasite and bureaucrat. She is replete with the rich variety of all Spain. Madrid doesn't kill individualities any more than she dominates her plain. Thus she is more Spain in a sense than Paris is France and London England.

You sense deep lying turbulence more or less chaneled into old rituals and pressed down upon by old institutions with which the liberty loving Spaniard has paradoxically cluttered his life. But you sense individuality rampant nevertheless in this welter. You sense a ferment and at the same time a great passivity, an almost pathological lassitude. There is variety and contradiction galore. And then the evidences of modernity all around to complicate it still further.

Nope! You Can't Throw Your Coin Off Eiffel Tower

PARIS.—(AP)—With the coming of summer tourists police again are worried by the practice of throwing 2 sou pieces from the top platform of the Eiffel tower.

At the foot of the structure is a small pool and a coin may be tossed into it from one side of the platform. The danger is that cross winds may sail the copper discs onto the crowded footpaths, ballistic experts pointing out that coins falling from a height of 1,000 feet might cause serious injury.

The official attitude, therefore, is that visitors may throw away their money in Paris if they like, but not from the Eiffel tower.

Burns Mantle Inaugurates Log on European Theater Tour

By Burns Mantle.

ON BOARD S. S. VOLENDAM, AT SEA.—I was at the gangplank at 9:30 to meet my little group of serious travelers. They came straggling in, wonderingly, a little hesitantly, a little afraid to hope for the best, a little too hopeful to expect the worst. The crowd was enormous. We had told everybody we were sailing Saturday, July 5—we sailed five minutes past midnight Friday, July 4—which made it difficult for the trustful. You may know the cynic who says that no matter how many pretty girls and dangerous looking young matrons may be milling with the crowd he is never hopeful of an exciting crossing. The going ashore signal sounds and all the prettiest and most interesting get off the boat.

Not so with us. This is a student sailing. Pretty girls in bevies. Good looking seniors in droves. Six hundred fifty in this class. Only 200 first cabin. That's what the stock market has done to travel this year.

Trouble Begins Early.

First day—adjustments.

We had stood in line for an hour to reach the deck steward to buy our steamer chairs. When we reached him he gave us a contemptuous Dutch glance and announced: "See, I sell stamps!" "I don't want stamps," I said; "I want chairs." "Now, I sell stamps! No more chairs," he answered. They are wonderful, these Dutch, but not often.

Now the trouble begins—650, with comfortable accommodations for 450. Some have paid less, some more. It is hard to convince them that they did not buy what their tour managers sold them. I have been standing next to a man who came with the promise that his second cabin rating was automatically arranged for him—he found himself and his family in an inside stateroom on deck, and his table sittings in the third class dining room. Third class, second sitting, near the kitchen, hot and smelly, awful mad! I'll bet there are teeth marks all over that man's cabin. Never buy your tour accommodations on folder promises. Yet, when I went with him to see, that third class dining room was crowded with young people having a grand time. It's fine to be young. All around the joyful young were irate older tourists. Indignation meetings galore. One group of fifty is taking action. What they can do I don't see. My man tried to pay the difference and take his family to the first cabin dining room, where there is plenty of room. The captain said nix. Back to the hofmeister he rushed. Poor hofmeister, he could do nothing. His dining room sittings are all gone. Then to the Student Tourist association host. How sorry I felt for that fellow. A nice boy from Providence, signed on as host, with his charming young wife as hostess. The two of them out of college a couple of years, I suspect, and taking these jobs as a lark. The first day out an angry mob to pacify. When I reached them the red faced protestors had backed the host into a corner of the lounge and were threatening everything but physical violence. The little wife sat beside him trying to keep back the tears. They (the angry men) blamed the host for everything, including the Dutch crew. What they said was neither discreet not fair, nor altogether honest.

What? Bar Deserted?

But you don't know Stanley, perhaps. He is the boy responsible for the Student Tourist association. Out of college six years ago, I think they told me, he came to the Holland-America officials and asked if they would give him his passage free if he signed up twenty-five other students for third class accommodations, and would they agree to give the students a break in the way of better food and a few special recreational opportunities? The Hollanders fixed things to suit Stanley and he went out and signed sixty for his student third tour. The next year he got more concessions and signed 150. And so on until last year his tourist third association did $1,000,000 worth of tourist business. Now he has organized the drive-your-own-car business in Paris and his wife runs a tourist shopping enterprise. A year or two from now they are going to retire and start a model farm with a factory run in connection with it to keep the help employed in winter. Considerable citizen, S. R.

They are not taking much advantage of the freedom of the bar, these allegedly thirsty Americans. Drinking beer mostly at 10 cents the glass. Cocktails are 30 cents and hard liquor 40. That may have something to do with it. The only free drinker I've seen is my disappointed friend who wanted to murder somebody when they put him in what he loudly calls the steerage. A small percentage of the boys and girls gather in what the Dutch call the smoke room and revel in the beer. But promptly at 11 at night they are put out and the bar is closed. Closed tight, too. Student association influence, I suppose.

Minister Gives Up.

Second day — Getting acquainted. Being worn out, everybody slept better last night and there are fewer drawn faces in the crowd this morning. Tentative friendships are many. The Hofmeister is still being besieged and there is anger and disgust in the eyes of the older members of the third class dining room overflow. Even they are getting used to the experience. There was a divine service with one of these endless prayers for guidance and protection, spoken against the noise of two shuffleboard and one ping-pong contest on the outside. The athletes won out and the minister all but gave up. Some way I feel God was just as well pleased.

Oh, Oh! A Mixup.

Third day—Adjustments completed. There are fixed friendships now and the cameras have begun to appear. You take my picture and I'll take yours. There are a few old fashioned drinking companionships. The boys have sung themselves out and settled down to legitimate petting. I am still amazed at the little advantage that is taken of the bar. Up in first cabin last night, where, I assume, the money travels, the place was as quiet as a church, at least some churches. Still they say we go wild once we smell real liquor. There is to be a show Friday night. Our group is to do a play. My California director of pageants is writing it. My Milwaukee dramatic coach is staging it. My two directors of speech and little play coaches from Albany and Flint, Mich., the little lady who teaches dramatics to the colored students of Talladega college in Alabama; the librarian from Vassar, and the earnest child who teaches drama in Berkeley are going to play in it. Mr. Mantle is going to explain it.

Fourth day — Shaken down. My friend, the irate one, has edged his way into the main dining room and is happy. Takes a load off my mind. Everybody's shaken down and content, seemingly.

Ha! A Speakeasy.

Fifth day—Keeping busy. The determination to keep the young people busy is a trifle desperate. . . . Lectures on alternate days for those who insist on being educated. . . . Oberammergau Sunday. . . . French cathedrals Tuesday. . . . Famous tapestries Thursday. . . . The students don't seem to care much. . . . Concerts alternate days. . . . Movies in the evening. . . . Ramon Novarro performed silently last night. . . . We took up the drama seriously today and went into rehearsal with our play. . . . At least, my actresses went into rehearsal. . . . I shall wait until they get set and then tear it apart for them. Else they may forget they have a leader. . . . "A Promising Young Man," they call it. The title refers to the hofmeister and the theme is his distribution of table sittings. The coach from Milwaukee has borrowed the hofmeister's coat and cap and will play the lead. . . . There is practically no excitement in the bar these days. . . . I can't understand it.

Sixth day—New discoveries. Ah! I have discovered something . . . There is a third class bar aft down near the crew's quarters with all the atmosphere of a speakeasy . . . And there is where the real bar crowd is . . . One group of Dutchmen playing pinochle and loving it. Another of young sports having a grand time . . . That's what prohibition has done for us. Created a love of secret or pantry drinking . . . The barkeeper here, however, is also for temperance. Last night, when the yodlers got rough, he locked the bar, and ran . . . When the boys did not leave he turned the lights out on them . . . Lights out in a third cabin smokeroom take all the whoopee out of even a junior . . . Met Earl Derr Biggers today. He came over from first cabin and visited with us . . . Has just finished a new book and is on his way to Scandinavia to forget it.

At Plymouth.

Seventh day—Entertainment. We gave the show last night to a dining room crowded with a happy audience . . . Our drama group comediennes covered themselves with something a little finer than glory . . . They managed to play fifteen minutes of sheer nonsense and still make their audience respect them . . . They came from all over the little theater world of America. They had a definite sense of character and they could be heard and understood . . . I was quite proud of them, and of my California lady who wrote and coached the piece . . . There also was singing and dancing and comic turns.

Eighth day—And all's well. We're packed and waiting. The lighter will be out from Plymouth in an hour . . . Thence by boat train to London. We hope to catch a Sunday night performance of the Stage society just to start the week right. And see Paul Robeson's "Othello" Monday night.

Reporter Puts Directors Wise About His Kind

Says Movies Don't Know Real News Hounds.

By Tom Pettey.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—From time to time—usually in extremely hot weather—this column endeavors to become critical. It has in the past attempted to deal constructively with major ills of the talking picture industry and found itself considerably beyond its depth, which ordinarily is something less than 21 inches. The reason for this floundering among instead of thrashing out of ideals, disappointed readers have advised, is the writer's lack of knowledge of his subject.

Without for a moment granting such an accusation, I am going to turn to a minor ill that is currently causing Mr. Talkie no end of trouble and is confusing a lot of movie patrons. It concerns reporters as they are pictured on the screen, and it is a subject that I know that I know something about.

Every other—well, at least every third film that has come to town recently has featured a courtroom scene in which a group of reporters served as atmosphere, or background, or something. The courtroom scene usually represented a New York City justice shop and without exception, so far as the reporters were concerned, was technically wrong.

The movie patrons have a right to see these courtrooms as they really are and to be able to recognize which newspaper which reporter belongs to, and why.

It's Really Like This.

So, if the movies will endeavor to make their court scenes realistic and the movie patrons will follow instructions, we will have this little matter ironed out in a jiffy, if a jiffy means what we think it means.

In the first place, the reporters' table should not be pictured close up to the judge's bench and facing the jury box. The table, in reality, is about the size of a bridge table, seats from six to twelve reporters, and is located outside the court rail in the corner farthest removed from the witness chair. The occupants of the table are pictured as sitting humped over large pads and writing furiously. That is all wrong. The director, if he really wants to present a correct picture, should have his reporters squabbling over their seats, tilting their chairs, running in and out of the room, and generally making a nuisance of themselves.

When the scene opens one man—a little fellow with a black mustache—is seated at the press table. He is carving his initials on the leg of the table. He is from Eagle News and probably lives in the second drawer of the court clerk's filing cabinet.

The entrance of the other occupants of the press table should not be allowed to interfere with the progress of the picture, although it frequently almost wrecks the action of the actual court. The gentleman from the Clarion should be the first to arrive. He frequently is confused with the trial lawyer, but should be easy to recognize by the row of sharpened pencils in his coat pocket. He always wears a well pressed blue serge suit. Once in, he selects the best seat at the table, puts down a stack of copy paper about six inches high, and arranges his pencils in an orderly row.

Turns Down the Cloves.

His colleague from the Courier-Tribune comes in a few minutes later, seizes the next best seat, borrows a pencil from the Clarion man and offers him a handful of cloves in return. The Clarion man refuses the cloves. The Courier-Tribune reporter chews a couple. The Courier-Tribune man's suit is not as well pressed as his friend's, and he needs a haircut. You can always pick him out by the handkerchief in his upper coat pocket. It does not match his necktie.

The Hemisphere journalist saunters in. He wears a cane and appears bored. The Hemisphere man picks up about an inch of the Clarion man's copy paper, helps himself to one of the pencils, places his stick across the space in front of the Tribune man and begins reading a copy of the New Republic.

The Clarion reporter goes to telephone somebody about something or other and the reporter from the Populace enters. The Populace newsgatherer throws his topcoat across the Clarion man's chair, sits down in it, picks up the remaining pencils, puts them in his vest pocket and accepts two cloves from the Courier-Tribune man. Then he puts his head down on the table and goes to sleep. Three messenger boys immediately enter in rapid succession and the Populace reporter rouses, whispers something to each of them and then goes back to sleep. Nobody pays any attention to this.

The court is opened just as the Daily Star reporter comes in, wearing overshoes and carrying an umbrella. This fellow is always prepared for any emergency. The Clarion man comes back and about seven afternoon newspaper men crowd around the table. Every one begins to fight over a seat and the judge throws out the entire lot. They retire to a nearby restaurant, the Eagle News man remaining, as he is practically invisible, anyhow. After it is all over they rewrite the Eagle News story.

Radio-Movie Center Planned.

The wreckers already have started work on some of the old buildings between 5th and 6th avenues where the new Radio-Movie center is to be constructed. The two largest theaters planned for the Rockefeller site, it is reported, will be completed by the fall of 1931. The plan for Roxy to hook up with Radio Corporation of America still is up in the air.

New York had begun to wonder when "Hell's Angels" is coming to town. The probable date now has moved up until Aug. 5. There is no shortage of houses along the Rialto this season and the spot probably will be the Criterion, owned by Publix.

Samuel Goldwyn's latest opus, "Raffles," played by Ronald Colman, was shown to the critics Monday afternoon and opened Friday at the Rialto at popular prices. Mr. Goldwyn appears to be definitely through with $2 houses, and when his musical show with Eddie Cantor as the star of "Whoopee" hits Broadway around Labor day it will be at the Rivoli at popular prices.

Del Rio and Velez, Friendly Enemies

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—Hollywood always had interesting stories of rival actresses since the historic days of Gloria Swanson and Pola Negri. The fights of Swanson and Negri over the status of the studio cats, over their respective titles of countess and marquise, their gowns, their jewels and social successes still are retold with as much interest as ever.

But the present most interesting set of rivals brackets Dolores Del Rio and Lupe Velez.

Both have been United Artists stars and this business of two girls of the same nationality, and somewhat the same type, working at the same studio engendered the rivalry. Del Rio, born and bred the lady, has been nettled frequently at the antics of the madcap Lupe, who has never missed an opportunity, in public or private, to do a takeoff of the patrician Mexican.

With mincing step, head held extremely high, and an exaggerated imitation of Del Rio's mannerisms, Lupe will prance into an opening not too far behind the statuesque Del Rio. Perhaps the funniest imitations of all are those that Lupe gives of the phonograph records made by Del Rio a couple of years ago, and here Lupe has the best of her, for Del Rio's singing voice does not compare with the melodious voice of the little Velez.

To hear the friends of Del Rio heatedly state the case, Lupe is a little lowbrow, and to hear Lupe render it in fluent Mexican, Del Rio is something positively alarming. She is Yaqui, she is a bad singer, she is a bad dancer and, goodness knows, how bad an actress. Incidentally, all Mexican actresses say the other Mexican girls are Yaqui. All of these things disturb the aplomb of Del Rio very little except when an occasional shaft of the little madcap hits the spot.

The most recent triumph of Lupe concerns her playing of the same rôle in "Resurrection" as a talkie for Universal that Del Rio played successfully in silent version for United Artists. The same director that directed Del Rio's destinies for so long, Edwin Carewe, will direct Lupe. Until recently Lupe had the same press agent, Harry Wilson, who made Del Rio famous. The really funny thing is that Lupe should be getting the rôles of Del Rio, for Del Rio has turned guttersnipe for the screen and played a typical Lupe rôle in "The Bad One" recently. Whether it is funnier to see Lupe act like a lady or to see Del Rio acting like a hoyden is up to the public to decide.

Stork Is Near.

From confidential sources it was learned that the stork, who at first was believed would arrive in October at Norma Shearer's home, is imminent and may arrive the last of July or the first of August. Rosabelle Laemmle Bergermann, only daughter of Carl Laemmle, owner of Universal, is also expecting the stork, though not until a later date. This will be the first grandchild in the family of Papa Carl, as he is called.

Uh! Uh!

Amos and Andy, the radio comedians, were hosts at a tea held at the Beverly Wilshire hotel during the week, at which they discussed various things for the press. Amos, who is a boy from Virginia, was talking about a man that had been made up to take film tests for them. "The makeup was entirely too light," said Amos. "No high yalluh boys would go at all in my act. Down in Virginia they never would stand for that. If I could afford a chauffeur (this is the funniest part of the story, considering the money those two make) I would pick me out a nice black boy, yessuh, perfectly black and not high yalluh."

The first person the two boys hunted up here was Charles H. Gabriel Jr., who, when he was with THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE eight years ago, developed the two comedians out of the unknown into the known class at THE TRIBUNE's radio station, W-G-N. Gabriel is associated with the Paramount station in Hollywood now.

Speaking of Titles.

Hollywood, and particularly the United Artists' studio, is simply getting bogged down with titled English folk. Mayor Thompson's frantic efforts to keep Chicago safe from King George could be well directed at Hollywood, for what with Lady Mountbatten the family friend of the Pickford-Fairbanks household, Prince George the dinner guest of the Pickford-Fairbankses when he was on an unofficial cruise here some time ago, there is to be added Lady Maureen Stanley, daughter-in-law of Lord Derby (pronounced Darby, as in Worcestershire).

Lady Maureen arrived here with Frederick Lonsdale, author of the latest vehicle for Ronald Colman. Mr. Lonsdale has taken his visit to Hollywood as the small boy takes castor oil. He has tried three times to bring himself here, once having taken the boat and disembarked, once getting as far as New York and going back, and now he is really here, "God Save the King."

One only wonders if, like the canny Scotch laird in Stephen Leacock's nonsense novels, he will throw the money or will get on the floor three times, and then finally bring himself to pocket it at last.

Then Henry Kolker—remember this stage leading man of another day?—does nice work as Cresson's devoted butler-friend. The youths playing the crooks in silk hats are all believable.

The production has been nicely turned out as to staging, sound, and photography. William K. Howard, who wrote the story, which is not remarkable for originality, has capably directed the picture's action.

All in all, you will find "Good Intentions" good entertainment.

Bits aBOUTem.

HARVARD, one might say, has entered the talkies. The presentation in Symphony hall, Boston, of "Three Centuries of Massachusetts" marks the university's first use of the talking film as an educational medium. The film, which took two years to complete, was made by the University Film Foundation, a nonprofit institution coöperating with Harvard.

MARY PICKFORD'S picture—"Secrets"—is being delayed by the illness of the little son of Sam Taylor, director, who was unable to concentrate on the script when the child was stricken with infantile paralysis.

Miss Pickford recently, at a luncheon with her staff, denied persistent reports that she and Douglas Fairbanks have indeed separated as rumor for a long time has said they would.

See you tomorrow.

The Voice of the Movie Fan

Gay Comment.

Dear Miss Tinée: What a cast! M. G. M. certainly chose an able one for "Let Us Be Gay." I'll agree that Marie Dressler was immense (!!) and about "copped" the picture. But Norma Shearer made the rôle of Mrs. Brown as convincing as it could have been acted.

Going farther down the cast, wasn't Hedda Hopper a knockout? Her affected air of ultra-sophistication was a panic.

Rod La Rocque as the erring Bob Brown surely did some neat acting. And Sally Eilers—I'm glad they're beginning to notice her and at last have given her the break she should have.

A picture like "Let Us Be Gay" is a tonic to a fellow after traveling streets whose atmosphere registers 102 degrees. Thanks for the three star rating. Sincerely,

CHARLES MCCORMICK.

Editor's note: Y'wekkum!

A Knockout.

Dear Miss Tinée: We were very much interested in a contribution to your column, suggesting that Polly Moran might play "Emmy Schmaltz," and Marie Dressler play "Mamie" in a film version of the comic strip, "Moon Mullins." In our opinion Polly Moran is well qualified, and Marie Dressler just about perfect. Wallace Berry is quite good for Willie, but Raymond Hackett wouldn't do at all.

There is only one man who could play "Moon Mullins," and he is George Cooper, a very capable actor whose absence has been keenly noticed.

As for the little boy for "Kayo" in the McGuire comedies, his acting is not very natural, and he seems nervous, where "Kayo" is such a calm, confident little chap. But he might do if another couldn't be found.

THE "M." SISTERS.

Editor's note: Good suggestions.

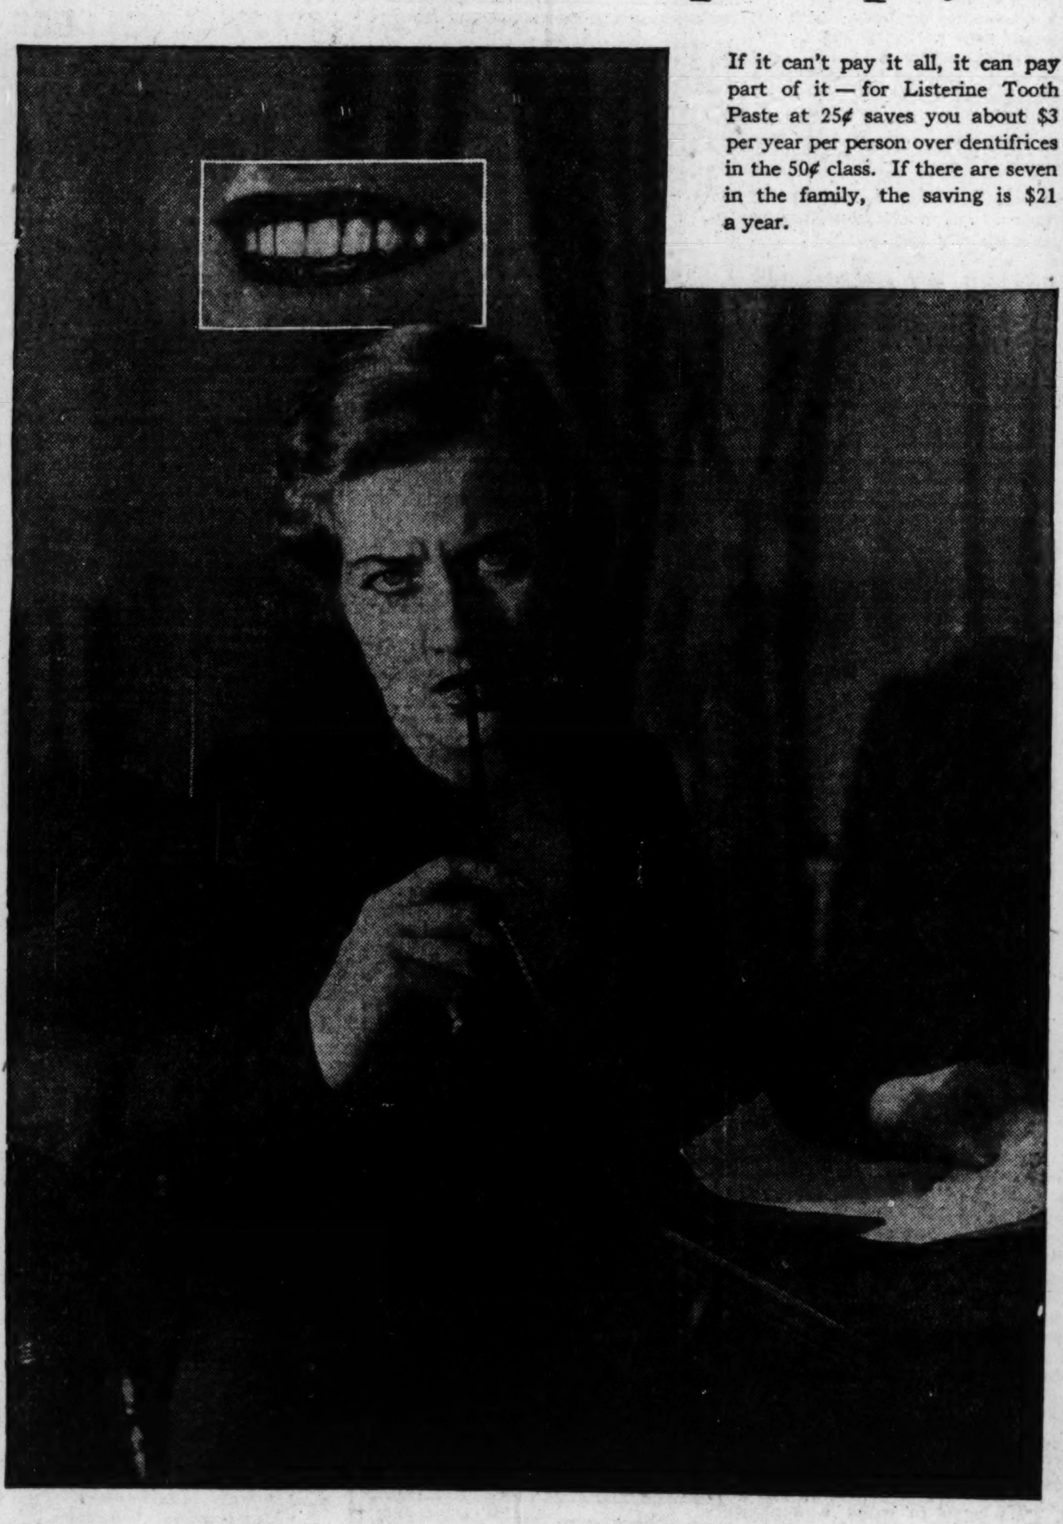
Let your tooth paste pay it



If it can't pay it all, it can pay part of it—for Listerine Tooth Paste at 25¢ saves you about $3 per year per person over dentifrices in the 50¢ class. If there are seven in the family, the saving is $21 a year.

Judges of value

acclaim this modern tooth paste at 25¢

Do you know of one good reason why you should pay more than 25c for a quality tooth paste?

We don't; and we have been studying tooth pastes of all kinds for 20 years. We have learned that all are basically alike—and that, at 25¢, should leave ample profit to the manufacturer.

In Listerine Tooth Paste we offer a dentifrice of outstanding quality—one in every way worthy of the Listerine name. That you can obtain it at 25¢ is due to our ability to buy ingredients in quantity, and to modern production methods which eliminate every unnecessary expense. Why not switch to Listerine Tooth Paste for one month and let it prove its own merits?

Note how swiftly but how gently it erases discolorations and tartar. See how its mild polishing and cleansing ingredients penetrate those hard-to-get-at crevices between the teeth and remove decaying matter. Note that wonderful feeling of health and invigoration that comes to your mouth after you have used it. Then reflect that these benefits are yours for $3 a year—about half of what you usually pay. June to October Nomads Grow Fewer and Fewer Chicagoans Prefer to Roam in Winter.

By Nancy R——.

ONE of Chicago's well known matrons was asked earlier in the season where she was planning to spend the summer.

"Right here!" was her emphatic answer. "We do our traveling in the winter and stay at home in the summer. We've tried all sorts of holiday outings and we're convinced that's the most pleasant arrangement."

More and more does this appear to be the case with Chicago's fashionable citizenry. Once upon a time the advent of summer was the starting signal for a general exodus to other corners of the country. Now the percentage of June to October nomads seems to be decreasing. After all, what's a little hot weather compared to the many diversions offered by our city and its environs?

There's the opera at Ravinia, finest of summer evening entertainments. There are the horse shows at South Shore, Wheaton, Onwentsia, Milwaukee, and Fort Sheridan, and the races at Washington Park, Arlington, Lincoln Fields, and Hawthorne. Polo, yachting, golf, tennis, and swimming are only a few of the other attractions for the world that likes to amuse itself.

Summer Clubs Nearby.

For those slightly peripatetic folk who prefer to break the summer with week-end trips or longer visits away from town—without going too far from home, sweet home—there's a goodly number of smart clubs sprinkled through the north woods of Wisconsin and Michigan on this side of the lake—Huron Mountain ranking in seniority; Lake Keego, not far from Manitowish and youngest in the group; the Island club in the Flambeau region; Coleman lake in the same general vicinity, and Lawsonia at Green Lake, Wis.

It was nearly thirty years ago that the Huron Mountain club came into existence, long before the day of fast trains and comfortable motor cars, when a journey to that alluring spot was a real undertaking. The pioneers made the trip from Chicago to Marquette on one of the lake steamers; changed there for a smaller boat bound for Big Bay, and then did the last twelve miles of the way by wagon over narrow, bumpy roads through the woods.

The boat trip between Marquette and Big Bay was the real adventure of the journey, for in bad weather it was impossible to land and the travelers had to return to Marquette to wait until the elements calmed down. One of the amusing, if somewhat trying incidents of those early days is still chuckled over—the struggle between the "Mountaineers" and a balky cow that they were taking along for the summer, the argument starting on the boat and ending in a sudden and unexpected dip in the lake for all concerned.

Later on the second lap of the expedition was made by train—as one of the club members said, "a lumber train, so-called because it lumbered over the thirty odd miles at the high speed of ten or twelve miles an hour."

When Chicago Was Young

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.

By Herma Clark.

Chicago, Oct. 1, 1873.

DEAR JULIA:

I am sending you a new book which I believe you will like. Will thinks it isn't great literature, but it certainly is interesting. It is called "The Fair God," and Gen. Lew Wallace is the author. Do tell me how you like it.

I wish you might have been here, to attend with us a musicale and reception given by Henry Greenebaum at his Ashland avenue home in honor of Carl Wolfsohn, the distinguished Philadelphia pianist. Mrs. Henrietta G. Frank played a duet with Mr. Wolfsohn, which won much praise. Mrs. Frank is one of the most brilliant of Chicago's amateur musicians.

The guests were among the best known people of the city, and there were many beautifully dressed women there. Dr. and Mrs. Clinton Locke were among the company, and Mrs. Locke was wearing one of the new chatelaine basques. It had a plain front, sloping over the hips and held by whalebones extending clear to the cord that edged the basque. The back had two long swallow tails, with bows on the end. The whole looked not unlike a gentleman's swallow tail coat. It was very handsome.

Gen. and Mrs. Logan were much observed, of course. Mrs. Logan was wearing a costume whose skirt was made over the new pompadour bustle. I think it is a great improvement over the old style bustle. I like the gradual slope behind, from belt to foot—so different from the abrupt, projecting appendage which we wore last year. This new sort of support leaves the sides and front quite smooth and clinging.

And don't you like the new skirts, which can be worn long in the house but can be drawn up with rings, when one goes out on the street? It seems to me our styles are quite perfect this year.

Will pointed out to me on the street Budd Doble, the famous jockey. Will thinks he is a wonder at riding, and, of course, Will swears by "Goldsmith Maid." Will has never got over his love for racing, though he bets only small sums, I am glad to say. Isn't Oliver Wendell Holmes' couplet about the famous jockey good? Will you write it out for me next time you write? I can't remember it all, but you know the one I mean:

"Budd Doble, whose catarrhal name
——— fills the trump of fame."

Dr. Holmes does say the most amusing things. Did you hear

Society Revives as Scene Shifts to Saratoga

Change Comes as Break in Midsummer.

By Nancy Randolph.

NEW YORK, July 26.—[Special.]—If you hear any faint sounds of awakening social life from this city the reason is that at last Saratoga is coming into its own. King Horse moves this week from the metropolitan area to the lovely spa in the northern section of the state, and once again society wakes, rubs its eyes, and prepares to enjoy itself.

Between the Fourth of July and the first days of August a great somnolence overcomes the notables. It takes that period for society to become used to its summer homes, to give and attend the numerous luncheons and dinners that make up the social round at the resorts and bring the cottagers into the proper community state of mind.

But with July over, every one grows restless. I have never known the more active members of society to be willing to settle down at any one place for the whole duration of the summer. The Newport crowd is ever making up yachting parties—ever sailing from Point Judith to town, attending a dance or two, a dinner, running down to Southampton and to Montauk and then sailing back again to Newport.

The Southampton crowd returns the compliment. Makes a part of the annual New York Yacht club cruise and lingers at Newport to enjoy the hospitality of the cliff dwellers. They all keep on the go until September comes around to release them from the frightful ordeal of keeping near the sea during the heated period.

Notables Attend.

Saratoga then comes as a full break in the middle of the summer and there is scarcely a person of any note at all who does not manage to attend the races for at least some part of the month.

It isn't hard. Saratoga, long before the revolution, was famed for the curative powers of its waters. Society, which ignores the lovely town for eleven months of the year, enters into full possession for the month of August and makes of Saratoga a watering place of as great brilliancy as Palm Beach.

Like Newport, Saratoga has refused to change. The town is old, somnolent and lovely. Huge trees line the streets. The hotels are old and rambling and the natives still sit in the sun at midday and drowse with their hats over their eyes.

There are fashionable gathering places which open on the first day of racing and close on the last. Arrowhead, Brooks. Society gathers here to dine and to go on later to the roulette wheels—which always manage to

News of Chicago Society

Now, of course, the problem of transportation isn't a problem at all—it's almost a matter of commuting between Huron Mountain and this part of the world.

The club began with a handful of little cabins and a main dining and lounging lodge, but now it's grown to enormous proportions—some sixty or seventy cabins—a third generation community, for the children of the original members have grown up and are taking their children there to enjoy the wholesome outdoor life that is its greatest charm.

Popular with Chicagoans.

Among the early settlers from Chicago at Huron Mountain were the Cyrus Bentleys, the Heaton Owsleys (Mr. Owsley died last week), the Victor Eltings, the Carter Harrisons, the late Dr. E. C. Dudley and Mrs. Dudley (whose cabin was the first from the clubhouse), Mrs. E. L. Hasler, the William L. LeMoynes, the Horace Tenneys, the late Henry Tuttle and Mrs. Tuttle, Frank Farwell and the late Mrs. Farwell, the Prentiss Coonleys, the late Charles Spalding and Mrs. Spalding, the J. Louis Shortalls, Judge and Mrs. Bert Carpenter, the late Hempstead Washburne and Mrs. Washburne, while the second generation families include the Vaughn Spaldings, the Henry Tenneys, the Edward J. Berminghams, the Paul Moyers, the Alfred Hamills, the junior Carter Harrisons, the Robert and the Richard Stevensons, the Kent Chandlers, Edson Manierre and the Arthur Tuttles.

Detroit, too, always has a large contingent at Huron Mountain, one of the newest and most luxurious cabins there having been built a season or so ago by Henry Ford.

Plans are afoot to make the club an all year 'round proposition. I'm told that a winter cabin is being built, so that those members who go in for winter sports—snowshoeing, skiing, tobogganing and the like—may make use of it for cold weather week-ends.

Colony at Lake Keego.

The Lake Keego club was started last year when a group of men, including Laurance Armour, Charles Glore, Newton Perry, and John R. Winterbotham, bought the property from the A. Shreve Badgers, whose summer camp it had been for many years. The cabins are set in a beautiful grove of virgin pines on a high piece of land with a fine view over the surrounding country. The clear waters of the lake make it ideal for swimming and there are numerous delightful canoe trips to be taken in the immediate neighborhood. Among the recent week-end guests at the club were the Philip Mahers, Ted Shaw, and the Sam Rinakers. Mrs. Rinaker, by the bye, not at all daunted by the climbing temperatures of the last few days, has embarked on a business career, and is hard at work, associated with Miss Frieda Foltz in the real estate business.

William E. Clow Jr. is head of the Island, among the other members being Joseph Ryerson, the Alfred Cartons, the Donald Ryersons, Mr. and Mrs. Earle Reynolds, and the Francis Manierres, while the Coleman lake group includes the Watson Armours, Mrs. James Heyworth, the Joseph Cudahys, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Hopkins, the Robert Hixons, and George Scott. Fishing and shooting are the popular diversions of the two organizations, and from early spring to late autumn the latchstring is out to varying installments of members and their guests.

Speaking of the "clubby" outings of the season, two of the gallants of the town, Slason Thompson and Edmund A. Russell, have set out on a long trek to attend the summer meeting of the Hi Jinks Bohemian club. The headquarters are in San Francisco, but the annual warm weather convening is held in a lovely wooded grove to the north of that California city, over a period of a fortnight. During that time plays written by the members—newspaper men and actors—are read, produced and criticized, and at the end a grand finale play is put on. This club is one of the oldest in the country, as well as one of the most amusing. Real wit, clever repartée and good conversation are the order of the day, and there's an audible sigh of regret as the hour of departure draws near.

Summer Wanderers.

As to other summer wanderings, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Dick left here last week for Schenectady, where they picked up their new automobile and motored thence to Pittsfield to spend the week-end with Mrs. Warren Salisbury. From there they went on to Guilford, Conn., to visit their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Swan, for a few days, and they are now with their son and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon Dick, at Provincetown, Mass. Before they return to this part of the world, they will pay a visit to the Secor Cunninghams, who are spending the summer at Hyannisport.

Mrs. Charles Deering started for the west on Monday to be with her son, Roger Deering, at Albuquerque, for a few weeks, and Mrs. Forsythe Sherfesse has arrived in Chicago after a trip abroad. She is staying at the Ambassador East during her sojourn here, and motored out to Lake Forest for a Friday-to-Monday visit with the Donald Ryersons last week.

One of the most diverting parties of the week was that given at Shoreacres on Wednesday by a sprightly feminine quartet—Mrs. Harry B. Clow, Mrs. Frank P. Hixon, Mrs. William L. Hodgkins, and Mrs. Marvin Pool. We don't know just which of the four was elected poet laureate for the occasion—perhaps each of them contributed a verse—but some clever pen produced a gay little poem for the invitation cards:

We are good members of the Shoreacres club,
And right good members we,
We invite you there, to some contests rare,
Or an afternoon by the sea.

You can tennis, golf or bridge,
Or place a blot upon the ridge
Of a big backgammon board.
You can win or lose a ball,
You can putt the best of all,
When by lunch you've been restored.

If you're never, never late
At a function so sedate,
Twelve-thirty must not go by.
Next Wednesday is the day,
'Tis the twenty-third, they say,
And the month is hot July.

The box is 163,
To which R. S. V. P.
To tell the game you choose.
We say to each of you,
And it's really, really true,
We hope not one of you will lose.

Old Games Revived.

Apropos of the "blot upon the ridge," it's interesting to note what a revival there is in the games of our youth—games that have been practically out of business for the last ten or fifteen years. Backgammon has come into its own once more. No longer is there a wail if a fourth for contract cannot be found. The backgammon board is produced and a game started, thoroughly enjoyed by all those who like to take their sports sitting down.

For those more athletically inclined ping pong and badminton are popular pastimes. Mrs. E. L. Hasler has her ping pong table set up under a tree in her charming Lake Forest garden. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Aldis have a badminton court at the foot of the steps leading to the Play House, their summer abode in the same community, and a ping pong table graces the stage of the attractive little cottage. Almost every afternoon at tea time finds an enthusiastic group gathered for an informal tournament, to be followed by a swim in the Aldis pool before dinner.

Artists and Exhibitions

Problems Connected with Jury-Selected and Invited Canvases at the Same Show Are Discussed by Chicago Painters.

By Eleanor Jewett.

AN extremely interesting point was brought up in the Palette and Chisel club bulletin for May. It is as timely now as then and indeed is of such stuff as stirs our sympathies at any season in the year. It brings out again a question which has been agitated among artists and public alike for several years, the question of the makeup of exhibits. The argument opens with a quotation from a recent magazine article by Robert B. Harshe, director of the Art institute, and is doubly interesting on this score. It is always fascinating to get behind the scenes, if only a little, and see how the minds of those in authority work.

Mr. Harshe wrote: "The selection of works for group or one man exhibitions is generally done by the museum expert in the specific field and does not constitute a problem. Larger exhibitions, however, where works are chosen by a jury mean conflicts of opinion, compromises and lowered standards. Museums seek to obtain juries whose decisions will be broad and catholic, but, generally speaking, they seek in vain. In the large exhibitions of American art some museums choose a percentage of works by invitation through the staff expert or an invitation committee. The works thus obtained through invitation are always higher in standard than works chosen by the jury."

Artists' Club Answers.

To my mind, exception may be taken to the use of the word "always" in this last sentence. Not infrequently in the various Art institute shows themselves the "always" is unjustified. The Palette and Chisel club answers the challenge with spirit:

"Whether the invited artists are permitted to send works of their own selection, or are asked to submit examples already known to the museum expert would also be interesting information, but not absolutely necessary. It is inconceivable that an artist honored by an invitation would send in works of which he did not himself feel sure and that probably accounts for the superiority of the invited pictures and statuary. In too many instances the sending of pictures to juries comes in the category of 'passing the buck'—and the jury simply falls down, not 'boom' but bamboozled."

Again I take issue with the suggestion that the invited works are superior to the juried pieces. In occasional instances they are, chiefly, however, when the entire rating of the exhibit is extraordinarily low. In a first class local exhibit the invited foreign paintings fall into line as valuable contemporary work.

The Palette and Chisel club follows the argument up with a demand that has been voiced by numberless people. The late Edward B. Butler, benefactor to the Art institute, trustee for many years, business man and artist, the one to whom we owe the beautiful collection of Inness landscapes, wanted very much to put the suggested variation into effect. It is made clear in the following few lines submitted by the Palette and Chisel club:

"We can see great advantages in exclusively invited shows and possibly some in shows that are exclusively selected by juries, but if local exhibitions are to be made up of some juried and some invited exhibits, it is a pity one or the other cannot be starred in the catalogue or in the corner of the frame. One dislikes to visit the sins of the jury upon 'the powers that be,' even by implication."

Similarly, it is unfair to credit a jury with certain pieces which are there by invitation.

"DIGBY'S MANSION," by Increase Robinson, one of the younger Chicago artists whose working studio last winter in the Fine Arts building was a center for many enthusiastic painters. Mrs. Robinson has a sure touch and a fine sense of values. She exhibits each season in many of the local exhibitions. The Cordon club, the Fine Arts building and the Art institute knew her last winter.

Another interesting activity of hers is the giving of lectures. She also conducts tours during various of the institute shows. She is a daughter of the painter, Josephine L. Reichmann.

Almost a Closed Corporation.

The Art institute exhibitions have become in the eyes of a great and increasing number of artists almost a closed corporation. There are three of our best known painters, acknowledged as leaders in our city and away, who will not send to the Art institute shows. As one says: "Why should I let my work suffer by innuendo by being turned down by their jury? I have my public and maintain my prices now. How long would it be before my value fell off in the eyes of my clients if they heard that my canvases were consistently rejected?"

On the subject of artists who refuse to take a chance with the jury, Mr. Kelly, head of the Art institute art school, does not object to being quoted as having let fly this quip: "There are some artists who should have their backbone where their wishbone is."

All very well and quite amusing, but the artists have a certain amount of justification for their stand. It is a matter of common knowledge that the Art institute favors its graduate students and its instructors. A great many of the annual prize awards can be construed in no other light.

On the other hand, according to Mr. Harshe, the Chicago Art institute does more for the local artists than any other museum in the country. He mentioned the Metropolitan museum in New York and the museum in Boston as two examples of institutes which did nothing at all for their local men. Of course, Boston is not particularly important; it is rather small. New York, on the other hand, throbs with life and has an infinite number of channels through which its artists find expression. New York has three good galleries, at least, to Chicago's one. The New York painters scarcely need the Metropolitan. That can easily stand back and remain imposingly aloof from contemporary flurries. The Chicago Art institute is at the center of Chicago's art life. It should be the hub, with the commercial galleries so many spokes in the wheel.

Nothing could be as drastically futile as for the Chicago Art institute to wipe its skirts clear of the vigorous, changing young life which is growing up around it. Nothing would stultify the premise on which it is founded more quickly than to revert to the cloistered sanctity of permanent, authenticated collections. The temporary exhibits in the east wing galleries are the breath of life in its nostrils. To bar Chicago artists from these rooms would be to deal another blow at Chicago initiative and enthusiasm and artistic generation and to send more of our much needed citizenry to New York.

Painters Work Together.

The artists of Chicago at this moment are working together as never before. They are turning a united front towards the furtherance of their cause, which is the recognition of merit. One may be a member of any group or school or class; if what one does is good, nothing else matters. The artists want greater public recognition. They want the respect which is due talent.

Josef Israels, an old man, entered the opera house at The Hague one night to listen to a performance. As he came in, the whole house rose to its feet—in homage. They recognized him for what he was—a great artist. Where would you see such respect on this side of the Atlantic? The nearest is the applause which greets the conductor of the orchestra when he takes his desk before the symphony or the opera stage.

A step towards the recognition of the Chicago artist is the making of the annual Chicago artists' exhibition at the Art institute each spring not merely another exhibition, but THE exhibition of the year. It should have the support of the women's clubs; a formal reception on the first day with the club women at their tables. The ovation which is usually rendered the American show in the fall should be given in kind to the Chicago show in the spring. Mr. Harshe says he is willing and that it is up to the clubs themselves.

Will the clubs take this up and report to me or to him on this matter? It may seem trivial, but no step is too unimportant to bother with in a matter which may mean, in the course of the years, a remarkable advance in the status of Chicago art and those who are making it.

And do not forget the Goodman! July is almost at an end and steps should be in the taking now for the formation of the 1930 company. Who will be in it? Who direct it? Are the trustees of the Art institute still in charge? Would Mr. Stevens return if he were reinvested with full power? What plays may we expect? Will nothing but silence or cautious implications be doled out by the museum in regard to this important matter?

DREAMS

Have you ever had a dream which later came true? If so, send it to "Dreams," The Tribune, if you care to have it published. No manuscripts returned.

Dressed Up.

I have a girl friend who lives in a town a few miles from my home town and whom I rarely see although we were best friends when we attended the same school. She was very attractive, but her choice of clothes lacked good taste. I dreamed one night that I met her on the street and she was wearing a very becoming green ensemble with hat to match and she looked better than I had ever seen her. About a week later I received a great shock upon meeting her on the street in the very outfit that I saw her wear in my dreams. It was such an uncanny feeling that I couldn't forget it. C. H.

Dream Cottage.

A year ago I dreamed again and again my brother and I were traveling. At journey's end we came to a cottage upon a hill; below was a large sparkling lake. That same year my brother purchased a summer home and suggested we spend our vacations there. At first glance of the place my dream came back to me—here stood the little cottage upon the hill and below was the beautiful sparkling lake just as I had dreamed. M. J.

Comes by Plane.

I received a wire from California from my sweetheart saying he was leaving that day to visit me. That night I dreamed repeatedly that he stood with his arms outstretched saying: "I will see you tomorrow, I will see you tomorrow." I awoke wondering as I knew his train couldn't arrive for two days at least. Well, he arrived that day just as I had seen him in my dream, running toward me with his arms outstretched. He had come by plane. S. M.

Won Fruit Cake.

One night during the holiday season last year I dreamed I had won a fruit cake by drawing the lucky number on a punch board. I had punched the hole that was seven rows from the bottom and three rows from the left. The next morning when I stopped at a store on my way to work I noticed a punch board on the counter. I selected the identical hole and surely enough as it had been vividly described the night before I won a fruit cake. Needless to say, I am a firm believer in dreams now. P. L.

U.S. Ice Cream Goes Over Successfully with the Chinese

SHANGHAI—(AP)—Making the Chinese ice cream conscious is a hurdle over which American owned dairy and produce companies in China are making successful leaps.

The profitable marketing of ice cream in Shanghai and interior China has become a reality and the trade continues to expand despite the fact that the country is passing through another of its civil wars. Indications presage the greatest summer the industry has enjoyed since introduced five years ago.

The ice cream manufacturers, to meet their growing business, have been forced to build larger factories and at the same time to increase both their sales and factory organizations.

Ice cream first made its appearance in China in 1925 when Paul Crawley, American medicine show man and amateur author, opened up a small restaurant in the downtown district and imported a few tubs of cream from Seattle. He sold out his stock in a single day.

Other confectioners and eventually one large large produce company followed Crawley's lead and within a few months every boat coming from Seattle brought a large cargo of ice cream.

At first the ice cream shipped from America was mostly consumed by foreigners but as time passed the Chinese developed a taste for the sweet and sales mounted so rapidly that it was necessary to start home manufacture.

Now there are more than a dozen plants in Shanghai and they are growing. Even the Chinese have entered the field and operate several small factories.

Austria Gets Copyright on Its President

VIENNA.—(AP)—The title of "bundespresident" or "president of the union," has been copyrighted by the Austrian government so that it can be used only by the chief executive of the republic.

The law was passed after a man was presented to President Miklas as "bundespresident" of a trade federation and each had to address the other as "Herr Bundespresident."

There are 22,000 societies and "bunds" in Austria and the authorities decided it was time to end a situation which might possibly lead to confusion between the president of Austria and the head of a union of fish peddlers.

My Most Embarrassing Moment

What was the most embarrassing moment of your life? If you care to have it published, address Embarrassing Moments, Chicago Tribune. Please write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.

Umbrella Story.

Recently I met a very charming person, the wife of an influential man who had been appointed the head of a division in a great organization with which my husband was connected. My husband was chosen assistant to this man and naturally I hoped his wife should like me, and I wished to make the proper impression.

We had a tea engagement one afternoon and as we emerged from the dining room of one of our high class hotels we noticed quite a mist and I raised my umbrella. Try to realize my embarrassment when we were walking through the tunnel underneath the boulevard to the station when she looked at me sympathetically and remarked: "We do not need the umbrella here, dear." Yes, I was overcome with embarrassment and still feel that she is sorry for me. L. M. R.

Wrong Lindbergh.

I work in a small office, and my boy friend was acquiring the habit of calling me every noon hour, and beginning the conversation with, "This is Cal Coolidge," or "This is Mr. Rockefeller," or something to that effect. One noon hour, the day after we had a slight quarrel, the phone rang and I answered it. A voice answered, "Hello, this is Lindbergh calling." Believing it to be the boy friend, I said, "Well, Lindy, you've got your nerve calling here expecting me to fall on your neck at your call!" Can you imagine my surprise when the voice at the other end replied, "Well, little girl, I don't know what it's all about but would it be too much bother to connect me to the manager's office? I'd like to give him an order. This is Mr. Lindbergh of Mr. ———'s office." I was certainly glad television was not in effect so he couldn't see the embarrassment I was caused. B. R.

Ready for Business.

I am a physician and have a great habit, when examining patients' chests at the hospital, of hanging my stethoscope around my neck. The other day I had a luncheon engagement with my wife and some out of town friends. I was terribly busy at the hospital all morning and arrived at the fashionable tea room where I was to meet them fully a half hour late. As I rushed in I was met with amused glances on all sides and subdued titters. My stethoscope was still dangling about my neck! H. H. C.

Just a Slip.

Following is my idea of a real embarrassing moment, which actually happened to me: It was about fifteen years ago, when girls still wore long petticoats, and I was a dashing widow. My suitor called to take me to the Field museum. As we were going up those long steps my slip some how or other became unfastened, and slipped. However, my beau, with great presence of mind, folded it up and put it in his pocket. We are married now, but I still blush when I think of it. M. F. N.

At a Dance.

It occurred at an informal dance. I had asked a young lady for the next dance and when the orchestra began to play I went to claim my partner who was standing in a group of young ladies, all of whom I knew. As I approached, Betty, who was facing me, thinking I was coming to ask her, stepped forward with an expectant air. To both of our embarrassment, I passed her up and danced off with Flo. A. W.

She Answers.

It was terrible! I always respond in some manner when spoken to or called; but I wish I didn't. While on the "L" the other morning, the conductor shrieked out "Ann!"

With a quick turn towards him I quickly answered "What?" in what seemed to me a scared voice. Instantly many people rose from their seats to depart from the "L" at the street called "Ann" with sneers and chuckles for me. Need I say more? A. B.

Waters of Vichy Attract Many U. S. Travelers

Famous Resort Offers Opera, Sports.

By May Birkhead.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS. — [Special.] — Every one who travels, reads, listens, eats, or drinks knows something about Vichy. Its fame is over 2,000 years old. Cæsar passed near the site which the Romans named the town of hot waters, "Vicus Aqua Calidae," and here were built the famous thermae discovered about a century ago.

Monks of the middle ages knew the healing properties of these springs. Under Henry IV. prosperity was revived. The house is still shown where Mme. de Sevigne came after a seven days' trip from Paris in a carriage drawn by six horses in the year 1676. She had a villa in Vichy where she took an annual treatment for rheumatism. She wrote in her letters that "at 6 in the morning you go to springs and every one is there, every one drinks and makes wry faces, for the waters are boiling hot and the saltpeter tastes very bitter."

Diversified Amusements.

Today Vichy is in the height of the season, as it is the most animated thermal resort in Europe, with its casino and opera, which draws brilliant audiences from both hemispheres; horse races, a renowned golf course, tennis, a swimming pool, regattas, and clubs, all to amuse the throngs after drinking and bathing in the celebrated waters.

The entire thermal region in the Auvergne mountains, with cures for every known disease, has become in recent years a cure center for Americans. Vichy forms a good point of departure for all these thermal centers. Mont-Dore has more American clients each year for asthma and hay fever cure, while Royat has principally patients for heart cure. Other centers with famous waters are Saint Nectaire, especially for rheumatism, and Labourboule, whose waters have more arsenic than any of the others and cure bronchitis.

Chicagoans taking the latter cure are Mrs. C. Tabor and her children. Americans are annual patients at Vichy, and Bernard Baruch for several years has had hopes of making Saratoga Springs a thermal center fashioned after it. Mortimer Schiff is taking a cure, attending the races. Mrs. Virginia Fair Vanderbilt has just completed one.

Chicagoans in Paris.

Chicagoans now visiting in Paris after traveling in Europe are Mrs. George F. Porter, who has been in Stockholm; William W. Forrester and his wife, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter W. Head have just arrived and will spend a week here before traveling through central Europe. Victor de Bont and his wife are going to Holland before sailing for home on Aug. 1.

Senator George F. Harding, Phil W. Collins and Mrs. Collins, and Howard P. Savage and his wife have just arrived. They are going to Brussels next week and then to Berlin, where Mr. Savage is to have an audience with President Paul von Hindenburg.

Social Notables Throng the Dunes

NARRAGANSETT, R. I., July 26.—[Special.]—Society continues to throng the Dunes club, with many luncheons being given on the verandas.

Other guests included Mrs. Irving Chase, Mrs. John P. Kellogg, Mrs. Isaac Emerson, Mrs. Henry Graves Jr., Mrs. Samuel H. Valentine, Mrs. John C. Poor, Mrs. Ernest Wilkinson, and Mrs. John B. Lewis.

Among the visitors here was Joseph P. Widener, who arrived by yacht from Newport. His guests included Mr. and Mrs. J. Gordon Douglas and Robert E. Strawbridge.

Society Wakes from Slumber as Scene Shifts to Saratoga

spin, no matter what the political situation may be.

But it is at the famous race track that one sees every one in the daintiest of summer frocks. All the notables of Broadway and of the racing world are there, but they take second place to the notables of society. There one sees the impressive Mrs. Dicky Wilson, gray, faintly florid; the tall and still impressive Mrs. Charles Minot Armory; the buxom, kindly Mrs. Payne Whitney; the chiffon clad Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney; blonde, fragile Mrs. Vincent Astor; the dark Mrs. Tiffany Saportas; the amazingly imposing Mrs. Oliver Harriman, with her perfect corona of white hair.

Every one comes to Saratoga during August by way of town from every resort in the country. There is no race meeting in all the United States that has so great a social flavor as the annual Saratoga month.

* *

Service for Brides.

Here in town we are quietly preparing for the winter to come. September is to be a month of marriages, with the calendar already full of notable nuptials. Débuts by the score are scheduled and the new Hotel Pierre, with its Georgian ballroom, is to be the scene of most of the important bows.

A bit of news that has intrigued society is that Marie Coudert Brennig has discovered another outlet for the energy with which most our modern society maidens are blessed.

A career is nothing unusual for post-debutantes these days. No end of them have gone in for the theater. Others have opened travel agencies and booked their friends at every hotel throughout the world and on every possible sort of conveyance. But now comes Marie with a new idea—a service for brides, which she calls "The Wedding Embassy, Inc."

* *

"Wedding Embassy."

Marie is a granddaughter of the late Charles Coudert, a notable social light as well as a famous legal one of several generations past. Her mother, who was Aimee Coudert, is now Mrs. William Moore Dongan de Peyster, which is as imposing a name as any novelist could imagine. More so, in fact.

Marie also is a niece of Mrs. J. N. Victor Onativia Jr., who was Clarrissa Coudert and the first spouse of Conde Nast. Her sisters are Mrs. Frank Henry Jr. and Mrs. Peter Lawson, while her brothers are Charles Brennig, Joseph and B. Frederic Brennig.

With such a large family to surround her, Marie felt quite confident in going into business. For some time she acted as social consultant for large shops in New York—instructing their clients in the proper dressing of bridesmaids and brides. Now she has decided that she might just as well do the work on her own and the "Wedding Embassy" is the result.

Here, amid quiet surroundings, Marie will interview palpitant mothers with more money than social understanding and tell them just how they should conduct the wedding—just what clothes the bride should wear and where they should be bought—just what flowers the bridesmaids should carry and who the florist should be to provide them. In fact, as one of Marie's friends explained it, "Marie just says to them, 'Now don't bother. Just leave yourself in my hands and I'll marry you—quietly, fashionably, and as expensively as you wish.'"

Tennis Play Takes Southampton Stage

SOUTHAMPTON, L. I., July 26.—[Special.]—Tennis took first place here this week. The opening of the junior tennis tournament at the Meadow club is the big event scheduled for today, the Cameron, Fox, and Babcoc cups being the rewards.

Many entertainments have been given during the week. Mrs. Albert F. Jaeckel gave a luncheon at her Main street home. Mrs. Raymond J. Schueizer gave a dinner at Gortmore in honor of her house guest, Mrs. Edwin McCally.

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

"Hot Dog" Is Aged Ol' Hound, Vienna Finds

VIENNA.—(AP)—The succulent sausage known in America as "hot dog" and in the rest of the civilized world as a Frankfurther, celebrates this year its one hundred and twenty-fifth birthday.

Despite its given name, the popular titbit is not a native of Frankfurt. It first saw the light of day here in 1805 when Johann Georg Lahner evolved it. Lahner, however, had learned the butcher trade in the German city and named his sausage after that town.

The firm of Lahner still exists here and it was on the 125th anniversary of its foundation that the history of the Frankfurter was compiled. The firm still possesses on order from Milan, dated 1842, calling for supplies.

The pre-war emperor of Austro-Hungary, Francis Joseph, was an ardent consumer of "hot dogs" and nearly every morning when he was in residence he sent to an eating house near the palace for a pair of sausages and a glass of foaming beer. These he consumed as a second breakfast or first luncheon at 11 o'clock.

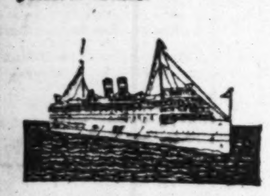
VERY IMPORTANT

CANADA STEAMSHIP LINES operate from the head of Lake Superior, via the St. Lawrence River, to the Saguenay. Their cruises include the seven day trip from Detroit to Duluth and return; Niagara to the Saguenay, including the Thousand Islands, and shooting the rapids; excursions from Toronto, the Queen City, to Niagara, the Thousand Islands and Rochester. They operate a fleet of 106 steamers, freight and passenger, and are the largest fresh water transportation company in the world. The famous Saguenay trip includes visits to Montreal, metropolis of Canada; Quebec, the historic walled city; Murray Bay, "Newport of the North" and Tadoussac, Canada's oldest settlement. The Saguenay Canyon is one of nature's masterpieces.

Our steamers may be boarded at Lewiston, Rochester, Duluth or Detroit in the U.S.A., or Sarnia, Queenston, Toronto, Montreal or Quebec in Canada.



HAVE you ever seen a genuine camera-shy "Mountie" in a smart red tunic? You will probably run across one or two of this famous corps as you journey through French Canada. This lower St. Lawrence country—the cradle of Canadian history—is brimful of new and interesting sights.

The habitant woman spinning at her doorstep, or baking huge loaves in an outdoor oven, the woodsman shouldering his axe and striding along in soft moccasins, the little boys driving their big dogs at a gallop in home-made carts—these are part of the delightful, simple life of French Canada's beloved habitants.

Our large modern steamers ply from Niagara, via the St. Lawrence river to the distant Saguenay. Air that stirs the blood like a bugle call, the grandeur of mountain scenery, new congenial friends—all go to make up a memorable vacation cruise, as delightful as a trip abroad.

Please write at once for illustrated folder, which describes in detail the pleasures of this wonderful vacation cruise.

Churches Put More Emphasis on Devotion

Council Appeals for Spiritual Values.

By the Rev. John Evans.

A SHIFT toward a greater emphasis on devotional matters in American church life is observed in a message dispatched from the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America last week. The letter deals solely with an appeal for a greater cultivation of spiritual values and an increased demand for active evangelism.

The message grew out of a conference held at East Northfield, Mass., under the auspices of the commission on evangelism of the Federal council. It is divided into two parts. First is a general call for an evangelism program, and the second contains suggested programs for individual churches.

United action on the part of all Christians of all communions is asked in order that Christianity make a "religious impact upon the world with any measure of effectiveness." The message applauds "the many evidences of closer coöperation in the work of evangelism."

The Rev. R. Malcolm Ward of Christ Episcopal church, Winnetka, is leaving Chicago today for the Philippine islands, where he expects to serve the rest of his ministry as a missionary. He will be rector of the Cathedral of St. Mary and St. John in Manila, and also rector of the Cathedral school there. He has been for three years assistant rector of Christ church.

St. Luke's Episcopal church, 741 South Western avenue, is to lose its front this next week. Wreckers already are at work tearing down a portion of the historic old edifice. The widening of Western avenue has made necessary alterations in the St. Luke's property. The Rev. H. L. Cawthorne has been rector of this parish for thirty-two years, and it is with a real pang of regret that he is to see the old edifice mutilated, he says. The alterations will cost between $15,000 and $20,000.

The often neglected field of the continued training of new members of the churches was pointed out in the letter. It stated that a new council pamphlet is about to be issued that will bear on "establishing the new members in a normal Christian family life, and in the building of Christian communities and a social order that shall embody and reflect the spirit of Christ."

Indorsement of evangelistic conferences being held at intervals in population centers was given. The message urged the expansion of these conferences in order that inspiration may be carried to the individual congregations. A program suggested for individual churches to adapt to their own needs follows:

Oct. 5. "Rally day." Such a day brings emphasis "on family church attendance at the beginning of a new church year. The day should be preceded in September by a thorough visitation of the parish. Workers should be sent to all individual members reminding them of their church responsibility."

Nov. 23. "Thanksgiving Sunday." "There should be a worthy autumn gathering in every church," the message declares. "The evangelistic work during the autumn may well lead up to Thanksgiving Sunday as membership day."

Jan. 4 to 10. "Week of prayer for the churches." The letter states that this period should involve scriptural study, meditation and public services.

Feb. 18 to April 5, the Lenten and Easter period. The council message urges regular church attendance during this period together with stimulated personal and family devotions. It adds that "downtown theater or church noon-day services be arranged for one or two weeks before Easter and suggests that Palm Sunday and Easter be made days "of great ingathering of new members."

May 24—Pentecost or Whitsunday. The message declares that Pentecost should be the climax of evangelistic endeavor.

The Rev. Thomas White Currie, D. D., moderator of the southern Presbyterian church and president of the Presbyterian Theological seminary, Austin, Tex., will be the preacher this morning and tonight at the Fourth Presbyterian church.

The popularity of Eugene Field, the children's poet, is growing rather than diminishing as the years go by, according to the Rev. Leland H. Danforth, rector of the Episcopal Church of the Holy Comforter, Kenilworth. Dr. Danforth bases his statement on the growing interest shown in the Field shrine, which is connected with his church.

The shrine is attracting more and more visitors, particularly during the summer season, Dr. Danforth said. Especially do young people and children take pride in visiting the place where the noted writer lies buried.

Beautification of the shrine has just been completed, adding greatly to the attractiveness of the place. Field is buried in the center of the cloister close at the Kenilworth church. Nearly 100 shrubs and trees have been set out in the close and other landscaping completed. The improvements were done with funds given by George C. Phillips Jr. in memory of his father, the late George C. Phillips.

The arched cloister, running from the church to the rectory, appears at the front of the shrine. To the rear is a stone altar, flanked by shrubs and trees. Looking out over the shrine from the church is a memorial window in honor of a grandson of the poet's, who sang in the parish choir as a boy.

The Rev. Albert W. Palmer, D. D., president of the Chicago Theological seminary, will be the preacher this morning at the University of Chicago chapel. Dr. Palmer has just returned from the Bournemouth, England, meeting of world-wide leaders of the Congregational church.

Sermons and Services

THE REV. DR. ALMER M. PENNEWELL.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

During August the pews of the Ravenswood Methodist Episcopal church will do the preaching. This was announced by the Rev. Dr. Pennewell, pastor of the Ravenswood church, who stated that instead of calling ministers to supply the pulpit of the church during the pastor's vacation, leading laymen have been selected to do the preaching.

France Raises Field Marshal Pay to $5,600

PARIS.—(AP)—Joffre, Franchet d'Esperey, Petain, Lyautey, marshals of France and listed among the greatest leaders of the world war, have had their pay raised.

As part of the new army pay schedule they will now draw the yearly remuneration of 140,000 francs, about $5,600.

While this may seem modest, as compared with Gen. Pershing's $18,000 a year, the rate for the lower ranks is even more striking. For instance a general commanding a division will receive $4,133 while a brigade commander will get $2,520.

Among the company officers the new scale runs from $535 a year for a second lieutenant to $1,225 for a captain. Majors will get $1,526, and colonels from $1,710 to $2,105.

However there is one bright spot in the new level. The rate is made retroactive to July 1, 1929, and payments of back pay are now going on.

Wine Vats Brim Over as Italians Gulp Down Beer

Crisis Acute; Many Are Out of Work.

ROME.—(AP)—The wine vats of Italy are overflowing because Italians are not drinking wine as they used to do.

The country is facing one of the most acute wine crises in her history. Thousands of vineyard workers and wine makers are out of work. And the hundreds of by-product people, middlemen, and dealers who depend on the wine industry are suffering also.

The answer to the puzzle is "beer," the foaming beverage having made tremendous strides in Italian favor since the war.

Italian wine has a tendency to turn to vinegar if kept too long. Hence most of the wine that cannot be sold at once is lost. The value of the wine thus going to waste is expressed in millions of dollars.

* *

Crisis Not New One.

A congress of wine industries was held here under the auspices of the National Fascist Federation of Wine industries. Members of all branches of the industry, vineyard owners, renters and producers, wine manufacturers, merchants and shippers, and owners of by-product industries, were in the session.

Prof. Francesco Carpentieri, director of the federation and who presided at the congress, said in an interview:

"The wine crisis, although connected with the general economic crisis which has struck all countries of the world, has particularly in Italy characteristics of its own. A wine crisis is not a new thing. In the last thirty years there have been a half dozen, one of which lasted three years, from 1908 through 1910.

* *

Production Excessive.

"Today conditions are worse because the consumption of wine is considerably reduced. Production on the other hand is excessive."

Prof. Carpentieri's remedy was contained in his word "discipline."

"A severe discipline is as necessary in the productive field as in the commercial and industrial field," he said, "a discipline which regulates production quantitatively as well as qualitatively and which reassures the consumer as to the origin and quality of the wine."

Prof. Carpentieri was careful not to mention beer. Yet if its sale could be prohibited he and his wine men would never need to worry.

Crooks Act and Dress Like Gentlemen.

COLLINSON OWEN, an Englishman who writes on American films, recently gave Hollywood the once-over and, we hear, was somewhat disillusioned by propinquity. Said Mr. Owen, according to report: "The homes, the girls, the sunshine, the gardens are all very pleasant and alluring, and yet, to the stranger, there is something lacking. I think it is flavor, taste. Hollywood and all about it is so new—the newest thing in America—that it hasn't had time to accumulate any flavors. It is full of nice streets, but it hasn't got a dark alley."

Angora Revives Rose Industry of Old Turkey

War Destroyed Fields of Flowers.

ANGORA.—(AP)—That there are no thorns without roses is a new twist to an old bromide which Mustapha Kemal's fortress capital in the wilds of Asia Minor is happily learning.

Angora has had a thorny time emerging from its former bareness to its present rosiness, but it has emerged. Acacias and roses are blooming where the first saplings set out by the Ghazi and his cohorts refused to take root, or were pulled up by peasants who used them as sticks to drive their flocks.

Roses now grow so well in the Angora plain that this may develop into a renaissance center for an ancient but languishing Turkish industry, the manufacture of essence of roses, the powerful perfume in each Turkish drop of which is the sweetness of 400 blooms.

War Destroyed Rose Fields.

The Turko-Greek war and the new Turkey's backsliding from Islamic practices had shares in the decline of this industry which was once as active in certain Anatolian regions as it is today in "the valley of roses" in Bulgaria. The war destroyed the great fields of roses, and the weakening of Islam diminished the Turkish demand for roseoil, known as the "Odor of Islam" because of its use for perfuming prayer beads and the pages of the Koran.

Before the war, Turkey exported annually about $300,000 worth of the essence. In 1928 this figure fell to $50,000. Now, with the probable coöperation of French experts, the industry is to be reënlivened.

* *

Favored by Foreigners.

The Turkish product is favored by foreign perfume manufacturers because of its potency and freedom from adulteration. By the Turkish standard, 22 pounds of roses, heated in 20 gallons of water, produce by condensation 3 to 4 grams of essence, a higher return than is obtained in France.

The history of this famous perfume goes back to the 16th century and to the Princess Nour-i-Djihan of Persia. Walking one day in her gardens in Shiraz, she noticed oily foam in bowls wherein roses had been pressed, and found this foam to be the very essence of rose sweetness. The manufacture of the essence spread to Turkey and the Turks carried the industry to Bulgaria.

American Cash Helps Further Turk Fascism

ANGORA, Turkey.—(AP)—American philanthropy and Mussolini both had parts in the creation of Angora's most magnificent edifice, the headquarters of the Turkish Hearth society.

The beginning of this marble "palace of culture and nationalism" was made possible by a gift of $120,000 from the late "Golden Rule" Nash, Cincinnati manufacturer. With this as a starter, the Turkish Hearth society, an eastern equivalent of Mussoloni's Junior Fascists, raised the thousands more which have gone into this million dollar building.

* *

American Lauded.

Designed by a Turkish architect, Hikmet Bey, it is a striking departure from most of Angora's new occidentalized buildings in its faithful adherence to old Turkish architectural ideas.

Tributes to Mr. Nash, to the American Y. M. C. A. as the type of social organization which Turkey wishes to emulate, and to Mussolini's Black Shirts as embodying the nationalistic fire which the Turkish Hearth aims to keep alight throughout Anatolia, were made in the president's inaugural address. An audience of cabinet ministers, deputies, and other high functionaries thundered applause.

32,000 Members.

The building contains the finest theater in the near east, reception rooms decorated in the old Turkish style with divans of rare brocades, fireplaces with witch-cap hoods, and soft-colored tiles, frescoes, and rugs; a library, a printing press, and recreation rooms. All this is for the youth of Asia Minor whom the Kemalist government would teach to abandon the mud-hut ideas of their fathers.

The Turkish Hearth began humbly 20 years ago when a group of students, dedicating themselves to the spread of culture and social betterment, met secretly in the cypress-shrouded cemetery of Scutari. With the support of the new government and with the Junior Fascists as a stimulating example, the society has grown to count 32,000 members with 257 centers scattered throughout Turkey.

King Solomon's Port of Gold Faces Revival

JERUSALEM.—(AP)—Elath, the Biblical port on the Dead sea, whence Solomon's gold fleets sailed to Ophir, may function once more as port for the modern chemical treasures of the Dead sea.

The concession for the exploitation of the mineral resources of the Dead sea, the text of which has recently been published by the government, provides for the construction of a railway line to Akaba which is the modern Arabic name for the ancient Biblical site.

While the government is restoring the harbor, the concessionaires will probably transport their products by motor to Jaffe or Haifa, or may construct a suspension railway from the Dead sea to Jerusalem or to the Biblical Beth-Shan in the Jordan valley.

But eventually truck loads of potash and other valuable material will daily be transported from Jericho to the ancient port of Solomon while warehouses and shipping offices, business premises and directors' villas will revive in the small Arab fishing village, the ancient glories of the erstwhile trading center of the Jewish state.

Parties Welcome Yachtsmen to Mackinac Island

Many Chicagoans Spending Summer There.

Mackinac Island, Mich., July 26.—[Special.]—The island has been the scene of many gay parties by and for Chicagoans during the last week. The twenty-third annual Chicago yacht race to Mackinac drew many friends and relatives of the sailors here for the finish. When the Karas yacht Siren crossed the finish line and was declared winner there was much hilarity in and around the tent erected for the judge and committee. The local harbor presented a very beautiful sight when all contending craft were anchored. The departure of the yachts began on Wednesday, many going on to Georgian Bay, while others returned to Chicago via Harbor Point and Charlevoix.

George Packard came from the city to spend the week-end with his family at British Landing. The Packards are entertaining their daughter, Mrs. F. Farrington Holt, and children of Birmingham, Mich.

The J. W. Cremins entertained a number of young guests during the week.

The W. W. and Homer Dixons are enjoying their respective summer places. The younger Dixons are spending much time on horseback as usual. Another fearless young horsewoman is Miss Shirley Garnet, daughter of the Cyrus Garnetts.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Thomas are at home in their beautiful cottage, the former David Hogg place. Mrs. Robert W. Bell always has some guests at her cottage. The Bell yacht Carrie Etta is tied up at the state yacht dock. Dr. and Mrs. Robert H. Harvey are anticipating a house party for a number of the younger set.

It is pleasing to report that the Hubert Burnhams will occupy Burnham Hall for short periods during the warm spell.

At the Wawashkamo Golf club one glimpses many well known members and their guests.

Baltic Cities Erect Shrines to Old War

PEENEMUENDE, Germany.—(AP)—As if there were not enough war memorials of recent date this little Baltic port and its Swedish counterpart have erected monuments to commemorate a war that was fought 300 years ago.

In the thirty years war, 1618 to 1648, King Gustav Adolf of Sweden landed at Peenemuende July 4, 1630, in his campaign to save German Protestantism.

The monument here was unveiled in the presence of German and Swedish authorities and clergy. On the Swedish side, at Elfsnabben, an obelisk was recently erected on the spot whence Gustav Adolph set sail.

Clerks Out for "Softer" Positions in Australia

SYDNEY, Australia.—(AP)—Clerks in the state of New South Wales want a 33 per cent increase in their wages, cushioned seats, morning and afternoon teas provided free by their employers, and working hours reduced to 35 per week.

They also want three months' holiday after ten years' employment and no dismissals without the concurrence of the union boss.

These are the claims they are making to the Arbitration court which regulates wages and conditions of employment.

MRS. RAYMOND GUY NOTTOLI was, before her recent marriage, Miss Marjorie Rita Kleine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles O. Kleine of 7135 Wrightwood avenue. She and her husband are to reside at 4207 Addison street.

The marriage of Miss Bernadette Lavin, daughter of Mrs. Edward T. Lavin, to Thomas J. Griffin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Griffin of Gary, Ind., took place on July 17 at St. Ignatius church. The ceremony was followed by a breakfast and reception at the Sovereign hotel. Mr. Griffin and his bride are motoring in Canada.

Mrs. John Keston Deimling is the former Miss Maida Bartholomew, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Bartholomew of Oak Park. She and her husband were graduated in 1928 from the University of Illinos.

When Chicago Was Young

that other one about "justifiable domicide?" He was referring to the razing of old homes to make way for business. We have a great deal of "justifiable domicide" here in Chicago, as business presses on into our residence quarters.

Will has been on a business trip to Jacksonville, Ill., one of our old Illinois towns, and met such an interesting man—Dr. Greene Vardiman Black. He was in town today and Will brought him home for dinner, and we both sat spellbound while he talked. He is one of the most eminent scientists in the country, though a comparatively young man. He studied medicine, but because he felt that the teeth had an important relation to health and because he is a natural mechanic, he has taken up dentistry.

Dr. W. W. Allport, our own dentist, tells me Dr. Black's investigations are bound to revolutionize dentistry. But we weren't talking about teeth when we were so spellbound, of course. Dr. Black is a great lover of nature and he was telling us of some of his experiences in the woods. Nature is almost a religion with him. He studies trees and geologic formations when he goes on his vacations, and he tells of these discoveries in a most interesting way. We feel we have made a wonderful friend and hope he may be induced to come to Chicago—a natural thing for a scientific man. But he is so modest, his friends say he prefers to stay in his quiet corner, even though he is working out problems which will be of the greatest benefit to the whole world.

Of course, we are still feeling depressed by the panic, but things will work out in time. There is a great deal of unemployment, and that makes one anxious. I noticed an editorial in the paper today saying that each day's report from the workshops of the great manufacturing centers of the east is worse than the preceding one. Great foundries and rolling mills are shutting down. There must be something wrong when workmen are idle who want to work. Our social system is defective when boundless resources and starvation stand face to face, as in our beloved country. I wish some genius would work out a solution to the problem.

O, before I close, I want to mention Thomas Bailey Aldrich's new book called "Marjorie Daw and Other Stories." It is delightful. There are nine of these stories, and all so clever. They are whimsical and quite novel—not at all the conventional ending. I just had to laugh at finding myself so unprepared for the way "Marjorie Daw" turned out. If you haven't read it, I won't spoil it by telling you what that ending is.

With love,
Your old friend,
MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Foot Notes.

Goldsmith Maid was quite as much in the public eye in 1873 as Blue Larkspur or Gallant Fox today, while no jockey ever had so much attention as Budd Doble. To have Oliver Wendell Holmes write a couplet about you were fame, indeed.

N. B.—As "Julia Boyd" will probably not complete the couplet about Budd Doble, will some kind reader of this column send it in?

Dr. Greene Vardiman Black, who dined with Will and Martha in 1873, became dean of Northwestern university Dental school in 1897 and it is not too much to say that he was the most beloved instructor that school ever had. His investigations in bacteriology are important. He would never commercialize his work, and his high ideals have had much to do in setting a standard for the profession which he served. A statue of Dr. Black was placed in Lincoln park near Clark street, this being a memorial from members of the profession which he completely revolutionized.

His children living in Chicago are Dr. Arthur D. Black, dean of Northwestern University Dental school, who has carried on the work his father began, and Miss Clara Black of Evanston.

Mrs. Henrietta G. Frank, who played with Carl Wolfsohn at the Greenebaum musical in 1873, was a well known and beloved member of Chicago's musical circle.

Americans Take Part in Pageant to Aid Charity

LONDON.—[Special.]—Americans, and Chicagoans in particular, have been much in the British social limelight, lately. When a brilliant pageant of living posters was presented at the Park Lane hotel in aid of one of the London hospitals, Mrs. Claude Leigh, who was Miss Myrtle Johnson, was one of the loveliest participants.

The dresses were designed by Cecil Beaton, Oliver Messel and Michael Weight and the pageant was produced by Olga Lynn. Gold and silver and the richest colorings of the orient were employed in the series of tableaux in which the wares of nationally advertised goods were portrayed by society leaders.

Lady Diana Cooper organized the ball and took the part of the central figure of charity. In a snow white coif and the flowing robes of a nun, with tiny children surrounding her, the "captains" of the various groups brought offerings to lay at her feet.

Lady Oxford and Asquith, in a striking paneled gown of steel gray, was a knife—each panel of her gown being a rounded blade.

Mrs. Claude Leigh, tall, slender and blonde, represented the figure of ivory. Her gown was choicest satin and had a long train which emphasized the grace with which she walked.

BRIDE

MRS. JOHN MAHONEY.

Mrs. John Mahoney was, before her recent marriage, Miss Colletta Conley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Conley of 8220 South Paulina street.

Lady Lavery, another Chicagoan, headed the tableau of jewels. Her beauty was well set off by the wonderful copper and gold draperies she wore. Mrs. Dudley Ward represented Sapphire and the Baroness Ravensdale [daughter of Mary Leiter of Chicago] represented Emerald. It sometimes seems that when London searches for beautiful and striking women for such functions, the Anglo-Americans from Chicago more than hold their own!

In the Feminine Realm

Fashionable society weddings in the United States now cost from $50,000 to $150,000 and up.

An airplane ride is the best way to put children to sleep, according to Mrs. George Hutchinson, wife of an aviator in Richmond, Va.

Lyon & Healy Warehouse Clearance

We thought we would have plenty of space when we built our new warehouse at Lake-st. and Ogden-av. But our calculations fell short in April and May, which were two of the greatest months in our history. More than 250 pianos accumulated, taken in exchange from Chicago apartments, studios and homes and now we've simply got to make room, by the most drastic measures, for new Fall merchandise.

These instruments are bargains that are rarely if ever to be found. They will make excellent children's practice pianos and are equally suitable for schools, churches, lodges, hotels, ballrooms, summer homes and cottages. The ridiculously low prices give no indication of their value. Come while the selection is most complete.

One Million Dollars Per Year in Commissions for Cook County

The replacement business alone for the specialty we are selling will pay our salesmen commissions of one million dollars per year in Cook County. This specialty has been sold for two years—long enough to get the "bugs" out. We just started a national campaign in May. We are already operating in 20 states. Successful state managers, who represent us in various territories, should earn from $25,000 to $50,000 per year and up.

Two weeks ago we started an organization in Chicago. This is our home office. We are making Cook County the training ground. We are developing men—proving men here—to fill positions as sales executives in other territories. We have more than twenty-five sales executive positions open right now that should pay the men who can handle them successfully $25,000 per year or more.

Under ordinary conditions the specialty we are selling pays for itself five or six times every year. In some cases it pays for itself in a week. An order taker should make two sales a day of this specialty. This will make him double the ordinary salesman's income. A real high caliber salesman who can learn the business thoroughly and who will demonstrate his ability to close big orders, has an unlimited opportunity for making money as a salesman. Many single sales will pay a regular salesman, not a sales executive, commissions of $500 to $2,500 each. We require every new man, however, to make small sales until he has learned the business.

We put on a bona fide test here in Chicago every day except Saturday, proving the wonderful merits of our specialty. We furnish one of the most powerful sales kits ever utilized containing scores of letters from many leading firms, individuals and authorities, both locally and from all over the United States. We have a complete sales presentation which covers only a few pages but which enables any man who will use it as given to make a sale an hour. This sales presentation also contains answers which will overcome every objection encountered in selling this specialty.

As soon as we reach a certain sales quota in Chicago, which we should reach in the near future, we plan to run 12 full page weekly newspaper advertisements. We are confident this will secure a large volume of business—more than enough to justify an extensive national advertising campaign with full page advertisements in leading national publications.

Men, we have a real deal here! We know how to sell it! It is going over big! If you are a live wire and a worker, you are invited to join this organization now—TODAY—and take advantage of the genuine opportunity of a life time. Call, write or wire
